Mr. John Lawson will pay a flying visit to Paris to-morrow and play three of his works. All scenery will be carried, and band and staff will also travel with the special company in support of Mr. Lawson. He will appear on Monday in his Zolaesque rôle of Faber, in A Bride for a Living.

The United County Theatres, Ltd., desire us to state that Mr. David G. Bliss is "not the managing-director of the company, nor the principal shareholder, and that he no longer has any part in the management and conduct of the business and affairs of the company."

Mr. Alfred Butt was successful early last year in securing the services of Mlle. Anna Pavlova when she was appearing at the Châtelet with the production of the first Russian ballet in Paris, and she will come to the Palace on Monday evening. She occupies the important position of prima ballerina assoluta of the Imperial Opera House, St. Petersburg. Last season she specially journeyed to London to give a private performance before their Majesties the King and Queen.

Mlle. Pavlova will be accompanied by M. Mordkine, a wonderful male dancer. In addition to his valuable assistance, Mlle. Pavlova will be supported in her concerted numbers by Mlle. Eduardova, Mlle. Korpowa, Mlle. Levionowa, Mlle. Polizkaia, and Mlle. Makazowa. The music of the concerted numbers will be selected from the works of Chopin, Tschaikowsky, Saint-Saëns, Rubinstein, and Glasoonov. The music of the several pas de deux danced by Mlle. Pavlova and M. Mordkine will be taken from various ballets.

Mr. Harry Tate will preside at the smoker organised by the Music Hall and Theatrical Football League at the Horseshoe Hotel, Tottenham Court-road, on Sunday evening, at 8 p.m., when the famous burlesquer of motoring will present the challenge cup given by him to the victors in the matches—the Tivoli. To the members of the team will also be given a silver medal by Mr. Joseph Wilson, who takes a great interest in the staff's athletics. Mr. Phil Ray will present medals to the runners-up—the Edmonton Empire.

George Egbert has removed to Piccadilly-mansions, 17, Shaftesbury-avenue, where he will conduct the booking for the South Wales Enterprises. Suitable acts can have six weeks.

Mr. Neil Kenyon makes his first appearance in musical comedy at the Apollo Theatre on Saturday next in The Islander, and by so doing reverses the usual progress. In December, 1878, the late Jenny Hill, before the days of musical comedy, appeared at the Gaiety in the title-rôle of Jack the Giant Killer, in which Connie Gilchrist, formerly on the music hall stage, and now the Countess of Orkney, played columbine. The Gaiety later secured Lottie Collins, Millie Hylton, Cissie Loftus, Charlie Ross, and others, and Dan Leno made a short stay in burlesque at the Old Strand Theatre.

Mr. Charles Hannan's one-act version of his successful three-act farcical comedy The Electric Man has been secured for immediate publication by Messrs. Samuel French, Ltd. It may be recalled that in its condensed one-act form Mr. Harry Nicholls made his first appearance on the music hall stage as the Electric Man about a year ago at the Chelsea Palace and Metropolitan Halls, repeating the success of his performances of the same part in the longer play during its run at the Royalty and Shaftesbury Theatres.

"Liane," a playlet by Walter Macnamara, will be presented by Alan H. Gardner's company at the Tivoli, with Miss Andrée Corday in the name-part. This artist was the original representative of Suzette, in The French Maid, in which musical comedy it will be remembered Mr. Joe Wilson, now the manager of the Tivoli, made the hit of his life as Jack Brown, the susceptible tar. Those supporting Miss Corday will include Miss May Hallom, and Messrs. H. Hardy, Jackson, and Charles D. Wright. Mr. Macnamara is writing something new in the shape of a revue for the West End.

Adeline Genee is scoring a success in The Silver Star, a piece specially designed for her. Towards the close of the first act she appears with the revelation of a huge Christmas tree, in the branches of which she is enthroned as the Spirit of Yuletide. She comes down from her niche and dances, first as a queen of the realm of snow crystals, then as a military damsel to march-time, then as a sailor lad to the merry horn-pipe.

A drama, in one act, written by Mr. Alfred Wilson Barrett, son of the late Mr. Wilson Barrett, entitled The Last Moment, in which Mr. Derwent Hall Caine, son of the novelist, will play the principal part, will be produced next Monday at the Crouch End Hippodrome. In 1888 Wilson Barrett and Hall Caine, the fathers of these two young men, collaborated in Ben-My-Chree at the Princess'.

A great house gave on Monday last at the New Cross Empire a right royal welcome to Mr. R. G. Knowles. The genial entertainer was in fine fettle and voice, and both in Charles Wilmott and Hermann E. Darewski's clever and tuneful "L.S.D." and in George Arthur and C. W. Murphy's "Costumes, Gowns, and Frocks," was received with spontaneous and enthusiastic applause, and the audience clamoured for more. Messrs. Francis and Day are the publishers of these songs.

Very large and fashionable audiences are to be seen at the London Hippodrome, where Mme. Réjane seems to be drawing all London. It may interest some artists, who find difficulty in showing their ability, that Mr. Herbert Raymond has arranged for special trial turns to be given at the Wednesday matinées at the Opera House next to, and in connection with, the Regent Theatre, Salford.

The Monckton and Mr. Geo. Bernard desire to thank the artists from the Empire and Pavilion, Newcastle, Borough Theatre, Wallsend, and the Merry Widow company, who so promptly assisted them last Saturday, when they lost everything in the disastrous fire at North Shields.

The Palace Theatre, Aberdeen, will be closed for alterations and repairs from after Saturday, June 18, until Saturday, July 16 next. Artists having dates during the closed period will kindly take note that the same are hereby cancelled, and that they are free to consider them as vacant dates.

The Mayor and Burgesses of Douglas, Isle of Man, are prepared to receive tenders for sites on Douglas Head. All lettings will be subject to the conditions of tenancy fixed by the Corporation, and the terms and conditions may be had on application to Mr. A. Robertson, Town Clerk, Town Hall, Douglas.

The Theatre Royal, Ilkeston, has been leased to Mr. Albert Leigh for a lengthy period, and for a short time is being run on the twice-nightly system with a variety programme. After Whitsuntide the theatre will close to be thoroughly overhauled, redecorated, and refurnished, and will open again on August Bank Holiday.

Mr. Auguste A. Peuleve, the manager of the Theatre Royal, Bury St. Edmunds, is leaving to take up the management at the "Spanish City," Whitley Bay. Mr. Peuleve has done much for the house during his four years' work, and local playgoers, while rejoicing at his promotion, will lose his services with much regret.

At a late hour on Friday evening last, the 8th inst., the Borough Theatre, North Shields, which was owned by the late Mr. George Black, and has for some time past been successfully run with pictures and a vaudeville entertainment, was totally destroyed by fire.

Constructed of wood and corrugated iron, the building was opened some ten or twelve years ago by the late Mr. Henry Alvo, as a circus, and was afterwards transformed into a theatre by Mr. Arthur Jefferson. The damage is estimated at several thousands of pounds, and, if not entirely is, we understand, partly covered by insurance, but we regret to learn that the artists under engagement lost several articles of great value.

"Great Raymond biggest hit of any show ever in Ipswich. Packed houses. Seat sale for balance of week enormous. Breaking all records." This telegram, which reached us on Tuesday, is not from Raymond himself. No, gentle reader; it comes from Mr. E. H. Bostock, proprietor and manager of the Ipswich Hippodrome, who is showing the inhabitants of the Suffolk metropolis what a Northern caterer can do in the way of hustling.

At the Liverpool Olympia trial matinée on Thursday afternoon, a playlet, entitled A Sister's Love, by Mr. Percy Fullerton and Mrs. Haslingden Russell, won a favourable reception. The cast comprised Mr. Percy Bourchier (Tom Richards), Miss Daisy Irvine (Sarah Richards), and Mr. W. Felton (Herr Von Heim). The work was first produced at the Royal Victoria Hall on Feb. 15, under the title The Three-Light Fitting, when The Era, in its notice, suggested an alteration in the name.

A very pleasant function was carried out in the saloon of the Ealing Hippodrome on Monday evening. The occasion was the second anniversary of Mr. J. Molloy's management. In appreciation of his bonhomie and tact, a few friends had foregathered to present him with a handsome silver and crystal epergne, a gift that was made doubly welcome by the hearty words of good-fellowship with which Mr. Herbert Platt, who represented the donors, accompanied it.

At a meeting of the Penzance Town Council held on Wednesday, twenty-three tenders were received for the exclusive right of providing al-fresco entertainments in the Alexandra Grounds, opposite the promenade, during the coming season. The Council accepted the tender of Miss Lily Pritchard for her "Queer Qakers" Concert Party. In the event of Miss Pritchard desiring to commence her entertainments earlier than midsummer or to continue them after Michaelmas, the Council decided that the rent should be reduced.

To commemorate the sixth year of the opening of the Pavilion Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, a complimentary testimonial performance will be given to Mr. Will H. Boardman, the popular manager, on Wednesday afternoon, the 27th. The arrangements are in the hands of a committee of prominent local gentlemen, and as the principal artists from the leading Northern theatres have proffered their services for the matinée, everything points to a huge success. It may not be generally known that Mr. Boardman has been offered the position of general-manager of Thomas Barrasford, Ltd., but has not yet declared his decision in the matter.

There has been quite an epidemic of burglaries in Birmingham recently, and last week-end thieves visited the residence of Mr. T. H. Middleton, the manager of the Aston Hippodrome, at 39, Sir John's-road, Selly Park. He left the house securely locked up early in the evening, and upon his return found that the front door had been forced and the house ransacked. A desk had been broken open and the contents strewn about the floor, and ornaments had been overturned and broken. Singularly enough, however, nothing had been taken away, and sums of money left upon the mantelpiece and in the letter-box appeared to have been overlooked.

A quantity of cigars had been removed from the pantry and dropped near the front door, giving rise to the supposition that the thieves were disturbed in their work. Evidently they were under the impression that there was a big sum of money in the house, and they probably hoped to make a good haul from the theatre takings; but in this they were disappointed. The same evening the residence of a next-door neighbour was broken into and a quantity of jewellery and war medals were taken.

One of the most successful concerts held in the premises of the Keighley Cycling Club, recently renovated, was provided by Mr. T. Barrasford, the genial and popular managing-director of the Hippodrome in the town. The concert was entirely carried through by the variety artists from that place of amusement, and Mr. Barrasford himself occupied the chair. The Crisps, who were fulfilling a return engagement after an absence of one week only, scored a tremendous success in their various terpsichorean efforts; Harry Taylor's songs were well received; the Dunvilles lent capital aid, as also did Harley and Melton, Mamie Gannon, Alf. Lindsay, and Sydney Brandon. Hearty votes of thanks to chairman and artists concluded a most enjoyable evening.

Mrs. Wal Pink's illness is causing some anxiety to her friends. During her recent visit to the States she contracted a bad attack of croup, from which she had not recovered on her return to England. She is now having every possible care and attention in a nursing home, and will not be able to fulfil her immediate engagements.

A special general meeting of the Variety Artists' Federation will be held at the Bedford Head Hotel on Friday, May 6, at 12 noon, to rescind part of Rule 21. Any member wishing to propose other amendments to this rule must send them in to the Executive Committee not later than 12 noon on Tuesday, April 26.

Some interesting play was witnessed at the Vaudeville Club on Thursday, April 7, in the snooker pool match between six players of the Playgoers and Vaudeville Clubs. Each side won three games, but the result being determined by the aggregate points scored, the Vaudevillains proved victors by the handsome margin of 73.

Mr. Bay Russell, who is so well known in the musical comedy world, having played important parts for years, is now on the music halls with Lottie Bellman, at present starring at the Tivoli, where the turn has proved a huge success. Mr. Russell has set a new fashion in the way of a dove-grey dress suit.

At the Euston on Monday, for one night only, there will be two special performances of a sketch, The Will of Allah, a romance of the Sahara, from the pen of Mr. Lewis T. Dalrymple, with music by Mr. J. Parry-Cole, composer of several operas. The plot turns on the jealousy caused by the taking of a cinematograph picture of a Franco-Arabian dance, the chief feature of the production.

It is with much regret that we have to record the death of Mrs. Edwin Volta, the wife of Mr. Edwin Volta, originally a member of the celebrated Hanlon-Voltas, who, since his retirement from the stage, has, with his twin brother Taff, been popular in agency circles.

The deceased lady, who had been suffering for some time from an internal complaint, passed away at her residence, 23, Wynne-road, Brixton, on Friday, the 8th inst. Her maiden name was Muller, and she first married Edward Garcia, well-known as the Lancashire caterer, who was at one time or other proprietor of the Gaiety and then the Folly, Manchester, and lessee of the Queen's Theatre, Manchester. The Folly Music Hall had a big reputation as a provincial hall in the early 'eighties. The late Mr. Garcia's name was associated with the company running the Canterbury in 1881, before the hall over the bridge was acquired by Messrs. Crowder and Payne. The late Edward Garcia died in January, 1893.

The interment took place on Wednesday, in Nunhead Cemetery. Those immediately following as mourners included the husband, Edwin Volta, Mr. and Mrs. Taff Volta and daughter, Miss Vivien Chadwick, Mrs. Wilson (Edie). Mr. and Mrs. Will Oliver were at the graveside with many private friends. The deceased lady was buried according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church.

Wreaths were sent from the husband, Mr. E. R. Sharpe (Ted Volta), Mr. and Mrs. R. Sharpe (Taff Volta) (brother- and sister-in-law), Edie and Dorothy Sharpe (nieces), "Vivien" to Ma, Mr. and Mrs. G. Bauer, Mr. and Mrs. Anger, Mr. and Mrs. Will Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. T. Aldrich, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce, Mr. J. Smith, and Mrs. Farrell, "A Friend," and Mrs. R. E. Wilson.

Terrier Griff offers a gold medal for the best suggestion as to how to increase the attendance of the members of the Terriers' Association at the Sunday meetings. All suggestions should be forwarded to the secretary, Mr. Arthur Were, 69, Kennington-road, S.E., as soon as possible. The river outing will be held upon Sunday, June 26. The steam launch La Burgoine has been engaged.

Miss Ella Shields deputised last week at the Metropolitan for Miss Marie Lloyd, and the announcement of her name was the signal for a great reception. She rendered two new songs, "If you see Harry" and "I don't admire the girl in white." Both songs are from the pen of William Hargreaves, the first being published by Von Tilzer and Co., and the soldier number by Messrs. Feldman and Co.

Mr. Stephen Adeson produced at the Empress, Brixton, three weeks ago a humorous duologue, The Housebreaker, which, cleverly and drolly presented as it is by this capital comedian, should have a successful future. Mr. Adeson belongs to a famous stage family, and played Page for six consecutive seasons in Mr. R. Courteidge's pantomime Cinderella, and last year played one of the principal parts in The Queen of Hearts pantomime. For some time Mr. Adeson was with Tom Craven in that screaming farce The Lady in Red.

Miss Lottie Lennox met with a serious motor accident last Saturday night, which resulted in her sustaining a severe cut across the forehead and her legs being badly bruised. She had been deputising during part of the week for Miss Marie Lloyd at the Empress, Brixton. We are pleased to say that she is recovering rapidly, and desires to convey her sincere thanks through The Era to the numerous friends and brother and sister artists who have wired or written to her. The inquiries numbered between two and three hundred.

At the Council meeting of the Actors' Association on Tuesday, with reference to a letter from the Variety Artists' Federation, the Secretary was directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. W. H. Clemart's letter, and to say that the Council hope that the V.A.F. would use every endeavour to influence their members to curtail the prevalence of free trial shows as the Council of the Association itself was doing. With reference to a letter from Mr. Ernest Bliss, it was resolved to send copies of the correspondence to the Secretary of the V.A.F., drawing their attention to the case mentioned.

The monthly meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund was held at the Crown Hotel, Charing Cross-road, on Wednesday afternoon, when there were present Messrs. Tom Carney (in the chair) Pat Carey (treasurer), A. Drew, T. B. Brydge, S. White, and R. T. Baines (secretary). The balance-sheet for the year 1909 was submitted and approved. It showed a slight increase as compared with that of the previous year. Mr. Carey remarked that, with regard to its financial position, the Music Hall Sick Fund was the soundest of all the societies connected with the profession, and it was astonishing that the membership was not greater.

Arthur Royce, the popular entertainer at the piano, was married at the Registry Office, at Brixton, on Saturday, April 9, to Violet Edwina Boyde (daughter of the late Edwin Boyde and granddaughter of Jack Rowley). Arthur Royce has just finished playing the Syndicate halls, and his wife, a talented young artist, who has inherited much of her father's ability, will shortly be seen working the halls as a single turn, booked in conjunction with her husband. She is the winner of a scholarship at the George Edwardes School of Acting. Mr. and Mrs. Royce leave town next week for five months, returning in November to play the Syndicate halls, &c.

Miss Maude May Murray, who made her first appearance at the Empire, York, on Monday last, scored an immense success, her charming and graceful dancing, together with her weird and marvellous effects, quite taking the audience by storm.

The Easter business this year at Herne Bay has beaten all records, and Mr. Arthur J. Barclay, in his catering, is completely justifying the confidence reposed in him by the urban authority at that favourite seaside resort. This week Miss Nannie Goldman's company is doing good business with Not Before the Missus.

Mr. Bransby Williams's American tour came to an abrupt close, owing to disagreement in connection with certain methods, and Mr. Williams has been resting at his seaside residence at Selsey, Sussex. When he again commences he will be reviving many characters and imitations that he did years ago.

Mr. W. R. Dunkley has been accepted as a candidate for membership of the Terriers' Association.

The Marine Gardens, Portobello, Edinburgh, will open for the season on the 30th inst. Among other novelties there will be a Somali Native Village, and during the first week the band of H.M. Royal Horse Guards will occupy the bandstand. Wilson James's concert party "The Enterpeans" will appear in the concert hall.

Mr. Jack Fortescue and his company have been scoring a success all along the line in the dramatic playlet The Gambler's Wife, by Gordon Holmes, which is topping the bill this week at the Theatre Royal, Ilkeston. Mr. Fortescue is seen in the picturesque part of Culver Pierce, and the heroine is played by Miss May Fortescue.

Miss Grace Lester, whose new sketch A Ruined Life, has been played with much success at the Palace, Bow, during the past week, will present the playlet at the Surrey Theatre on Monday, when she will be supported by a first-class company, including Mr. Hugh Montgomery. The pathetic little story has been specially well received by East-end audiences.

We are informed by his widow of the death of Gus Elliott, of the Elliott Troupe (late Le Diall), comic acrobatic juggler, who met his death by drowning at Hong Kong on Feb. 28. The young widow, with her little girl aged five, left Hong Kong on Feb. 23, arriving in London on March 30, and did not know of her husband's death until last Saturday (April 9).

It appears that Mr. Elliott, in getting out of a small boat on Feb. 28, slipped and fell into the water. No effort apparently was made to save him, and his body was not recovered until March 13. He was only thirty years of age, and leaves his widow in very straitened circumstances.

The "giddy goat" and "acting the goat" are phrases that are certainly not applicable to the performance of a troupe of miniature Tibet mountain deergoats, guided by Miss Ronna Shanara, at the Battersea Palace this week. They seem to anticipate their trainer's wishes, and go through their performance freely and with pleasure.

Amongst a variety of tricks may be noticed the ascension on a small globe up a long inclined plank; the poising with all four feet on the stem-end of an inverted wine-glass; and the leaping over a high obstacle à la the springbok. The little clown is a droll quadruped. The turn is well staged and handsomely costumed, and should appeal to those in search of a novel speciality.

Mrs. John Lawson will commence a tour with her three Grand Guignol playlets on Monday, April 25. Interludes will be by Mme. Florence Burns, the well-known contralto; Mr. Robert Foster-Hine, baritone; and Miss Mildred Gibbs, soprano. The front of the "house" will be in charge of Mr. Harry Miller, late of the Holborn Empire, Ilford Hippodrome, &c., whilst Mr. Henri Leon, late director-in-chief of amusement for the Sultan of Turkey, will be business-manager.

At a special meeting of the Sheerness Urban District Council, held on Tuesday night, an application for a renewal of the stage play licence of the Hippodrome was made by Mr. Pareezer, of the Lowestoft Marina, and the New Royal Theatre, King's Lynn, who produced references from residents at King's Lynn, among them being one from the Vicar, who wrote in eulogistic terms of the high tone pervading the entertainments under Mr. Pareezer's management. The application was for the licence on the same terms as hitherto.

Mr. Harris said the late management of the Hippodrome promised two years ago to provide a fire screen, and he thought they should have an assurance that one should be provided. It was arranged that the curtain should be fitted within six months. It was agreed that the licence should be granted on the same terms as before.

Mr. Walter Stockwell, so well-known in the profession, and now proprietor of Thompson's Hotel, Bridge-street, Bristol, wishes to thank the ladies and gentlemen who have already answered his appeal re Harry Jennings, comedian and dancer, now an invalid, who will not be able to do any more hard work.

Having known him for many years as a performer and an honourable man, Mr. Stockwell is getting up a concert for him on April 25 at Bristol, and would take it as a great kindness if any brother or sister artist would subscribe any small donation towards obtaining a little business for H. J. and family. For this very deserving case Mr. Stockwell acknowledges the following amounts:—G. H. Elliott, 5s.; Walter Stockwell, 5s. F. W., 2s.; T. W., 2s.; Gus Elen, 1s.; E. W., 1s.; Sal Grogan, 1s. Donations should be sent to Walter Stockwell, treasurer, at the above address.

An exceedingly clever musical quartette appeared on trial at the Glasgow Empire's matinée this week. The turn has been arranged as a sketch, entitled The Fourth Man, and the scenario, also the selection and arrangement of the music, &c., are the work of Mr. Harry Henderson, Mus.Bac., conductor at the Grand, Glasgow. The four members of the party are clever vocalists, the comedy business is exceedingly smart and is not allowed to interfere with the vocal items, and excellent use is made of a wheezy old barrel-organ in the humour of the sketch. The quartette should prove a welcome addition to any variety programme.

The Installation meeting of the Dalhousie Lodge, No. 860, was held on Thursday last at the Inns of Court Hotel, Holborn, W. M. Bro. Douglas White, so well-known in the variety world, vacated the position of Worshipful Master and installed his successor, W. Bro. H. M. Lonergan into the chair. Our friend Bro. White performed the interesting ceremony with much impressiveness and clearness of diction, and was warmly congratulated afterwards by the brethren of the lodge. He had hoped to have initiated his son Douglas into the rites and ceremonies of Freemasonry, but this had to be postponed owing to an emergency call to his sailor duties. At the banquet which followed the lodge there were a number of guests, including W. Bro. Clarke, Bro A. Venner, and Bro. F. Stephens ("C. Douglas Stuart") of the Chiswick Lodge, No. 2,012.

A special matinée performance will be given at the Empire, Camberwell, on Thursday, May 5, on behalf of the sufferers through the recent tragedy which occurred at that house.

Mr. James Stewart, the original tramp at the piano, has been booked by Mr. Oswald Stoll to appear at the London Hippodrome for two weeks, commencing May 9 This is in addition to the tours he is already booked for with Moss' Empires, Ltd. He has not been deputising this week at Crouch End Hippodrome.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follow: Alhambra, 1⅞; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅞; Empire (10s. paid), 1⅛; London Pavilion (5), 3⅛; London Pavilion Pref (5), 5; Metropolitan, ⅜; Moss' Empires (5), 4⅛; Oxford (5), 6⅞; Palace Theatre (9s. paid), 21-32; Tivoli, New (5), 6⅛.

Mr. J. E. Wimperis writes:—"While thanking you for your paragraph in The Era re "Sophie" and the songs she is featuring at the London Coliseum this week, may I point out that the author is not, as stated by you, Arthur Wimperis, but myself." Mr. J. E. Wimperis is the cousin of Arthur of that ilk.

At the Central Criminal Court, before Judge Rentoul, two men, named Harry Ross, dealer, and William Thompson, fitter, were severally found guilty of being concerned together in breaking and entering the residence of Mr. George D'Albert, and stealing therein three diamond rings and other jewellery, worth £150 Thompson was ordered four years' penal servitude and Ross three years.

The 654th meeting of the executive committee of the M.H.A.R.A. was held at the offices on Wednesday, when Mr. Fred Herbert (in the chair) was supported by Alf. Herald, Harry Herald, J. Rich, Charles Coborn, Harry Blake, Arthur Rigby, J. H. Milburn, Tom J. Morton, T. C. Callaghan, Harold Finden, John Alexander, Jeff Vendome, Lieut. Albini, H. Cee Mee, Billy Brown, and Harry Bancroft. A letter was read from the V.A.F., intimating that that society did not propose to continue the use of the branch office at Glasgow on the expiration of the present lease.

The general question of the branch offices was discussed, the general opinion being in favour of the Association continuing to use agents in Manchester, Liverpool, and Glasgow. On the motion of Mr. Blake, seconded by Mr. Finden, Mr. Callaghan was deputed to visit Glasgow, and secure suitable premises. Mr. Coborn gave notice to propound a scheme at the next meeting regarding the branch offices.

The committee sanctioned an increase of 10s. per week in the secretary's remuneration, and Mr. Douglas Stuart expressed his thanks. The weekly financial statement showed forty new members and a cash total of £55 17s. The monthly statement gave the following amounts:—Reserve account, £545 17s. 3d.; deposit account, £167 7s. 4d.; current account, £272 12s. 1d.; petty cash, £45—total, £1,030 16s. 8d. From October last to March 31 994 new members were enrolled, and there were 2,684 renewals.

Mr. Albert Wyndham, the only producer of Shakespeare in the halls, has been evoking enthusiasm at the Canterbury in his sketch, Prince Arthur; or, The Days of King John. In the course of his career Mr. Wyndham has given no fewer than five impersonations of the Bard's great characters in one week with a company supporting him. In the future, with extended licensing facilities, we may see at the halls "birthday" representations of the plays by the inspired genius of Stratford-on-Avon, but it must be remembered that Mr. Albert Wyndham has played the part of pioneer. He, in fact, has done the spade work.

A charming little song-scena, entitled A Romany's Wooing, makes its first bow to the public at the Camberwell Empire this week. Unfortunately it is all too short. The onlookers would enjoy it more if it were twice as long. Still, the staging is charmingly artistic, and the effects are beautifully arranged. There is no plot. Just the ordinary life of a gipsy is pictured; but the two artists who represent the dramatis personæ are endowed with fine voices, which blend harmoniously. Mlle. Lilian gives us the first song, "In all sincerity," and her deep, pure contralto voice swells almost like a distant organ. The second vocal effort is a duet, "The secret of my heart," in which Mr. Arthur Wade joins Mlle. Lilian, with fine effect. The final number also is a duet, "My love is like a raging storm," in which we hear the vocalists' best work. The scena is a great success.

On behalf of the Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May, secretary, begs most gratefully to thank the following: Mr. G. H. Elliot, donation, one guinea (per Miss Irene Rose); Mrs. Joe Elvin (collecting box), £2 4s. 9d.; Miss India Smythson (result of Hoop-La), Hippodrome, Norwich, 5s.; Miss Madoline Rees (donation), 2s. 6d.; Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer, 5s.; A Friend, 1s.; Mr. W. Stanley, 6d.; Mr. Selbonain, 1s.; Mr. Frame, 1s. (per Miss Maude Mortimer); Mr. Geo. W. Morton, 2s. 6d. (collection); Miss Flo Banks, parcel of clothing. Funds, boots, and clothing are urgently needed. Will anyone make an offer for the handsome model toy butcher's shop, fitted with joints, given by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vento? Can be seen any day at the Guild Rooms. Friends of the charity are heartily welcome to tea and reception held every Wednesday, 4 to 5 o'clock.

Benjamin Woodger, secretary of the Music Hall Home, desires, on behalf of the committee, to thank the following: Jack Woolf, of Wonderland, £2 2s.; Percy Ford, Empire, Camberwell, 5s. 3d.; George Manners, Empire Theatre, Liverpool, £1 0s. 4d.; and Papa Brown for parcel of men's very useful clothes.

Those who still have their collecting-cards for The Era Appeal are asked kindly to send them in to the hon. treasurer, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, The Era, Tavistock-street, Strand. The collection this year has beaten the record, showing the interest taken in the Music Hall Home and the satisfaction given to subscribers. There are over 200 more cards to be returned, and, no matter how small the amount collected may be, it will help to swell the total. Gus Elen's handsome offer of placing one shilling upon every card sent in should be an encouragement to all to help the Home along. The next committee meeting will be held on April 21, at the Empire, Camberwell, at noon.

Mr. Leslie Faber has been confiding to an interviewer his opinions on the music-hall sketch. He emphatically declares that one of the chief essentials of a sketch is a strong element of humour. "Since my wife and I have been appearing in vaudeville, I have had numbers of one-act plays submitted to me, and only in a very small proportion of them has there been the faintest trace of comedy. Everybody seems to be aiming at serious work, for which there is really very little demand. Recently I read a sketch to a prominent music-hall manager, who admitted it was the most powerful thing he had ever listened to. 'But,' he added, 'it would never do for us. Were it a comedy as skilfully constructed and written, I would book it for two years. Laughter is what is wanted at the variety houses. Gloom can be got for nothing.'" How about Humanity, which has been running for fifteen years on the variety stage? This is scarcely a comedy sketch.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Reports from all parts of these islands arrive daily at Messrs. Francis and Day's giving glowing accounts of the success of what may be aptly termed the spring crop for 1910 of budding songs that will flower throughout the summer and autumn, and which will be yet in their full glory even when winter is with us. Like the splendid British body known as the Agricultural and Horticultural Association, which has done so much for flower gardening, and whose motto is "One and All," the great music-publishing house of Francis and Day continues to be the acknowledged home of experts in fostering the growth of the flowers of popular song, as it has been for decades, and the news of continued success is always gratifying, even if expected, and is ever welcome.

Messrs. Fred J. Barnes and Robert P. Weston's great new song "Tahiti" promises to be, in the immediate future, to them as profitable as a Para forest. With them is associated Maurice Scott, and the same trio's "I've got rings on my fingers" will be easily paralleled, or beaten, it is surmised, when Mr. Fred Elton produces the "Tahiti" number in town shortly, judging by the encomiums passed upon it by all at its rehearsal, even the barbaric ad lib., with its quaint cry of "Rubber boom! Rubber boom!" being voted a scream. Needless to say, Messrs. Francis and Day have secured the song for immediate production.

Miss Ada Reeve has secured the sole rights for theatres and music halls of Edgar Bateman and Henry F. Greenfield's "And just then he fell out of bed!" a humorous song, which gives an artist unparalleled scope for strong contrasts in its six "conversational" choruses. It details what happened, in "five beautiful dreams and one nightmare," and whilst sleeping on a terrible boarding-house bed, to various people. Messrs. Francis and Day are the publishers.

Messrs. Francis and Day have secured Miss Helen Trix's new song, "Sam," by F. W. Leigh and Henry E. Pether. It was a great success on its initial production, and the success is increasing as this fine artist gets more and more used to a song fully in keeping with the reputations of its author and composer.

Miss Gladys Huxley's two latest songs have been secured by Mr. David Day's firm for inclusion among immediately forthcoming novelties. They are "Good-bye, everybody's girlie!" by Percy Edgar, Thomas Walters, and A. J. Lawrance, and "Won't you come to Colombo with me?" by the new triumvirate, F. W. Carter, Will Haines, and Donovan Meher.

Mr. Frank Harwood has published a most charming song with Messrs. Francis and Day, under the title of "I love you the best of all," a tender love-song, written in graceful style, and wedded to a melody the charm of which makes its repetition a thing to be desired. It is written and composed by Madgie Harwood.

The new song, "Will you sing this glee with me?" is a characteristic number which reflects much credit on the clever pens from which it emanates. Messrs, Francis and Day's well-known imprint will give a distinctive tone and finish to the title-page, which will also embody the legend, 'Written and composed by Worton David and George Arthurs. Sung by Wilkie Bard."

Frank Leo's fine song, "Keep whistling," sung by Miss Sable Fern in her Boys in Camp sketch, has been accepted for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Mr. Imre Kiralfy has accepted the dedication of the up-to-date ditty, which will be issued shortly by Messrs. Francis and Day with the title of "Good old Japan in London!" It is written by T. F. Robson, and the music is by Henry E. Pether.

Mr. Arthur Lennard's new song, with which he has been winning laurels, was secured for publication during the week by Messrs. Francis and Day. It's name is "Put it there!" and it is by G. H. Fowler—a "new chum," we believe, among wielders of the pen—and Orlando Powell.

At every performance of Trelawny of the Wells, at the Duke of York's Theatre, that past-master of the "musick," Mr. John Crook, has shown what a good orchestra can do with material to match, and has called down upon himself and his able band unstinted applause for the masterly rendering of Messrs. Francis and Day's "Cadet" Two-step, by Herbert E. Hames.

A smart song is to see the light directly, and is called "I'm at home all day." It is sung by Mr. Harry Merrilees, and is by F. W. Carter and Fred Elton. Messrs. Francis and Day are the publishers.

The same firm (Messrs. Francis and Day) will shortly place upon the market yet another of those delightful numbers for which A. J. Lawrance is famed among artists and a great section of the music-loving public. It is entitled "In Fairyland To-day." Bert Lee is also associated with the morceau.

Cromo and Hamilton have bought a new song for their act, entitled "Would you cross the Irish Sea?" by Wilfred Chandler and John McColl. Raie Walters and Arthur Clifton will also be heard in town shortly with lyrics by the same writers.

"I'm taking my father's tea" is the title of a song which George Formby, the popular Lancashire comedian, is studying for immediate production. It contains the best humour of the William Hargreaves brand, and the combination of so witty a writer and so quaint a comedian is sufficient to ensure success.

Mr. Mark Sheridan has just purchased a new comedy number from Messrs. John P. Harrington and John Neat, which promises to be one of the biggest successes yet exploited by this clever comedian. The song, which is satirical and humorous to a degree, is entitled "Hear what the crowd say as they come out," and Mr. Sheridan will produce it at Willesden on Monday week.

Mr. John P. Harrington has been responsible for the words of several new songs accepted by leading artists during the past few days, viz.:—"I'm looking over the wall" (Miss Marie Lloyd), "Why do the nursemaids follow the uniform?" (Miss Bessie Butt) "You have a bit on the girl" (Miss Florrie Forde), and "Hear what the crowd say as they come out" (Mr. Mark Sheridan). The respective composers are Orlando Powell, John A. Glover-Kind, Maurice Scott, and John Neat.

Burt Shepard will produce on his return to London a new song-recitative, entitled "Robinson Crusoe." The idea deals with the many advantages old Robinson enjoyed as the solitary person on the island. It is the work of William Hargreaves, who wrote Mr. Shepard's present success, "The Budget as we judge it."

On Monday, March 28, Arthur Clifton opened at the Borough Theatre, Wallsend, top of the bill, when he introduced two new songs, "Oh, girls, be careful what you do," by H. and Chris. Carlton, also "The wife's come home to-day," by Eric Graham, both songs being very successful and well received by a packed audience, who joyfully sang the choruses.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

LONDON PAVILION.

The directorate of the popular variety house in Piccadilly Circus have given their patrons new seating, and the very elegant mahogany-framed and comfortably upholstered stalls, with shelf accommodation in front of each sitter for hats, &c., mark the latest phase of comfort and convenience. But the programme is the thing to catch the fancy of the cosmopolitan throng that people this vast and ever-growing metropolis, and Mr. Frank Glenister's list of new and old favourites makes a brave show. Just about midway in the bill comes the diverting sketch A Lamb on Wall Street, presented by Mr. Bert Coote and company. One is not so much interested in the plot of this trifle as in the original sketch of a dude by Mr. Coote, who is responsible for as funny a piece of character acting as we have witnessed for some time. Miss Ada Russell is forcible and melodramatic as Eleanor Belding; and Mr. J. C. Aubrey makes the villainy of Randolph Horton sufficiently obvious.

Early in the evening Mr. Arthur Astill, who adopts the dialect and dress of a Yorkshire ploughboy, presents a farmyard scene, with some capital mimicry of the pig, horse, the duck, and other "wildfowl." A very fine imitation of the lark in its upward flight to "heaven's gate" from its watery nest may be singled out as a very pleasing number, and the note of the brown bird with speckled throat, i.e., the thrush, reflects in its rich melody the glorious harmonies of the spring. The song of the nightingale, too,, to use the words of Gascoigne in his "Complaynt of Phylomene," "had quite a grace" with its "jug, jug, jug." Mr. Astill, changing into evening dress, wound up his act on the night of our visit by whistling with musicianly correctness the "Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust, which goes exceedingly well.

Osborn and Brookes sound a joyous note in their light-hearted banter. The mere man is an itinerant photographer, who deals out amusing comments at the expense of the fair sitter in short skirts, and the absurdity of the business is punctuated with laughter. Miss Ouida Macdermott is gracing the stage where both her father and mother scored their greatest triumphs. As a vocal comedienne she is fortunate in securing Hermann E. Darewski's spirited and stirring song "Betsy, the pride of Battery B." In satin coat and knickers she also scores with another success from the pen of the same composer. Barnes and West exhibit a great deal of facile energy and neatness in their step-dancing; and Dutch Daly, who recounts stories old and new in his own dry way, also delights everyone with the melody of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song."

La Milo presents a classical study, "Omnia Vanitas," which is a triumph of pose; Cruickshank's pictorial libels include Lord Charles Beresford, Lord Lansdowne, and Lloyd George; and we reach the limit of eccentricity in Mr. Tom Dunville's "They haven't made me sergeant yet," with some mirth-provoking gags. Miss Alice Pierce is somewhat intense in her impressions of theatrical and music hall celebrities; the Gothams offer nothing new in the way of comedy or vocal selections; for Miss May Henderson, who follows the prevailing fashion of gagging with the band, something funnier might be written; the Bros. Horne score their customary success in The Biter Bit; and other turns in the full and varied bill are Mr. Larry Lewis, Mr. Kit Kean, Mr. Jack Barker, Terry and Bentley, and the Pasqualis. Miss Zona Vevey was too indisposed to appear on the night of our visit.

THE BEDFORD.

There is no lack of variety in the programmes which Mr. B. P. Lucas and his genial manager, Mr. Arthur Edwards, put forward in order to secure the patronage of the amusement-seekers of Camden Town, who respond to their efforts by crowding this popular resort. Herbert Darnley and his company are presenting Mr. Darnley's latest success, John Jay, Junior, a bright concoction, dealing with a story of an airship and other trifles. It is most amusing, and Mr. Darnley in the title-rôle is capital, playing in a most natural and breezy manner, while he is capably supported by a good company, including Mr. Charles Bell, who finds ample scope for his talents as a comedian in the part of Peter, the office-boy.

Miss Daisy Stratton is a very chic comedienne, who, as an Irish colleen, captures all hearts by her rendering of a very taking Irish song, and winding up with a neat dance. Miss Julia Kent is presenting a delightful sketch, Pistols for Three, in which she impersonates a young lady who, in order to disguise herself and elope, dresses in man's costume, with most diverting results. Miss Kent acts delightfully, and the period being a century ago, the costumes are most picturesque. Miss Kent has the able support of two actors, who aid her materially, notably the one who plays the innkeeper, who is a comedian of much merit. The little play had a fine reception. A very pleasing comedienne is Miss Dolly Denton, who sings a catchy song, asking if anyone would like to be her sweetheart, and the reply of the audience is distinctly in the affirmative. Miss Denton is also an accomplished dancer. Stanley Ross, the man in violet, sings a song about picture-shows with success; Colley and Scott are a couple of amusing vaudeville artists, the lady is very smart and the male partner is a genuine comedian, and together they provide a turn of great merit. Parker's Coloured Entertainers give a show of the minstrel type, and their vocal efforts are much appreciated. Roper and Leo, the Quaker and the actress, are very diverting, and score heavily.

That droll comedian, Cliff Ryland, is as full of dry patter as ever. We have not seen him for some time, and it is pleasant to see him going as strong as ever. Alf. Brooks has a capital roller-skating song, which is made up of popular songs of the day. It is cleverly put together, and the comedian makes full use of his chances and causes huge delight.

Mr. Adderly Howard is presenting the ever-popular Black-Eyed Susan, which is proving a great draw. There is a capital company engaged in playing, who support Mr. Adderly Howard splendidly. The staging and naval costumes are on the most lavish scale. Dan Weldon, the singing newsboy, who has a good voice, and the Bioscope, complete the bill.

THE CANTERBURY.

While the first theatre in the kingdom is being devoted to the celebration of Shakespeare's anniversary, the popular house in the Westminster Bridge-road is doing its best to honour the poet's name by the production of an excerpt from one of his choicest works. Mr. Albert Wyndham experimented with Shakespeare on the halls a dozen years ago, and it was with Prince Arthur, which he is this week presenting at the Canterbury, that he began his venture, which has had gratifying results. The selection is from King John, and introduces that affecting scene wherein the little Prince Arthur pleads successfully with Hubert de Burgh, who has come to burn out his eyes at the command of the recreant King John. The actual words of the original text are used, the action being hastened, however, in order to provide for a happy ending, which sees Arthur proclaimed as King. Mr. Wyndham repeats his effective performance of the impressionable Hubert, delivering his lines with varied inflexion, while his acting gives evidence of deep study of the part. The boy Prince is gracefully portrayed by Miss Mona Shepard, who makes a comely youth, the scene in which she figures conspicuously being very touching. Mr. Charles Whiteley admirably impersonates the French ambassador; and Mr. Leo Devenidge is a grimly effective executioner. The sketch is mounted with every completeness, the men-at-arms introduced adding to the picturesqueness of the scene. The sympathies of the audience are held throughout, and at the close the principal actor has to acknowledge several recalls.

A comedietta called The Ring enlists the talents of Miss Ruby Celeste and Miss May Hallatt, who present an agreeable little love-tale, the vivacity and vocal ability of Miss Celeste serving to lighten the sentiment of the story. "Wait for the Finish" is an American importation which permits Guyer and Valle, "the gay boy and the quaint maid," to figure amusingly, the comedian's overtures to a beer barrel and his extraordinary dance with his prepossessing partner being especially diverting. Mr. Ernest Shand gains his customary tribute of laughs with "What will the congregation say?" and "Is England in Danger?" the yarns of an imaginative Nelson proving irresistible.

Something new is provided by the Poluskis, Sam's unavailing efforts to induce Will to carry out his allotted task in a coon duet and dance causing unbounded mirth. Mr. Lawrence Barclay adds unlimited patter to an eccentric policeman impersonation; Mr. Ryder Slone relies with highly successful results on his "Watchman" song, which has gained in quaintness; and Mr. Phil Ray, by nimble quip and crank, maintains his popularity, keeping the audience seated till near the end of the evening. Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls, a troupe of versatile youths and maidens, give a varied selection of song and dance, in which humour and pathos are both to be found; Walton and Lester have excruciatingly comic burlesques of the conjuring art; Jennie Alexander secures many recalls for her imitation of Harry Lauder; Savori, boy violinist, pleases greatly with solos; and other names in a long and strong bill are those of Daisy Jerome; Hope Trevelyan, vocalist; Hughes and Elliott, in a singing and dancing act; Wallace Lupino, boy comedian and speciality dancer; Cliff Ryland, himself; May Fayre, soubrette; and Millie Doris, low comedy performer, with Ruffell's Bioscope in addition. Mr. Ernest Lepard is the capable manager; and Mr. A. W. Leggett ably directs the orchestra.

PECKHAM HIPPODROME.

An excellent programme is presented at Mr. Cecil Paget's popular house here this week. A notable item on the bill is Miss Muriel Harding, described on the bill as "the Anglo-French comedienne." She is a tall and shapely lady, with a keen sense of humour, and sings and recites with just a soupçon of a French accent in her voice. She renders a well-written song, "Expressions," with much cleverness, and brings down the house with her final effort, the recital of a scene from Daudét's Sapho, in which she exhibits much pathos and dramatic intensity.

Zithers is a versatile and comely young lady, who is generously applauded for her first song, after which she gives imitations of Daisy Jerome and Sam Mayo, and winds up her turn by an excellent rendering of "Somewhere" upon the cornet. Mr. Andie Caine is a very quaint comedian, with a distinct style of his own. He succeeds at once in getting on good terms with his audience, and his topical ditty, "There's no place like England," proves very popular, as does his other humorous contribution, "A Tale of Two Sparrows." Miss Lily Black, a young comedienne with a very attractive appearance, makes a good impression with her chorus song, and will do still better when she has stronger material to work with. Mr. Ryder Slone, the popular character comedian, wins golden opinions with his telling chorus song, "Sing, sing," which he renders in the garb of an American convict, and he is also very successful in another item, in which, representing an old warehouse night watchman, he laments the fact that though it is his silver wedding, he has never seen his wife since the ceremony, she being away from home all day, while he is away all night.

A very popular and artistic item is that provided by Mlle. Suzanne de Verneuil and her ladies in a series of picture poses, representing paintings of some of the most famous artists. The effect of the various beautiful pictures is heightened by the admirable vocal accompaniment of Miss Ella Maynard. The tableaux represents "La Source," "The Three Graces," "The Four Seasons," "The Morning Star," "Diana," "The Sirens," &c., and provide a perfect feast of beauty to the eye. The subjects are all of a classical nature, and the background to each tableau is most admirably painted.

Miss Clara Alexander and company appear in a negro sketch, The Kentucky Courtship, which serves as a framework for her clever impersonations of a pretty Southern belle, an old negro nurse, and an aged coloured gentleman, Uncle Jake. Miss Alexander has considerable powers of mimicry, and she is very well supported by a lady and two gentlemen, whose names are not on the programme. The Lerouxs give us a capital turn with their wonderfully sagacious bicycling monkeys, whose antics cause roars of laughter. Mr. T. E. Bates proves very amusing in his song "I'm a jockey," and subsequently is deservedly cheered for his smart song and dance, "The acrobat," the refrain of which he renders when standing upon his head. La Belle Linden, in appearance certainly justifies her name, and her graceful trick cycling feats are warmly applauded. The generous bill winds up with some most amusing films on Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope, entitled Hercules in the Regiment. Messrs. Baker and De Sales, "pavement patterers," are also in the programme, but did not appear on the occasion of our visit.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

Quite a dazzling array of stars entice the theatre-going inhabitants of this neighbourhood to the Camberwell Palace this week, and it is not to be wondered at that full houses are recorded nightly. To begin with, we have Joe Peterman's Belle of the Orient company, with its pretty girls and clever comedians, and this alone would fill the building; but the management, far from believing in the old adage, enough is as good as a feast, have given us a surfeit of good things.

Queenie Leighton enchants us with the coster melody, "Down in Paradise Alley." She retires, and before the applause has ceased it commences again, for the new number appearing indicates that Ernie Mayne will shortly be with us, advising all present to "Have a banana." Then the Sisters Belmont make their bow, and enchant us with their graceful dancing. That romantic drama, The Corsican Brothers, so well known to all and always appreciated, has induced Fred Maxwell to write a sketch, giving all the principal incidents in a nutshell, and this is also well received. Lovers of ballad and operatic music, too, are catered for. Beatrice English, the charming Australian soprano, is presented, and enchants all her listeners.

An amusing sketch, A Lamb on Wall-street, written by Bert Coote, who takes the principal part, is very enjoyable. It literally bristles with wit, and is given a hearty reception. Arthur Ferris, the clever laughter-maker, keeps us all convulsed with his side-splitting song "James," and also renders a little song, entitled "Love," in a way which bring tears—happy tears—to our eyes.

No one's taste is forgotten, even lovers of juveniles have their whim satisfied, and two miniature little ladies are supplied, called Tiny and Mite respectfully, who sing and dance creditably and prettily.

CHELSEA PALACE.

Music-hall patrons in Chelsea—and they form a very considerable proportion of the population—are rejoicing this week over the introduction of Mark Sheridan to the Chelsea Palace, while Mark himself must have been rejoiced at the reception accorded him at each performance. Chelsea has received him, not with open arms, but with open mouths, from which proceed roars of laughter, as, in his own inimitable way, sandwiching song with joke, he has infected the house with a spirit of hilarious merriment. Mark Sheridan was welcomed at the Palace because of the high reputation he gained long ago; he will be welcomed hereafter for what the Chelsea people know of him. It says much for the quality of the entertainment provided that the other turns on the programme in no way suffer by comparison with the man who heads the bill. Daisy Jerome's admirers have ample evidence of the favourite artist's versatility in the three numbers which are barely sufficient to satisfy the audience.

Another lady who wins great favour is Dolly Harmer. Her description of the delights of being treated by a lady doctor is sufficiently alluring to convince the most rabid anti-Suffragist of the advantages which would follow woman's advent into the higher professions, while her wonderful grasp of the more intricate part of a constable's duties should ensure her an inspectorship at least. A decidedly novel item was that of Edie Gray, a vocalist of considerable ability, who appears with a couple of dancing boys. To give an acceptable rendering of the "Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust with two pairs of feet going pit-a-pat on each side of one sounds no easy feat, but she manages it with credit to herself and pleasure to the audience.

A smartly-written and cleverly-acted little production is The Ring, by Ruby Celeste and company. The story is that of an actress who gives up her lover at the behest of his parents, and finds out afterwards that he is about to become engaged to her former school chum. The latter learns the whole story, and resigns the man to his first love. As Phyllis Manners Miss Ruby Celeste played with charming spirit and ingenuousness; and Miss May Hallatt was a very successful Lydia Broughton. A compound of good jokes and good singing is the vocal comedy pantomime burlesque, The Demon and the Fairy, by Harry Claff and Alice Tremaine; and Fred Dunstone has some funny business. In their different ways the Grevini Sisters and the Five Whiteleys perform some clever acrobatic feats; and the pictures include a dramatic nautical episode, For Her Sake. It is a first-rate show from start to finish, and, with Mr. J. Norman Berlin and his capable assistant, Mr. George B. Andrews, in front, and Mr. Charles Aves presiding over the band, nothing is left undone which may ensure for the visitor a happy time.

ILFORD HIPPODROME.

The programme of entertainment here this week is one of exceptional merit, and the several items are so brimful of interesting and amusing incidents that there is not a single dull moment from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Another striking feature, and also a very pleasing one, are the increased audiences—a healthy indication that this outer metropolitan hall is gradually gaining the popularity and success which it deserves.

The principal turn this week is the world-famous illusionist Carl Hertz, whose mystifying performances are as wonderful as ever. He introduces many new and ingenious feats which simply astound the audience and elicit the warmest and heartiest applause. Mr. Hertz is capably assisted in his unique performance by Miss Emeline D'Alton. Collette and Keith give a clever and intensely amusing juggling act, including some balancing feats which quite excite the audience by their wonderful exhibition. Collette excels with his balancing of a 49lb. cannon ball, which after each feat he catches on the back of his neck in astounding style. He is also very clever in his manipulation of a heavy bar-bell, which he swings round at a good speed whilst balancing the same with one hand. The Zanfrellas, novelty equilibrists, present a series of wonderful mid-air balancing tricks, and come in for a very hearty round of applause.

The Spy, a dramatic episode of the American Civil War, presented by Mr. Ernest Ball and company, is a strong feature of the programme, and supplies a very pleasing variety in the entertainment. The sketch abounds with interesting and thrilling incidents, and is very realistically portrayed by the several artists.

Will McIvor, a very capable tenor, is heartily applauded for his splendid rendering of "Nobody knows; nobody cares," and "If I had the world to give you," two songs in which his expression is very marked and praiseworthy. A novel act is J. P. Carroll, the soldier tambourinist, who gives some excellent representations on that instrument, including the march past of soldiers and an attack on a camp at night. His representations of a boxing match and the Militia falling out are two very funny items. Joe Archer causes continual merriment by his "puns" and "gags." His songs, "An Englishman's Home," and an answer song—as he terms it—to "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" are full of humour. He brings in the now topical phrase "Wait and see" in amusing fashion. Miss Lelia Roze, in her latest successes, Bert Marsden, in his speciality act of different styles of comedians, and Vi Laurie, comedienne and dancer, are "turns" of additional interest and well appreciated.

BOW PALACE.

The enterprising management is presenting this week a programme that is drawing crowded and appreciative audiences, and Manager Harman is to be congratulated on the business. After the overture, rendered in good style by the orchestra under the baton of J. J. Starck, the Sisters Harcourt give a smart display, and are followed by Stuart and Eno in a musical absurdity.

Harry Bancroft is well to the fore in that popular song "Johnnie, there's a locket in your pocket," the chorus of which is speedily taken up by the audience. For his second number he sang "Our wedded life over again" with marked feeling. This song, only sung to the public last week for the first time, has caught on, and should prove a great favourite. Grace Lister and company present a dramatic episode entitled A Ruined Life, in which the rôle of the divorced wife is enacted with truly passionate fervour by Grace Lister. The sketch continues to prove an attractive item.

Emmie Ames takes the audience by storm with an exquisite rendering of "The Stars in the Sky." This song was produced for the first time in London last week and at once met with success, although fully a year ago it was being appreciated by South African audiences. Her other song, "The Nursemaid," was greatly to the liking of the house.

That screamingly comedy skit Roots, Rash Chemist, is ably presented by Fred Maitland and company, and keeps the audience convulsed with laughter. It is quite safe to say that this sketch has a future, and that success will be met whenever and wherever produced. Fred Curtis and his "Pics" were quite at home, and proved themselves favourites.

The top of the bill is occupied by Bernard Martyn's company in Nick Carter; the Adventures of the Black Hand, a miniature melodrama in eight scenes, which held the audience for fully thirty minutes. As Nick Carter Bernard Martyn has a part for which he is admirably suited, and the entire company works in perfect harmony. The sketch is well received, Bernard Martyn especially being singled out for marked approbation.

STRATFORD EMPIRE.

Harry Tate and company, in Fishing, occupy pride of place in an excellent bill here this week. The sketch keeps the audience in a continuous ripple of merriment, and Mr. Tate's reception at its conclusion is extremely cordial. The dozen little maidens yclept the Manchester Mites supply an extremely clever scena of action songs and dances. The attractive youngsters put refreshing zeal into their work, and they reflect great credit on their mentor.

Les Marco Belli are a clever couple, who initiate the public into the mysteries of conjuring. One sedately performs sleight-of-hand tricks, after which his partner, while unobserved, gives the show away. Amelie de l'Enclos well merits the appellation of the "Vocal Phenomenon," for her marvellous high notes give the impression of her songs being written fully an octave higher than those of the average soprano. The rendering of her songs is enhanced by a prepossessing appearance and excellent delivery, and each is very heartily applauded.

The De Wynne Brothers present an athletic display which is typical of strength and skill without apparent effort. Strolling on the stage in ordinary attire, they execute several most daring and difficult acrobatic and balancing feats, and at the conclusion neither has turned the proverbial hair, and they make their exit with the same nonchalance as that with which they entered. An acquisition to their turn is the couple of well-trained dogs, who perform unaided and with the same imperturbability as their masters. Victor Travers has an amusing parody on the Boy Scout, which is a particularly good number for this nimble and flexible comedian, being in the best comedy vein and allowing his quaint methods full scope. Woodhouse and Wells arouse plenty of hilarity as cross-talk comedians and dancers, and have two excellent songs, which go exceedingly well. The Five Vernons supply a most acceptable xylophone performance, consisting of a selection of popular songs and national airs, and their act is deservedly applauded. Amy Marsden scores in a character ditty, rendered on broad comedy lines.

The Bioscope pictures are exceptionally good, and, as usual, earn their meed of applause; and the orchestra, under the able guidance of Mr. Albert Whipp, Mus.Bac., regale early comers with a selection from The Merry Wives of Windsor. The comfort of those in front is well studied by the energetic manager, Mr. E. J. Macdermott.

THE GRAND, CLAPHAM.

Mr. Fred Cockerill, the energetic young manager of the Grand Palace, Clapham Junction, has devised ways and means of packing the pretty theatre in his charge even on an "off" night. On Thursday evening last, for instance, standing-room only was to be obtained ten minutes or so after the doors had opened.

The programme submitted was a very compact and entertaining one. John Lawson's thrilling sketch, The Monkey's Paw, was the principal item, and the incidents in it were sympathetically watched by the huge audience. The jolly little Dutch girl, May Moore Duprez, was in excellent form, "behaving mineself," as she alone knows how. Her sabot dancing and merry jests at everybody's expense brought her quite a storm of applause.

Captain Kettle and his charming mate—in other words, Rose and Calvert—present a very laughable pot-pourri duologue, in which acrobatics, dancing, and burlesque wrestling all get a place. On the night of our visit Miss Ella Shields was prevented from appearing, we were informed, by reason of a severe cold. The Westwoods' cycling act gives some daring and clever work. The couple are good-looking, well-dressed, and present a clean and enjoyable show.

The remainder of the bill is contributed to by Lawrence Barclay, Kitty Upton, Steve Bartle, Geo Collins, Blake and Cranby, and Fred Karno's sketch, Spring Cleaning. One particularly finely-taken film was shown on the Bioscope, representing a thrilling encounter with smugglers by the French coastguard. The party of actors and actresses who took the parts of the characters making up the smugglers' gang must have had a very rough time with the waves and rocks when acting the incidents one sees on the screen. Indeed, on one occasion there was obviously a very narrow escape by one of the ladies from being dashed by a great wave against the rocks.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

Still maintaining the programme at the same standard of excellence, the management are reaping the desired reward in the shape of phenomenal business. The principal feature of the present week's bill is Marie Lloyd, who is once again renewing her triumphs in the neighbourhood. On the evening of our visit Miss Lloyd gave three songs, "The lady," "The coster's ball," and "Hot." In all of these the artist's skill in making the most of a song was very evident, and the audience were most demonstrative in their applause.

A feature of considerable interest in the programme is Arthur Slater, the whistling man in white, who is presenting his new scena, "Morning, Noon, and Night." Mr. Slater introduces into this a large number of items, all of which serve to emphasise his wonderful skill as a whistler. They included the overture to The Bohemian Girl, "The Bowery Boy," and a series of bird imitations. The whole turn was faultless, and the audience most enthusiastic. A word is due to the effective scene utilised, and the pretty lighting effects which represent the periods of the day indicated by the title.

The bottom of the bill is filled by Mr. Leslie Harris, a very clever entertainer at the piano, in a medley of song and story. Mr. Harris speedily got on the best terms with the audience, and told two or three capital stories, and sang two songs, the latter of which, entitled "It did go," fully justified its title. The audience accorded the artist some five calls, and were anxious to secure an encore. Cull Pitt, who opens the programme, presents some clever tricks and impersonations and is well received. The Prince Milner Trio are scoring a decided hit in an act embracing acrobatic juggling, hoop manipulating, comedy tumbling, and wire walking. It says something for the ability of the performers that everything introduced is performed so successfully. The wire walking is distinctly clever, and Mr. H. P. Milner claims to be the only artist who can pick a handkerchief up from the wire with his teeth whilst maintaining a balance with one knee only. Certainly it is a most difficult feat, and gained loud applause.

Messrs. O'Malley and Brown, comedians, present a somewhat original cross-talk show. Their dancing is very good, and their reception cordial. Miss Ethel Bourne, a contralto vocalist, displays a good voice to great advantage in "Farewell" and "Rocked in the cradle of the deep," the latter gaining great applause. W. J. Churchill is a great feature of the programme. He sings two songs, the first, "Faith, hope, and charity," and the second a patter song which enables him to air his opinions on most topics of the day. He caused some hearty laughter, and took several curtains.

Roma and Romani are presenting their well-known musical act. Their excellent contributions on the piccolo, saxophone, cornet, and bugle merit very great praise. The very handsome costumes and setting for their turn deserve mention, and they gain a flattering reception. The Bioscope, in some views of an active volcano and other items, is very interesting. Mr. Walter Greco's capital orchestra give an effective performance of the "Tarok Magyar" overture. Mr. Charles Marte, the acting-manager, and Mr. Cyril Percival, his assistant, are both courteous and attentive in front of the house.

"THE ROCKET."

A New Racing Comedy Sketch, by Wal Pink and Joe Elvin, Produced at the Hammersmith Palace on Monday, April 11.

Wilkie Waggler ..... Mr. Joe Elvin
Capt. Hindson ..... Mr. George Denham
Mrs. Waggler ..... Miss Grace Vicat
Lady de Dip ..... Miss Leonora Castelle
Jack Platt ..... Mr. Albert Douglas
Hon. Mr. Wirrier .... Mr. Kenneth Altarmont

With great success Mr. Joe Elvin produced on Monday last this new racing sketch. The plot is a somewhat familiar one—namely, the tampering with two horses alike in every way, except in one white patch on the forehead, and in their racing ability. "The Rocket," owned by Mr. Waggler, and "Frivolity" are the two horses. Frivolity apparently wins the race, but Lady de Dip has seen the fraud, and, of course, easily proves "The Rocket" to be the winning horse. The personality of Mr. Joe Elvin naturally pervades the whole sketch, and his unique voice and humorous methods, together with some smart patter, cause much laughter. He was probably funniest when criticising "Frivolity," and, altogether, Mr. Elvin scored one of his usual great successes. Mr. Kenneth Altarmont as the Hon. Mr. Wirrier was exceedingly funny. Miss Leonora Castelle did very well as Lady de Dip, the friend of Waggler, and an owner of racehorses, like himself.

The scoundrel of the piece, though he is not a very terrible one, is Capt. Hindson, and Mr. George Denham is entirely satisfactory in the part. Waggler's jealous wife is cleverly and humorously portrayed by Miss Grace Vicat; and Mr. Albert Douglas as Jack Platt, the head lad at Rigby's, is a typical stable lad.

The mounting of the sketch is most elaborate, the scenery being painted by Mr. W. T. Hemsley. The costumes are also good, and the half a dozen racehorses are well trained for their work. The sketch received an excellent send-off from the audience, and should serve Mr. Elvin well for some time to come.

"FOR PEACE AND QUIET."

John Jamieson Stoker ..... Mr. Leslie Faber
Valerie Stoker ..... Mrs. Leslie Faber

The Hippodrome since the advent of Mme. Réjane has drawn the rank and fashion of London, and Mr. Fred Trussell is rejoicing in two packed houses daily. On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Faber returned with a new sketch, based on more broadly comic lines than their previous essay. The playlet that Mme. Paul Blouet, the widow of Max O'Rell, the witty author of "John Bull and His Island," has adapted from the French of Georges Courtelines is a veritable storm in the domestic teacup. John Jamieson Stoker, a struggling writer of stories, is interrupted by his wife, who comes for her housekeeping money. She seems to us frivolous and unsympathetic, and her attitude to her hard-working partner is certainly not the correct one for a helpmeet. John hands out to her the sum of £26 10s., being £5 10s. less than her regular allowance. Being asked for the reason of this shortage he produces a little note-book, in which he has put down her various outbursts of temper and other domestic misdemeanours, with varying fines attached. Of course Valerie will not submit to such outrageous conduct, and vows that she will throw herself out of the window unless he relents. For answer he calmly opens the window. She then decides to go and live with her mother. Will he not say good-bye? He merely utters the words at his desk. But Valerie has something to confess. She has put his name to an order for a hall lamp, which she has smashed, and she must have that £5 10s. He rates her soundly for her forgery, and hands out the money. After all, he is a real good fellow, and placing herself in his arms she confesses as much. But he is finishing an instalment of his story. What will he write now? With the renewal of the gladness of life he replies, as the curtain falls, "To be continued." Mr. Leslie Faber plays with admirable sangfroid the kind-hearted and level-headed husband, and evokes laughter with the recital of his wife's domestic sins. Mrs. Leslie Faber realises the waywardness and peevishness of Valerie, and is particularly charming also in the reconciliation scene. The sketch is well written, and should do good service for the happily associated couple.

Miss Anna Chandler, the American comedienne, has been adding during the week a topical verse to her song "Don't make a noise." It concerns Lloyd George, the Veto, and the Budget, and is from the pen of Mr. Fred Trussell. It should add much to the popularity of the number, which this excellent artist gives with much unctuousness. Mlle. Anne Dancrey, the delightful French singer and dancer, who made her first appearance at the Hippodrome on Monday, scored an immediate success.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

The manner in which Mr. Mark Sheridan renders his now famous "Seaside" number is a veritable object-lesson to would-be comedians. The comedy notions and conceits wherewith he embellishes John Glover-Kind's lilting words and tuneful melody prove his fecund resourcefulness in discovering hitherto unexplored wells of wit, and the act he now proffers is a tour de force in every sense. On Monday next Mr. Mark Sheridan will produce at the Euston Palace, for the first time, a new comedy number from the pen of Will Letters, entitled "We're miles away from home." The publishers of the new number, B. Feldman and Co., are equally optimistic.

Miss Bessie Slaughter produced the new ballad, "Beautiful garden of roses," by Dempsey and Schmidt, at the Oxford, and her other turns, with unparalleled success. The whistling obbligato by this charming vocalist was as novel as it was unexpected, and literally brought the whole house to her feet. Miss Slaughter will also sing "Beautiful garden of roses" at the Standard and Bedford next week, and will shortly "feature" several other ballads from Feldman's publishing house.

Miss Clarice Mayne is winning plaudits loud and long this week, both at the Oxford and Metropolitan, with Ballard Macdonald and Jas. W. Tate's comedy number, "Georgie took me walking in the park"; and at the latter house is also making "I'm waiting for someone to love me," by the same author and composer, her pièce de résistance, with most flattering results. It is, perhaps, superfluous to add that Feldman and Co. publish both these fine comedy numbers.

Mr. Gordon Stretton has been scoring heavily at Bristol, Tonypandy, and other provincial halls with John P. Harrington and Fred Godfrey's tuneful number, "Won't there ever be any wedding-bells for me?" which Feldman and Co. publish, and it is undoubtedly one of the most pronounced hits in his very extensive répertoire.

Miss Lola Patey, at the Hippodrome, Huddersfield, this week, is scoring a tremendous success with Feldman and Co.'s publication, "I wonder who's kissing her now," which is also one of the principal features in Miss Florence Baines's musical play, Miss Lancashire, Limited.

Mr. Fred Barnes, at the Hippodrome, Southampton, this week, is more successful than ever with his great comedy chorus song, "I'd rather be by the fireside," by J. Glover-Kind, which is nightly chorused to the echo by his delighted auditors. Truly, this Feldman number should be a prominent feature in every pantomime throughout the length and breadth of the country this year, premature as it may seem to look so far ahead. Feldman and Co. are the publishers.

The Welsh are an eminently music-loving nation, and when they are regaled with charming melody allied to delightfully-phrased lyrics, as is the case in the two songs Mr. G. H. Elliott is exploiting at the Empire, Cardiff, this week, "Moon, moon, moon," by Edgar, Lawrance, and Gifford, and Gus Edwards and Ed. Madden's delightful coon romance, "By the light of the silvery moon," their enthusiasm knows no bounds. Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. certainly have two big winners in these tuneful numbers.

Miss Barbara Babington has been received with demonstrations of delight by the habitues of the Holborn Empire this week, for her rendering of Feldman's light comedy number, "I wonder who's kissing her now," and the Arthur-street firm are to be congratulated on such an exponent of the song.

That delightful and charming artist Miss Ethel Ra-Leslie, who produced the new march song, "Betsy," at the Empire, York, this week, in wiring to the publishers, Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, says: "'Betsy' instantaneous success. Delighted with song.—Ethel Ra-Leslie."

Miss Jessie Albini has created quite a sensation this week at the Hippodrome, Crouch End, with a new low-comedy Chantecler song written by T. W. Connor, entitled "Cock-a-doodle-doo."

Harry Bancroft produced at the Surrey Theatre last week a descriptive chorus song, "'Tis years and years ago; or, our wedded life over again," by Chas. Ridgewell. The song was such a huge success that it was at once secured by the Star Publishing Company.

THE STANDARD.

Mr. Louis Cohen's extremely bright and interesting patriotic sketch Nelson gets pride of place in Mr. T. S. Dickie's bill this week at the Standard, Victoria. The story, it may be recalled, deals with the hard luck of Hardy Collingwood, R.N., who has been a little reckless and unlucky in matters sportive. In addition he has backed a bill for the beautiful Mrs. Liebmann, a magnificent adventuress, splendidly played by Miss Josephine Colona. That lady has no mercy on the handsome lieutenant, and threatens when she meets him in the reception room of the Venus and Adonis Club, overlooking Trafalgar-square, to inform his commander that he repudiates his obligations. Now O'Sullivan is Hardy's friend, and incidentally Mrs. Liebmann is his divorced wife. He overhears the lady's threat, and comes to the rescue of the lieutenant with the necessary money. There is also a stormy interview on the subject between the one-time husband and wife, very finely acted by Mr. Edmund Gilbert and Miss Josephine Colona. Later the troubled officer falls asleep, and dreams that Nelson has descended from his column in the Square and stands before him giving him advice. We are treated to some home truths on present-day naval happenings by the spirit of the hero of Trafalgar, all of which are very nicely put, and consequently the audience is gradually worked up to a pitch of enthusiasm and excitement by Mr. Arthur Max, who takes the part of Nelson's shade. Mr. Cohen may be complimented on the admirable way in which his sketch has been produced, and also on the conscientious work done by the four clever members of his company.

Another notable item in this programme is the re-appearance of Miss Kitty Arnold, the wife of Mr. Frederick Allwood, the well-known and popular musical director at the Standard. Miss Arnold is a taking singer and a clever dancer. Once more we laughed at the Bros. Horne in their evergreen boxing sketch The Biter Bit. Reg Beauchamp is a most amusing dame comedian, and Lily Black has a "mashing the audience" song that went extremely well. The rest of the programme was made up of very interesting items, provided by Elsie Ellis, Talbot and Clare, Tommy Clifford, Four Garricks, Sadie Stanley, Topsy and Cecil, and others.

In the case of Mr. Herbert Clifton v. New Tivoli (Limited), the artist's contract contained a term that, in addition to appearing every evening during the engagement the artist should also appear "on Saturday afternoon when required, in accordance with Clause 3." And Clause 3 read: "The artist agrees to appear at any matinées required by the management." . . . It was held on the 8th inst., by the Divisional Court, that the word "required" in Clause 3 meant "requested," and did not mean that the artist was to appear whenever the management had a Saturday matinée, and he could only claim payment for performing at a matinée when requested to do so.

Miss Nesta Sandford has just secured from Miss Joan Pereira a novel dramatic sketch, entitled A Queen's Honour, which will shortly be produced at a West End hall.

A Celebrated Dancer.

Those who attended the entertainment which under the patronage of Princess Christian, was given the other day at the Ritz Hotel in aid of the English branch of the International Catholic Society for Befriending Working Girls and the Incorporated Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, saw among the tableaux vivants which formed the chief attraction a living realisation of Lancret's little masterpiece in the Wallace Collection, "Mlle. Camargo Dancing." But though many know the oft-reproduced painting, it is not (says the Westminster Gazette) everyone who knows the history of the dancer.

Born at Brussels just two hundred years ago this month (April 15, 1710), Marie-Anne de Cupis de Camargo was one of the most famous and most exquisite artists of the eighteenth century. From one side she was descended from a noble Roman family, from the other from the old Spanish house of Camargo, under which name she made her début as a dancer at Paris on May 5, 1726, in "Les Caractères de la Danse," having danced, it is said, from the time she was only three months old, and, more recently, taken finishing lessons from Prevôt, the celebrated danseuse; she promptly supplanted in the esteem of a public that went positively Camargo mad, so that fashions—everything—were soon all à la Camargo, and especially the red high-heeled shoes seen in Lancret's picture of her at Hertford House.

Camargo's style of dancing was noted for quickness and grace, and she could do steps which no other dancer had found possible. She was famous for her improvisation of new dances, and was the first to perform that extremely difficult step, the entrechat, in which the dancer crosses her feet while in the air. This was in 1730, and she could make four crossings. Eight, it is said, are as many as any dancer has attained since.

Camargo was the first to abbreviate the skirt—till then reaching to the ankle; but in spite of this her dancing was always marked by great modesty, as well as rare grace and refinement of style. She was especially famous for "gavottes," "tambourines," and the "rigaudon," or "rigadoon," as it is known in English. It was remarked of her that though on the stage she was the incarnation of gaiety, off she was the reverse, and in private life was always grave, and even sad, though there seemed no particular reason why she should be. She retired in 1751, as popular as ever, and died in 1770.

A Cat at the Play.

One day last week the Charing Cross Post Office cat was missing. High and low they searched for him. At last he was found in the stalls of the Haymarket Theatre, waiting until the curtain should rise on Maeterlinck's Blue Bird.

"THE R.M.S. WONTDETAINIA."

Invented and Arranged by Fred Karno, Written by J. Hickory Wood and Chas. Baldwin, and Produced at the Paragon, Mile End, on Monday, April 11.

Patsy O'Flynn ..... Mr. Shaun Glenville
Percy Dart ..... Mr. Deane Tribune
Captain Nelsons ..... Mr. Chas. M. East
Desmond Marsh ..... Mr. Fellows Bassett
Maud de Vere ..... Miss Elsie Skillings
Sadie Vanderfelt ..... Miss Kitty Benyon

Undoubtedly, The R.M.S. Wontdetainia is the greatest, as it is also the most ambitious, of any production yet attempted by Mr. Fred Karno. As the title implies, the sketch, set in three magnificent scenes, is a skit on life on board a well-known line of steamships. In the first scene the whole breadth of the stage is taken up with a realistic representation of a big liner leaving the docks at Fishguard. The huge smoke-stacks are emitting steam, the officers and seamen are at their posts, cargo and luggage is being taken aboard, fond farewells are being spoken, and we are introduced to the two comedians, Patsy O'Flynn, the purser (Mr. Shaun Glenville), and Percy Dart, a dude (Mr. Deane Tribune); likewise two adventurers, Desmond Marsh (Mr. Fellows Bassett) and Maud de Vere (Miss Elsie Skillings). There is a good deal of rough-and-tumble fun that Mr. Karno's comedians have accustomed us to expect between Patsy and Percy as the huge liner is seen to sheer off from the quayside, and they all but get left behind. The illusion of the liner backing out into mid-stream is finely conceived and cleverly carried out, and was deservedly appreciated by a packed audience. But if this item was good, how much more so were the two succeeding scenes! The second was a superb picture of the huge craft in mid-ocean and moonlight. There on the main deck we find the two naughty characters plotting to get possession of Sadie Vanderfelt's (Miss Kitty Benyon) priceless diamond necklet. Both the purser and the dude get a chance at fun-making in this scene, and they do very well with it. One cannot do justice to the last scene, in which we get a sectional view of the grand dining-saloon of the Wontdetainia. The picture is a triumph of stagecraft, and the most realistic scene of the kind undoubtedly ever seen in a theatre. The beautiful dining-room is an art study in cream and gold. Sixty diners—ladies and gentlemen, in evening dress—are seated at the many tables, and the stewards are seen to be assiduous in their attentions to the passengers. Above, we get a picture of the officer on the watch and the star-lit sky and ocean. The whole scene is a moving one as the ship rolls and plunges through the Atlantic billows, giving a most vivid idea of the motion of a liner at sea. We listen to a speech by the skipper (Mr. Charles M. East), who announces that a dance will be held directly the stewards have cleared the tables. This proves to be a very pretty one, and taken part in by some splendidly-gowned young ladies and well-groomed young gentlemen. In the meantime, however, Maud and Desmond propose a hand at cards to Percy and another passenger, the idea being to "pay the expenses of the trip," of course, at the dude's expense. In spite of palmed aces, the dude contrives to win £100 from the precious couple, who can scarcely conceal their discomfiture. Later, when Desmond secures the diamonds and is in the act of passing them on to his fair accomplice, Percy, to the surprise of all, reveals himself as a man from Scotland Yard, and arrests the pair for the theft. There is no finer setting on the variety stage to-day than Mr. Karno's latest sketch. The comedians have scarcely had time to make the most of their parts, but a few more performances will doubtless set that right. Congratulations were rightly showered on Mr. Karno, and we have no hesitation in setting it down that R.M.S. Wontdetainia has many long and prosperous trips before her.

In addition to the foregoing, the Paragon boasts a bill second to none in London this week. There is Harry Lauder, for instance, singing "My heart's in the Hielans" and "Every lassie loves a laddie," Victoria Monks, Maggie Bowman and Tom Morton, and Daisy Dormer. Carrie Laurie's Juveniles have made a great hit with their quaint and clever idea, "When I'm a woman—when I'm a man," and so has our old friend of the famous Dandies, Henry J. Corner, with his new sketch, A Bath Cure. It is a laughable trifle, in which Mr. Corner himself acts well, and is extremely funny. Rosie Lloyd is here, too, together with Aida Martine, Brothers Deane, Sam Spira, Louize Tetland, Hughes and Elliott, Dale and O'Malley, Wild, Willie, and West, and Cissie Carter.

MISS DOLLY McCALLA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Regarding the disappearance of my daughter Dolly, reported in your columns last week, the facts are these: On the evening of last Saturday week (the week my two daughters were at the Dudley Empire), without mentioning her intentions to anyone, Dolly took a car from Dudley to go to Birmingham, to say good-bye to some professional friends who were concluding pantomime that night. She had plenty of time to do this and get back to Dudley in time for her turn. Unfortunately, at Birmingham, she was knocked down by a motor-cycle and she remained more or less insensible until two o'clock on Sunday morning. As soon as she was well enough to answer questions, the people who were kind enough to look after her wired and wrote to me, acquainting me with the occurrence. By mistake they sent their communication to Wolverhampton instead of Northampton, where my two girls were due to appear on the Monday. Owing to this mistake I did not receive these communications until Tuesday, by which time Dolly was well enough to join her sister, although not in a fit state to appear on the stage. In the meantime I had communicated with the Northampton press, who, on the Monday published details of my daughter's disappearance.

Without troubling to call at the Northampton Variety Hall and get further details, someone (no doubt acting with the kindest of intentions) sent cuttings from Monday's Northampton papers to many of the weeklies, with the result that details of Dolly's disappearance were published broadcast long after the mystery had been cleared up.

Had the people who kindly took Dolly to their house at Birmingham, immediately reported the matter to the police, I should, of course, have known at once where she was through the police at Dudley. As soon as she was well enough to understand, the people, as I said before, wired me, and the message would have been awaiting me at Northampton on the Sunday morning, but either through a mistake on Dolly's part or flurry on the part of the senders, they put "Wolverhampton" in error for "Northampton," and the same with a letter that should have reached me on Monday, consequently I did not get these communications till Tuesday. In the meantime the paragraph in question had appeared in the Northampton evening papers of Monday. As Dolly was back with us on Tuesday I, of course, did not write to any of the weekly papers. I hope you will pardon my repeating myself in my effort to make things clear.

I trust no one will look upon this as an advertising ruse, as it is nothing of the kind. If it were it would be a very paltry one.—Yours faithfully HARRY McCALLA.

Empire, Hull, April 12.

P.S.—I may add that the only newspapers I communicated with were the Northampton ones. Had I sent particulars of the matter to any of the weeklies due to be published on Saturday and Sunday I should certainly have sent them a wire immediately I found out where my daughter was.

DEATH OF HERR SCHALKENBACH.

The news comes to us from Trèves (Trier/, France, of the death of Herr J. B. Schalkenbach, who for many years starred at music halls, both British and Continental, with "L'Orchestre du Diable," his own invention. He was born at Trèves (where he died), his father, Nicholas Schalkenbach, being a merchant in that town. Soon after he came to London Professor Schalkenbach became organist of the Royal Polytechnic Institute, holding the position for seven years. He was also a hon. member of the French Académie Nationale, and in 1862 gave a concert before Napoleon the Third.

"L'Orchestre du Diable" made a great sensation in 1872, and was always a sure draw at the halls. At the Metropolitan in March, 1878, when Mr. Charles Merion was managing that hall for the late Mr. George Speedy, Schalkenbach was announced as the inventor and only performer in the world on his orchestre militaire electro moteur, and he drew what was then the enormous salary of £100 per week.

The following extract from an issue of the Daily Telegraph in March, 1878, will give a very good idea of the effects produced by the Schalkenbachian invention:—"Was there ever such an astounding musical instrument? Hear the Professor play his fantasia upon the 'Death of Nelson,' and wonder, for not only do we have the music, but the entire battle of Trafalgar, 'Along the line the signal ran.' We hear the thunder of the guns, the crash of falling masts and spars, the shouts of victory. Then the scene is changed, it may be to an Alpine valley, when we hear the lark in the air, the cuckoo in the woods, the roar of the cataract. Anon, the sky darkens, the wind rises, afar in the mountain 'leaps the live thunder,' and the lightning covers the precipices with vivid sheets of flame. This is no fanciful picture. Herr Schalkenbach does it all, and rouses the audience to unwonted enthusiasm. He was recalled with thunders of applause, and then gave a dashing fantasia upon military airs."

The deceased professor, who was born on May 16, 1824, passed away on Saturday, April 2, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He was interred in the burial ground attached to the Church of St. Laurentius, Trier, on Tuesday, April 5. He married, in London, Mary Hayward, the daughter of a merchant, to whom he was devotedly attached, and her death in the late eighties was a great blow to him. He has left one son (Franz) to mourn his loss. Herr Schalkenbach was a clever and original musician and a distinguished member of the music hall profession, to which he was proud to belong.

THE SUNDAY DEFENCE COMMITTEE.

This committee was represented by Messrs. C. Coborn and Wm. Johnson, at a meeting held in the Town Hall, Reading, the Mayor presiding, which had been convened by the Imperial Sunday Alliance. Both the representatives of the Sunday Defence Committee spoke on the special objects of their committee. Among the other speakers were Mr. Thomas Kingscote, M.V.O., Chairman of the Sunday Lay Movement; Mr. John Kempster, J.P., Chairman of the Police and Citizens' Association; Alderman Frederick Rogers, L.C.C., Captain Watson, Secretary Church of England Men's Society; the Rev. Canon Bickersteth Ottley, M.A., Secretary, Imperial Sunday Alliance; the Ven. the Archdeacon of Berks, and Mr. Leonard Sutton. The meeting was well attended, and the following resolution was adopted:—

"That a local branch of the Imperial Sunday Alliance be formed in Reading, with a view to (1) Securing for all classes of the community one day's rest in seven; (2) Educating public opinion, strengthening the hands of the magistrates, and encouraging municipal action, by special by-laws, &c., to curtail unnecessary and unjustifiable Sunday amusements, trading, or other forms of unreasonable interference with that Sunday rest which is desired by the community generally. (3) Supporting other measures, having for their object the reduction of all forms of Sunday labour to the minimum consistent with proved public or private necessity. (4) Enlisting the co-operation of existing organisations and societies for social betterment in the objects and work of the local committee on the 'Sunday' question. (5) That the Mayor be requested to take the requisite steps for the formation of the Branch." Proposed by the Ven. Archdeacon of Berks, seconded by Mr. Leonard Sutton.

At a meeting of the S.D.C., held on Thursday at the V.A.F. Offices, Mr. Clemart in the chair, and other members present being Messrs. Duncan Young, Robson Paige, Charles Coborn, Charles Jesson, L.C.C., G. H. Dyball, and Wm. Johnson, the following additions to the list of Vice-Presidents were reported:—Mr. Thomas Kingscote, M.V.O., Captain Watson, Ald. F. Rogers, L.C.C., and Mr. W. F. Frame, president of the Scottish M.H.R.A.

A number of letters from clerks of County Councils, Borough Councils, and managers were dealt with. A donation of £1 1s. to the funds from Canon Ottley was reported.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday at 12 o'clock.

A new quick-step entitled "Die Vagabunden," composed by David Davies, a member of the Theatre Royal, Worthing, orchestra, was played at the theatre for the first time with great success last week.

Miss Louisa Peach will be back again next week at Mr. Raymond's Hall, Walthamstow—her sixth return within the last four months. This time she is doing a big sketch of Ticket-of-Leave Man in six scenes, supported by an excellent company, which includes Messrs. Edwin Bennett, Benson North, Charles Daly, Edwin Fergusson, Edmond Sydney, Miss Lilian Claire, and Mrs. Charles Daly.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

MELBOURNE, March 1.—Princess's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. J. B. Moutrie.—After being closed for several months this popular theatre was reopened on Saturday evening last by Messrs. Meynell and Clarke, who have specially engaged Mr. George Willoughby and a selected London company for a short season. The piece chosen for the opening performance was the successful London farcical comedy, The Night of the Party. There was a packed house. Mr. David James as Crosbie, the valet, gave a finished performance, his acting throughout being neat and convincing. Mr. James was recalled after each act and loudly applauded. Mr. George Willoughby as butler to the Duke of Hungerford was seen at his best. Mr. Willoughby's quiet humour "caught on" every time; he kept the audience amused the whole time he was on the stage. Another life-like sketch is Mr. Frank Frayne, and one of invaluable assistance to the success of the piece. Some of the best quiet work is between Frayne and Crosbie. Miss Mab Paul is happily placed as Gipsy Vandelier. The ungracious part of Lady Hampshire Miss Violet Paget touched delicately enough. Miss Paget is to be commended for her earnest endeavour to make Lady Hampshire a sentient being. Mr. Arthur Cornell made an acceptable Sir Charles Hampshire; a fine specimen of a City Alderman is supplied by Mr. Harry Overton; Mr. H. Halley as Bogle, hall porter at Melton Mansions, put in some good comedy work; Miss Amy Willard made a sprightly parlourmaid. There are a number of minor parts that were well attended to by the Misses Agnes Keogh, Stella Pater, and Messrs. L. Stach, G. Moulton, W. Brown, R. Fry, H. Benton, W. Spinks, and H. Parkes. The Night of the Party had a very favourable reception, and should enjoy a successful run.

Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. E. J. Tait.—The highly successful pantomime Aladdin can only be played for four more nights, the season closing on Friday evening next. On Saturday evening Mr. Julius Knight and Miss Catherine Grey will produce an American play, The Lion and the Mouse. The play ran for some time in Sydney, and should certainly be a success here.

Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. Arthur Levy.—After a most successful season Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton made their final appearance here last Wednesday evening in the stirring drama Count Hannibal. At the close of the performance Miss Brayton was the recipient of a number of handsome floral tributes. On Thursday the company left for Sydney, where they play a three months' season, returning to Melbourne in June, an event eagerly looked forward to by Melbourne playgoers. On Thursday evening Messrs. Meynell and Clarke's comic opera company made their reappearance in the musical play, Sergeant Brue. Of the principal characters Mr. Cromwell as Crookie Scrubbs has a great deal to do, and he does it in characteristic style. Mr. Brett shares with Mr. Cromwell the main burden of the comedy business; in fact, it would be hard to say which has the largest measure of responsibility for keeping the audience amused. Both come through the ordeal with credit. Mr. Payne as the Police Magistrate is to be complimented on his character-sketch. Mr. Thorley as Michael Brue does some of the best work he has yet achieved with the company. Miss Edith Deverell (Aurora Brue) has a light soprano of pleasing quality and a natural manner; while others to lend valuable assistance in a satisfactory all-round production are Miss Orford, Miss Essie Perrin, and Mr. Sweeney. The orchestra was under the capable direction of Mr. Victor Champion.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—Houdini is still the reigning attraction here, though his season is rapidly drawing to a close. Mr. W. A. Robyns (basso) has made a hit with Schumann's "Two Grenadiers." Mr. Robyns also sings a number of well-known songs in pleasing style. Mr. Fred Curran evokes much laughter with his quaint ditties; the Martine Brothers give a clever turn; the Australian Dartos, in an Apache dance, display considerable skill; and other artists appearing with success at present include the Donnellys, Will White, Bob Lloyd, Dorothy Swift, Ruby Wallace, the Two Colliers, Australian Little Tich, and a host of others.

King's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. William Anderson; Business-Manager, Mr. Julius Grant.—The Prince and the Beggar Maid still continues to draw excellent houses. Miss Eugenie Duggan as the Princess Monica is seen to great advantage, while she is ably supported by a strong company. The scenery and mounting throughout are on a most elaborate scale. Judging from present appearances The Prince and the Beggar Maid is likely to enjoy a lengthy and prosperous run.

SYDNEY, March 12.—The Asche-Brayton company is back under the Clarke-Meynell ægis at the Criterion. This time Mr. Oscar Asche presents an entirely new Shylock—a strong, consistent, and well-considered impersonation. The careful supervision of Oscar Asche and J. Fritz Russell was over all, and the scenery was superb, so was the costuming. Miss Lily Brayton was an ideal Portia, and in the scene with the Prince of Morocco, admirably acted and spoken by Mr. Herbert Grimwood, she was particularly fine. In the Court scene Portia and Shylock were absolutely perfect. The Duke of Venice (Mr. Fritz Russell) was dignified and careful. Mr. Charles Doran and Mr. G. Kay Souper were the Antonio and Bassanio, and both were sufficient. The two Gobbos, senior and junior, were handed over to Mr. Athol Forde and Mr. R. F. Anson, and they made the traditional fun. Mr. Ewan Brook was Lorenzo; Jessica herself was winsomely portrayed by Miss Caroline Bayley; and Nerissa was well depicted by Miss Elfrida Clement.

"A Waltz Dream" is having record booking, and will run until Cinderella is ready for Easter.

"The Man from Mexico" is revived at the Palace by the Hugh Ward Comedy Company, and the Fitzhugh of Mr. Ward gives as much delight as ever. Misses Grace Palotta, Celia Ghiloni, Maud Chetwynd, Florence Redfern, and Ruby Baxter, and Messrs. Reginald Wykeham, W. B. Beattie, Leonard Willey, Arthur Eldred, and others make the laughs and sing the music, and will continue to do so until the end of the Hugh Ward season a week hence.

The Tivoli has the Wille Brothers, Vasco, Alexander and Bertie, Kelly and Kingston, Lillie Langtry, Olga Grey, Bert Terrell, and Harry Marte.

The Achmed Ibrahim Troupe of Arabs are meeting with great success in London. They appear next week at the Palace, Hammersmith, and Olympia, Shoreditch.

At a special meeting of the Sheerness Urban District Council on Tuesday an application was made for a renewal of the stage play licence of the Hippodrome. Mr. Pareezer, of the Lowestoft Theatre, made the application, and produced references from residents at King's Lynn, among them being one from the vicar, who wrote in eulogistic terms of the high tone that pervaded the entertainments under Mr. Pareezer's management. The licence was granted on the same terms as hitherto.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

A very pleasing incident occurred last Saturday afternoon, and none the less important because it occurred in a quiet way; it shows that conscientious services do not always pass unnoticed. On the occasion referred to, Mr. James Welch presented his master carpenter, Mr. C. Entwistle, with a gold watch, suitably inscribed, for faithful and friendly services. This handsome present is very much appreciated by Mr. Entwistle, and also the words which accompanied the present. Mr. Entwistle has been with Mr. Welch for many years. He is a keen sportsman, and has competed with success on several occasions at the Annual Theatrical Sports.

Mr. H. G. Brooks, stage-manager at the Paragon Theatre, has secured a similar position with Moss' Empires, and is to be the stage-manager at the Holloway Empire. Mr. Brooke was formerly with Mr. Walter Gibbons at the Balham Hippodrome. This change is made owing to the closing of the Paragon as a music hall some time next month.

Mr. F. Anstey, who has already given several dinners to the Vaudeville theatre staff, has again invited the staff, at the conclusion of the run of The Brass Bottle, to dine with him, and the dinner will be given on Saturday evening at six o'clock in the Angel Hotel, Old-street, City-road, E.C.

Those who have not replied to the communication from the organisers of the Annual Theatrical Sports are urged to do so as soon as possible. No decision has yet been arrived at, but from the replies to hand, Tuesday in the last week of June seems to be the day most generally selected. If the staff at any theatre or hall have not been consulted by their stage-manager, to whom the letter from the Sports Committee was addressed, will they communicate with Mr. W. Johnson, of 29, Wellington-street, Strand, and he will supply them with a copy of the circular issued by the committee. It is advisable that no time should be lost in coming to a decision as to whether the sports will be given this year.

The annual general meeting of the Heads of Departments Association took place on Thursday evening, at 6 o'clock, at 29, Wellington-street, Strand, Mr. G. H. Dyball, vice-president, presiding, in the unavoidable absence of the president; Mr. James Cullen.

The annual report was submitted and adopted. The audited statement of accounts was submitted and accepted. The statement is as follows:—

Dyball, stage-manager, the London Pavilion; hon. secretary, Philip Sheridan, electrician, the Strand Theatre; treasurer, Wm. Johnson. Committee: Messrs. A. The following nominations for the national committee were approved: President, J. Cullen; vice-president, G H. Dyball; trustee, Philip Sheridan; committee, Messrs. Pullinger, Fidge, and Philip Raphael.

The proposal to organise the annual dinner this year was deferred, as was the question of organising a river outing or a sea trip in the summer. These matters will be dealt with by the newly-elected committee.

Miss Nellie Brierley is taking a short rest after thirty-five weeks' most successful tour in G. W. Blythe's scena, "The Toilers." She commences again on May 9 on the Syndicate tour.

Mr. George Fox, advance agent, is lying seriously ill in the Royal Infirmary, M 3, M Ward, Manchester. He is under the care of Dr. Murray, the specialist. He would like to hear from all old friends. Letters should be addressed as above.

Miss Celia Claud, with her classical dances, will make her appearance for the first time in England at the London Pavilion on Monday, and the fact that she is an English girl lends her performance added interest. The Spirit Pictures of Dr. Wilmar will be also presented for the first time to the London public on the same evening by Mr. Frank Glenister. The marvellous part of this novel performance is that any photograph can be mysteriously reproduced on the stage.

Anderton and Rowland Show in the West.

Messrs. Anderton and Rowland's fine variety show is standing just outside Penzance, and is frequented nightly by large crowds. Our correspondent visited the show on Monday evening, when there was a crowded audience, and every item was thoroughly enjoyed. An excellent series of pictures are shown. Within the grounds are also Messrs. Anderton and Rowland's gondolas and hoop-las, and other stands which attract large crowds.

RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

Allie Moore at Southampton.

The Aldwych Programme.
The attendance at the Aldwych Rink continues to be satisfactory. The central location of the rink naturally gives it great advantages over others in the metropolitan area. When the rink closes for a summer vacation, advantage will be taken of the opportunity to carry out certain structural alterations which will be in the nature of improvements. An entirely new scheme of internal decoration will be carried out, the floor will be enlarged, and for the present broad supporting floor pillars will be substituted smaller columns in fumigated oak.

One Mile Professional Championship.
At the Maida Vale Rink on April 25 the N.S.A. will decide the Mile Professional Championship of Great Britain (open to British subjects). Prizes to the value of £20 in cash will be given as follows:—First prize £10, second £5, third £3, winners of heats unplaced in final £1 each. There will also be a special prize of £2 for first unplaced competitor who has not previously been placed in the N.S.A. British Professional Roller Championship. Entrance fee 2s. 6d.; entries close April 19. Entry forms may be obtained from Mr. W. Stanton, hon. secretary Roller Dept. N.S.A., 1, Hatfield House, Great Titchfield-street, W.

Sergeant Lightning at Earl's Court.
As we were going to press last night high revel was being held at the Earl's Court Rink, the occasion being a complimentary benefit to Manager Izod, whose managerial ministrations have been much appreciated throughout the season. The programme combined carnival, gymkhana, and racing. The comedy element was strongly in evidence; a troupe of comic tramps interfered in a ladies' hockey match, and were put to flight by a posse of policemen led by the valiant Sergeant Lightning, so well known to carnival rinkers.

Fast Racing at Brixton.
Further evidence that the Brixton Rink is the fastest in the country was forthcoming on Monday night, when, in the Brixton Club's mile handicap, E. W. Bussey covered the distance in 3min. 13 3-5sec. in his heat, and in 3min. 11sec. in the final, beating D. H. Swain's record by 2 4-5sec. There were eleven starters in the event.

New Rink at Camberwell.
The Camberwell Skating Rink, Ltd., will be opened to-day (Saturday). This fine new skatery is situated in Coldharbour-lane, and a constant succession of the L.C.C.'s electric cars pass the doors.

Karno's Company to Play Hockey.

Changes at Clapton.
Mr. Chas. A. Cartwright, who has been assistant-manager under Commander Leadbeater at Lower Clapton, left this week for Chesterfield, to take over the management of the Premier Rink there. It was thought he would succeed Commander Leadbeater, who severs his connection with the rinking world for purely private reasons. Commander Leadbeater was formerly at Finsbury Park, but since he has been at Lower Clapton he has shown that he can capably command a skating rink as well as a ship. His cheery smile and unfailing bonhomie went far in promoting the feeling of pleasure and sociability amongst the patrons of the rink. Mr. Alan K. Relton has been installed as manager.

£30 for Hospital.
An idea of the takings of skating rinks may be gauged from the results of the recent charity carnival held at the Cricklewood Rink, which is run by Mr. Leon Meredith, in partnership with Mr. Skuse. The total receipts were £67 14s. 3d., from which had to be deducted cost of prizes and other small expenses, so that a cheque for £30 was sent to the Willesden hospital.

Premier Rink, Finsbury Park.
A grand fancy dress carnival, the last of the season, took place on Thursday last, at the Premier Rink de Luxe, Finsbury Park. Prizes to the value of £50 were awarded for the most handsome, best home-made, most original, and most grotesque costumes.

Diplomats on Wheels.
Several members of the Spanish Embassy visited the Maida Vale Skating Rink on Monday last. Among those present were Mme. De Villa Urrita and the Marquis Del Merito, both of whom were receiving tuition from the instructing staff.

Carnival at Wandsworth.
On Wednesday last the management of the Central Hall Rink, Wandsworth, held their third Fancy Dress Carnival. As usual, it was a huge success; over 200 people competed for prizes and about the same number looked on. The floor presented a magnificent appearance. During the evening the Wandsworth Lancer Party gave an exhibition set of Lancers, which were intently watched by the spectators. Mr. Morley and his staff are to be congratulated on the result achieved. Alderman Surgeon-Major Mark Robinson distributed the prizes, and the judges were Mrs. Horace Joyce, Mr. Allan C. Rose, and Mr. Horace Joyce.

Boxing on Wheels.
At the Wood Green Skating Rink one night last week there was a novelty in the shape of a boxing match between F. Bowley and A. Amos, and the contest was fought on skates, Mr. Bowley being floor manager at the rink, and an ex-Navy man, while his opponent, now of Wood Green, is late of the Artillery. It was to have been a six-round contest, but after two rounds, which Amos spent mostly in falling down and getting up again, Bowley was declared the winner, Amos having twisted his ankle. Boxing on skates seems to be very hard work, and the winner showed good form all round.

Splendid Birmingham Gymkhana.
A crowded gathering of skaters and spectators heartily enjoyed an excellent programme at the first gymkhana organised by Dr. Humphries, manager of the American Skating Rink, Monument-road, Birmingham. The events included a lighted-candle race for ladies and gentlemen, a hoop race for children, skating competition for ladies and gentlemen individually, and a partners' race, in which blindfold gentlemen were driven through a number of obstacles by ladies. A bun-eating competition for gentlemen was productive of much amusement. A maypole dance on skates gracefully executed by a number of children was an enjoyable event on the programme; and a clever exhibition of waltzing and two-step was given by Mr. C. N. Dawes and Miss Fisher.

The events resulted as follows:—Graceful skating contest (ladies'), Miss Elsie Haynes; children, Miss Gladys Hill. Gentlemen's two-step competition, Mr. Stanley King. Partners' blindfold race, Miss L. Doherty and Mr. Greer. Lighted-candle race (ladies'), Mrs. Corson; gentlemen, Mr. Poddy. Bun-eating competition, Mr. Poddy. Children's hoop race, Miss Gladys Price.

Presentation to Bury Manager.
Mr. S. Reach, the manager of the Bury rink was presented last week with a purse of gold as a mark of appreciation by the patrons of the establishment. When the rink was first opened a few months ago everyone was in doubt as to whether it was going to be a success, but through Mr. Reach's efforts it has proved a great success. Mr. S. Reach, in acknowledging the gift, said it had come to him as a very great surprise. Since he had had the management of the rink he had tried to do his best for his employers. Next season, he might say, they were going to do as much as they could to draw attention as they had done in the past.

Last Events at Canterbury.
The management of the Canterbury Rink is closing the season with two important events, viz., hockey match between Canterbury and Gillingham (both unbeaten teams), which took place on Wednesday, and on Thursday evening, April 21, ladies' half-mile race for the Kentish championship for silver cup.

Roller-Skating in Cardiff.
The American Roller Rink, Westgate-street, Cardiff, affords daily proof of the popularity of rinking in Cardiff. The Central Rink on the Hayes is always crowded, the details of management in the hands of Mr. Trevethan leaving nothing to be desired for the comfort and convenience of the throngs who derive fun and relaxation and congenial stimulus to health. The pessimist who may imagine that the pastime is waning in popularity need only look in at the Olympia Rink, Queen-street, for evidence that the precise contrary is the case.

Deal v. Dover.
The Hockey Club formed in connection with the Pier Pavilion Rink, Dover, played its first match on Tuesday, Deal being their opponents. The event attracted a huge crowd, and, thanks in a large measure to the manager, Mr. Wilkinson, and his staff, everything passed off without a hitch. With regard to the play, Dover, mainly through lack of practice, were outclassed.

Summer Programme at Derby.
The management of the Derby Alexandra Rink have decided to turn their skatery into a concert hall during the summer season, commencing the second week in May. Arrangements are already in hand to adapt the place to this class of entertainment, for which there is a strong local penchant. Artists will do well to note this.

The New Hanley Manager.
Mr. Percy Swain, the new manager of the Hanley Olympia Rink, took up his appointment there last week. He went to the Potteries in August last as manager of the Stoke rink, and at once made a name for himself. Mr. Swain first gained his experience in the management of rinks at the Olympia, London, where he assisted in the management of that well-known rink. Leaving the Metropolis he next had the management of thousands of skaters who daily patronise the large White City Rink, Manchester, which, before the new Maida Vale Rink opened, had the largest skating surface in England, viz., 38,000 sq. ft. During Mr. Swain's stay at Stoke the rink was patronised by many well-known ladies and gentlemen of North Staffordshire—the Grand Duke Michael of Russia and his family being regular patrons before leaving Keele Hall. Mr. Swain was presented with a lovely diamond scarf-pin by the Grand Duke as a recognition of the manner in which his Imperial Highness was catered for.

Manager of Inverness Palace.
Mr. A. H. Morris is undoubtedly one of the most popular rink managers in the North, and at the Inverness Palace Rink, where he is in command, he is a firm favourite. Besides being an excellent organiser, Mr. Morris is a neat and graceful skater, a matter of no small importance. Mr. Morris has introduced many skating novelties—new competitions, new tricks, and new figures, and among these we may include the "eightsome," a roller-skating feat which is not so difficult as it looks, while being exceedingly amusing to skaters and spectators alike.

Lady Instructor's Presentation.
Inverness greatly regrets the departure of Miss E. M. Sloan, the popular lady instructor of the Inverness Rink. Miss Sloan how now terminated her engagement, and in spite of a strong desire on the part of the management that she should renew it, she has decided to go home to Liverpool for a rest. Miss Sloan began her rinking career at Birmingham, afterwards filling the post of lady instructor at Ayr, Dumfries, Stranraer, Govan, Greenock, Aberdeen, and Inverness. Miss Sloan on Wednesday evening last was the recipient of a parting gift from rink patrons.

D. M. Swain Wins at Leicester.
There was a large attendance at the Boulevard Rink, Leicester, last Saturday night, when the first contest for the Noble shield reached the final stage. The trophy is valued at thirty guineas, and is to be contested in the mile scratch races, and to be won three times in all before becoming the absolute property of the winner. The heat winners were C. Burdett, P. Robinson, L. Wilson (aged thirteen), and T. Dunn, all of Leicester; J. T. Cooper (Birmingham), D. M. Swain (London), and Leon Meredith (London), fastest loser. In the final Swain immediately showed in front, closely followed by Burdett. The latter fell in the second round, and Swain assumed a commanding lead, followed by Cooper and Meredith. Nearing the end Meredith dispossessed Cooper of second place, but failed to overtake Swain, who won by twelve yards. Time, 3min. 20sec. Officials: Starter, W. Jesson; judges, F. Snow, N.S.A., and Dr. Moss Blundell; referee, J. Noble; timekeepers, J. A. Jarvis and J. Shackleton.

Rink Pavilion, Limerick.
The patronage, even in spring temperature, accorded to the People's Palace is as extensive as ever. Racing, hockey, waltzing, and figure formula are the breezy items of the past week, and the craze to go on wheels has not in the least diminished. Director Edward Kidd will keep open-doors as long as the people appreciate his efforts. It may be remarked that it is the only indoor amusement which for years has united the classes and the masses in this city.

Dolly Mitchell at Mansfield.
Miss Dolly Mitchell, who is billed to appear at the Mansfield Prince's Rink, gave a clever and graceful exhibition on Monday evening. The best feature of her work is the ease and grace with which she carries out the numerous and intricate figures on the toes. The clever young lady had a hearty reception.

Robbery at a Rink.
Last Saturday, at Nottingham, Claude Stephenson, 20, a former employee at the Princess Skating Rink, Castle Boulevard, was remanded on bail, charged with breaking into the manager's office and stealing £5 9s. and a large quantity of cigarettes and chocolates on Easter Tuesday.

Pentre's New Manager.
Mr. Jack S. Pattison, the new manager of Olympia Rink, Pentre, Rhondda, frequently gives exhibitions of trick and fancy skating, which are witnessed with much interest by crowds of onlookers.

Perth Rink to Become Music Hall.
At a sitting of Perth Dean of Guild Court a petition was lodged by Kenmarks, Ltd., Victoria Roller Skating Rink, Perth, to make certain alterations on the premises occupied by them and to convert the building into a music hall. The Burgh Surveyor was satisfied with the plans. The plans were passed, subject to the approval of the Town Council with regard to the verandah, where it is proposed to erect the cinematograph.

Coming Southampton Carnival.
The management of the Southampton Skating Rink, Shirley-road, has arranged to hold its next fancy dress carnival on Wednesday, April 27.

Popularity of the Sydenham Rink.
The Sydenham and Forest Hill Public Hall and Skating Rink will be kept open through the summer months. The Crystal Palace Figure Skating Club will now hold its meetings there, making this rink its headquarters.

Changes at Ton-y-Pandy.
Business at the Pavilion Skating Rink, Ton-y-Pandy is flourishing, and encourages the directors to keep the rink open during the summer. They have secured the services of Mr. Studd as manager for a short time before he leaves the district for a very important appointment. Mr. A. H. Wilson, late of Olympia, London, has been appointed floor manager, and has already made many friends among the patrons. This rink is noted for its size, being the largest in the Rhonddas, and is becoming increasingly popular.

WARRINGTON. — Royal Court.—Proprietor, Mr. Joseph Beecham; Manager, Mr. A. M. Loader.—Mr. Arthur Leigh's company are reappearing here this week in the popular play Lucky Durham. Mr. Edmund Kennedy again submits a powerful study of John Durham; Mr. Walham Calvert is well placed as Lord Mountfallon, and a really clever interpretation of the Hon. Reginald Steighton is that of Mr. Arthur Leigh; Mr. Charles Wemyss is natural as Mr. Vallerton, and a typical exponent of the Hebrew moneylender is Mr. W. F. Clitherow; Miss Florence Tressilian is a graceful and winsome Helen Vallerton, and Miss Frances Wolviston is a stately Lady Mountfallon; Miss Dorothy Turner is a chic Hon. Margaret Steighton, and Miss Nellie Bonser makes a capital Mrs. Durham. The staging is very effective.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden. —Eugene Stratton heads the bill here. The Kirbys are smart comedy and burlesque entertainers; Albert Letine is a clever female impersonator, and good patter marks Cavalli's entertainment as a ventriloquist; George Burnett, a local comedian and sketch artist, is well received; James Pullin is a smart comedian, and the Firmans are seen to advantage in the sketch The Fire Station. The pictures are good.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, The Central Theatres and Franco-British Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Wilberforce Turner; Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Good business is done here this week, and Louie Tracy is scoring well in a capital round of songs. She is a dapper artist, and her business is quite up to date; Vera Mayne is a charming comedienne, and Frank Stanert is a smart instrumentalist; Henri Bekker scores well with a series of humorous conjuring tricks. The pictures are good.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Grand.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Granville.—The Prisoner of Zenda is being played here by an excellent company under the direction of Mr. R. J. Blacklin to crowded audiences. Mr. R. J. Blacklin is responsible for the delineation of the triple characters, Prince Rudolf, Rudolf the Fifth, and Rudolf Rassendyll, in which he scores a decided success, his acting being powerful throughout. Mr. Matt Smith undertakes the dual rôle of Duke Wolfgang and Michael of Strelsau, and acquits himself excellently, his acting being most realistic; a well-studied piece of character work is done by Mr. A. H. Bunting in the rôle of Colonel Sapt. Excellent work is done by Mr. W. Kinch, who undertakes the parts of Capt. Hentzau and Gilbert of Rassendyll. Others meriting praise for their respective delineations are Mr. Walter Burgess as Cardinal and Mr. C. G. Woodifield as Strakencz. Too much praise cannot be given to Miss L. Mudd for some impressive acting in the character of Antoinette De Mauban, and to Miss M. Kay for the exquisite grace and power with which she impersonated the rôle of Princess Flavia.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. F. Thompson.—Little Zola, a "four feet two and a bit" of lively humanity, keeps his audience in a perfect paroxysm of laughter; Drum and Major, in an amusing scena, The Broker's Man; and Rich Taylor, that undoubtedly clever whistling ventriloquist, are old favourites whose popularity increases; Hetty King, "the young man sans-pareil," in some three or four songs, gains many admirers, her reception being very flattering; artistic banjo manipulation is accomplished by Stanley and Greenop; Marie Kendall, in taking song, is meeting with success; and Steve McCarthy executes dancing which for eccentricity and neatness would be difficult to excel.

WHITEHAVEN. — New. Theatre Royal. — Proprietor, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jacques.—Miss Grace Warner and company are here in a series of popular dramas. On Monday The Scarlet Clue was the piece chosen. As Sal Scarlet Miss Warner gave a powerful representation, and was well supported by Mr. G. Gordon as Michael Stanton; Mr. L. Nanton was good as Billy the Rotter; and Mr. Roy Rhind acted cleverly as Crazy Jim. Miss L. Price as Mother Scrooge and Miss Estha Dean as Musette were both effective; and Miss Rita Corri was a clever child actress. East Lynne and The Wages of Sin are also billed.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—Mr. and Mrs. Rice Cassidy's company is here in The Beggar Princess. In the title-rôle Mrs. Rice Cassidy acts in charming style; Miss M. Cameron as Maggie Bolton and Miss Ada Roscoe as Countess Olga act with efficiency; Mr. Rice Cassidy is to be congratulated on his portrayal of the Hon. Algernon Fitzhugh; and Mr. T. Royden fills the rôle of Duke Sergius in a powerful manner.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—At a great expense the management have secured the services of Miss Vesta Tilley, whose "star" is still in the ascendant. The Villions present an exceedingly enjoyable cycle performance; the Society Quartette give an entertaining turn, their step-dancing being most commendable; the Cavalottes are loudly applauded for their instrumental selections; Miss Olive Arundale renders pleasing songs; and others who contribute are Harry Grey ("the Australian nugget"), Harry Clyst, and Johnnie Walker.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis M. Chapman.—Mr. Stuart Lomath's company is here with The Enemy of Woman. As the hero, Captain Jack Merritt, Mr. Stuart Lomath succeeds admirably in eliciting the sympathy of the audience; Mr. Arthur E. Pringle as Major Stevens is the very acme of polished villainy; Mr. Lancelot Usher, as Digby Trant, presents one of the cleverest character studies seen here for some time; Mr. Jack Miller renders good service as Richard Manley; Mr. Victor G. Payne makes the most of his opportunities as Watty Cooper; and a realistic representation of a bibulous wreck is provided by Mr. George Wells as William Gibbs. Miss Helena Walbran creates an excellent impression as the heroine, Marian Merritt; Miss Amy MacNeil as Beatrice Trant is good; Miss Ellen Owen does well in the light comedy part of Kitty Crumpet; and Miss Ethel F. Greene as Teddy and Miss Dorothy Booth as Frankie both act creditably.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Vivian Evans.—Superbly staged, and of all-absorbing interest, the dramatic episode A Society Woman, presented by Mr. Alan Holt's company, rouses the audience to a high pitch of excitement. Jack Marks, described as the smallest and youngest of Hebrew comedians, makes a tremendous hit; something absolutely original in the comedian line is at last found in S. W. Wyndham, who causes the house to simply shriek with laughter; three fine specimens of humanity are found in the Romas, herculean equilibrists, who contribute an artistic performance; Fred Evans causes much amusement in his protean comedy skit "Dreaming"; immaculately dressed, Madge Osmond is a dashing male impersonator; and Eric Vaughan, light comedian, completes an excellent programme.

WORKINGTON.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—The Russell Rosse Répertoire Company give first-class representations of A Pair of Spectacles, Our Boys, and Caste this week, Mr. Arthur Hare playing Benjamin Goldfinch, Perkin Middlewick, and Eccles in his usual clever and impressive style. Miss Madge Monte plays Lucy Lorimer, Mary Melrose, and Polly Eccles; and other characters are admirably filled by Messrs. Maurice Denham, H. St. Barbe West, Guy Vivian, Walter A. James, and Miss Mary Williams.

Carnegie Hall.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—The films are very good, and the varieties include the Frohmans, with musical turn, and Jack MacCormack, with Scotch and Tyneside songs.

WORTHING. — Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. Adolf Seebold.—Lovers of Shakespeare are this week being exceptionally well catered for by Miss Florence Glossop-Harris and her talented company. The Merchant of Venice was selected for the opening night, and proved one of the best performances seen here. In the part of Shylock Mr. Frank Cellier displayed to a marked degree his unquestionable histrionic ability as an actor; Miss Glossop-Harris effectively utilised her gifts in the Casket and Court scenes, and was most delightful in the final act; as Antonio Mr. H. P. Owen showed a most admirable conception of the part. On Tuesday Romeo and Juliet was played to an appreciative audience; Twelfth Night and Taming of the Shrew were staged on Wednesday, the former at a matinée; Othello was produced on Thursday evening; whilst the attraction last evening was Much Ado About Nothing. The Merry Wives of Windsor will be given this afternoon; but to-night a departure is being made from Shakespeare, and The Duke's Motto is to be presented In addition to the talented artists mentioned above, others in a well-selected cast are J. H. Irving, Vernon O. Crabtree, Arthur Seaton, Jas. Mason, Owen Ediss, Frank Mayes, Walter Carr, Maurice Ingram, Eugene Wellesley, Vickers Smith, Ian Baggerly, McCameron, Mary Goulden, Madge Spencer, Eileen Terence, Kate Canterbury, and Rosie Campbell.

WREXHAM.—Empire Music Hall.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. J. Scott.—The Barrington Trio (Fred, Maude, and Mabel) top the bill this week, and provide ample amusement in a pretty garden scene; Maude Robbins is a dainty soubrette; and the pictures, still the main feature of the entertainment, include The Stepmother (an interesting drama), Custom Officers Mystified, A Fisherman's Home, The Lucky Pie (a highly laughable film), &c.

YNYSHIR. — Workmen's Hall. — Lessees, Messrs. Pooles, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth. —Very great success attends this well known picture palace. Up San Juan Hill is a stirring dramatic production; The Life of Moses is also another fine production; the comic pictures include Oh, Uncle! A Fair Exchange, The Best Man Wins, Father's Baby Boy, and Two Sisters.

YORK.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington and Sons; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J Dacre.—When a Lass Loves, a drama with sufficient sensation to satisfy all, is being excellently played by Mr. Tom Craven's company. No end of amusement is caused by Mr. Louis Palgrave, who appears with great success as Slack, the office boy. Miss Josephine Middleton as Constance Lane gives a convincing performance; Rita Trakelle as Cynthia Bridge and Bert Stephens as Dr. Craes have parts in which they do themselves full justice; and the remaining members of a very able company do well.

Opera House and Empire. — Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—Sanford and Lyons head the bill and give a neat entertainment; Ethel Ra-Leslie introduces a couple of well-selected songs, which go well; the Bros. Carpalli, on the bars, give a very neat turn; and Miss Maude May Murray introduces some picturesque electrical and aerial dances. The Three Erros, on the silver chains, give a smart turn; George Payne's Wanderers sing tunefully; and Les Trippellos are musicians of the first rank.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Bowman; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. E. Bradley.—The Call, an excellent picture full of life, is very popular; and the Theft of Diamonds is an exciting detective story. The Smalleys give an amusing turn.

Victoria Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Bert Rutter.—Excellent films include The Cloister's Touch and The Rival Guides. W. H. Downs sings as well as ever.

"PECK OF PECKHAM."

Peck	Mr. Tom Holly
Mrs. Peck	Miss Ellis
Mr. Dicky Bird	Mr. Harry Pastor
Mrs. Dicky Bird	Miss Dorothy Clifton
Miss Skimpitt	Miss Murdock
Policeman	Mr. Leonard May
Jack Battin	Mr. Leigh Green
Hinky Dink	Mr. Frank Irwin

Messrs. A. Voyce and R. Perris have secured a sketch containing many opportunities and an abundance of comic episodes and situations. The piece affords much scope for genuine comedy business, and was well received here on Monday. The story tells of the troubles of a Mr. Peck, who, under the pretext of burying his aunt, endeavours to seek a few days' excitement and relief from his iron-willed and nagging wife by going for a short time to enjoy the delights of Mixum-on-Sea.

He duly arrives at the boarding-house kept by one Miss Skimpitt, and although not expected, makes himself perfectly at home in his new quarters until he is informed that his wife has also just arrived. Then the excitement and trouble begin. To hide his identity he disguises himself as a woman; but, in spite of this, has much trouble to escape the watchful eye of Mrs. P. In the second scene, in his endeavour to find a means of once more adopting the trousers, he makes the acquaintance of a thief, who is dressed in a large check suit and a red waistcoat, the description being well known to the police. Peck's change of clothes leads to still further complications. However, everything ends well, except that at the conclusion Peck is discovered by his wife. This time, however, the husband is one too many for her, and bundles her into a balloon, which sails away bearing with it the cause of much trouble.

Mr. Tom Holly is responsible for much merriment as Peck, and raises many a hearty laugh by his drollery. The energetic Mrs. Peck is very ably represented by Miss Ellis, and the part of Mr. Dicky Bird is humorously played by Mr. Harry Pastor. Mrs. Dicky Bird is effectively presented by Miss Dorothy Clifton, who plays a small part well. Miss Murdoch gives a characteristic impersonation of the boarding-house keeper, Miss Skimpitt; and Mr. Leonard May is particularly droll as the policeman. Mr. Leigh Green gives capital support in the rôle of Jack Battin, and Mr. Frank Irwin scores a success as Hinky Dink.

The new act which the Brothers Poluski produced on Easter Monday at the Oxford is from the pen of William Hargreaves, and promises to be the best laughing hit they have had for a long time.

It is with regret that we inform the many friends of Miss Bertha De Pas that she had to undergo a serious operation for complicated appendicitis at her residence in Wokingham last Tuesday. Her medical advisers say she is progressing as well as can be expected.

Madame Rejane, now at the Hippodrome, paid a visit on Wednesday to the Ideal Home Exhibition at Olympia. By a coincidence, the Dowager Lady Holmesley paid a visit to the crèche at the same hour, and the two ladies made a tour of examination in company. After the working of the crèche had been explained to Madame Réjane by the nurse in charge, the famous actress submitted to be photographed. She selected two chubby creatures to sit on her knee, and placed the others picturesquely around her, and waited with a smile for the flashlight.

The Alexandra Circus on Tour.

The original Alexandra Circus—of which Mr. D. Taylor, sen., is the popular proprietor—visited Carmarthen and the surrounding towns and villages this week, and has been well patronised, a splendid programme being presented each afternoon and evening. The Brothers Zeena, on the horizontal bars, gave a wonderful and amusing performance; Mr. John Yelding, in his character act on horseback, is really clever; Kurio, the contortionist and jointless man, gives a remarkable exhibition, and is truly described as "the doctors' puzzle"; Mlle. Hettie appears in an exciting bar- and gate-leaping act; "Sleepy George" gives an amusing interlude; Hyatt, in his juggling performance, is warmly received by the audience; the Lo-Lo and May Trio of gymnasts give pleasing and astonishing feats on the trapeze; J. Yelding gives a fine exhibition of bare-back riding; "Bess," the performing mare, keeps up her wonderful reputation, and reflects credit upon her trainer (Mr. J. Brains); Comic and Hairpin, clowns, create roars of laughter with their jokes and funniosities; Maccan's Irish terriers and leaping dogs are remarkably clever, and give a wonderful exhibition of leaping; the Brothers Attilla, "the strongest men on earth," give an extraordinary exhibition of their weight-lifting powers; the circus band, under the direction of Mr. M. Corbett, supplies splendid music. On Saturday the circus visited Newcastle-Emlyn; Monday, Cardigan; Tuesday, Letterstone; Wednesday, Fishguard; and Thursday, Haverfordwest. At Carmarthen on Friday evening, in an interval in the programme, very interesting presentations took place. Mr. David Taylor, the proprietor, stepped into the ring, and, addressing the audience, said that he had been asked by the members of the staff of the circus to present to Hairpin (Mr. David Taylor, jun.), on their behalf, a handsomely-fitted leather travelling-bag, on the occasion of his attaining his twenty-first birthday that day, with their best wishes for his future happiness and welfare. He (Mr. Taylor, jun.) was a thorough Welshman—(applause)—having been born at Cardiff; and the cordial relationship which existed between him and the staff was to be found embodied in the handsome present which they had handed him for presentation that evening. (Applause.) He had also a father's pleasure in handing him a gold watch and chain as a souvenir of his twenty-first birthday. (Loud applause, and "For he's a jolly good fellow" by the band.) Mr. David Taylor, jun., in a few well-chosen words, thanked them for their kindness in making him the presentations. Continuing its successful tour, the circus visited Kidwelly, and was welcomed by enthusiastic crowds of patrons.

Notes from Wales.

Messrs. Crecraft, after an absence of nearly twenty years, are at Haverfordwest, doing excellent business. Some very fine dramatic, pathetic, and comic pictures are shown to delighted audience. Among the first-class varieties, special mention is deserved by that clever couple of thought-readers, Ritsen and Mira; the questions they answer are marvellous. Mr. Frank Reynolds, in his funny, artistic sketches, is good; Lodge and Lewis, in song and clog dance, are well received; and the Sisters May and Madge contribute towards a first-class programme.

Messrs. Wadbrook and Scard are on a return visit at Bridgend with some of the latest in animated photography with gratifying results. Mr. Glover is an excellent describer of the various subjects, ably assisted by Mr. Jeffries in recitations, &c. The clever couple of comedians, Kent and Earl, receive a good reception.

The Italian Circus at Dundee.

The Kinnaird Hall has been admirably adapted for the purposes of the circus, and, judging by the enthusiasm of Monday's packed houses, Signor Volpi can confidently look forward to a very successful season. The wonderful results achieved in the training of the host of animals—dogs, ponies, monkeys, goats, zebras, and elephants reflect the utmost credit on Signor Volpi. The animals are all beautifully groomed, and cleanness and refinement are outstanding features of this wonderful entertainment. Another pleasing feature is the excellent comradeship existing between the trainer and his charges, which seem to thoroughly enjoy going through their performance. The monkey Fasolin performs with almost human intelligence on the flying trapeze; and Jumbo, Junior, the baby elephant, displays marvellous sagacity in his solo on the bells. Mme. Batavia, the bear, is delightfully funny; the fancy-dress ball, in which twelve dogs take part, causes great merriment; and a brilliant act is provided by eight thoroughbred Arabian ponies. Signors Trufelli and Cembrani also introduce several animals, which they have trained, with striking results. The circus is well supplied with clowns, the interludes by Bishop and Winkles being mirth-provoking beyond description, while Dan Gregory is an exceedingly clever eccentric musician. The pleasure of a visit to the circus is much enhanced by the musical programme provided by an excellent orchestra under the direction of Mr. R. Niblett.

Frank Bostock's Jungle and Arena.

Mr. F. C. Bostock's Jungle and Arena, at present showing in the Scottish Zoo at Glasgow, have proved so popular there that the season has been twice extended. They close down, however, this week, as arrangements have been made for appearing at the Brussels Exhibition this summer, and the extensive collection of animals must be shipped at once for Belgium.

Restoration of the Scottish Zoo.

Councillor E. H. Bostock, of Glasgow, has decided to reorganise his Scottish Zoo, and immediately the premises are vacated by his brother's Jungle and Arena a new collection of animals will be got together. The manner in which the Glasgow public have supported Mr. F. C. Bostock's entertainment proves that the loss of the Zoo collection has been felt very keenly by the populace, and the new venture is assured of a strong measure of support.

Sanger's Circus on Tour.

In its peregrinations round the country, Lord John Sanger and Sons' mammoth show paid another visit to Nottingham on Wednesday and Thursday last. Enormous crowds witnessed the unique performances of this great travelling combination, and special mention should be made of an act by Coleman and Co., introducing clever horses and elephants; the Austins, in their smart bareback riding; the Maro Troupe of acrobats; La Belle Fondants, in a wire act; the Zampos, extraordinary feats in somersaults; a highly-trained horse by Miss Lena; and Hoffman's pony, Marvel; the little Teddy Bear, and an eccentric clown, and an incident in the Zulu War, in which a number of warriors are introduced. The usual parade took place each day, and the fine collection of wild animals proved a source of great delight.

Wrexham Fair.

An extraordinary array of amusements great and small are located at Wrexham this week. The bare enumeration is sufficient to indicate what we mean: Five large steam or electrically-driven roundabout machines; two immense cinematograph theatres; for the first three days, Sedgwick's wild beast menagerie, boxing saloon, and photo vans; Booth's sideshows, freak shows, shooting ranges and tubes, and long avenues of throwing games, houp-las, and circular and square pannum and toy stalls. The supply we very much fear was in excess of the demand, the population of Wrexham not being large enough in our judgment to demand so great a crowd of show novelties.

The principal shows were Mrs. Flora Collins's Wonderland cinematograph palace, George Green's colossal Temple of Light with animated pictures, Sedgwick's famous menagerie (for three days' visit only), Harry Hughes with school of boxers and athletes, J. R. Style's midget marvel, the perfect miniature gentleman (a great novelty in a ci setting), P. R. Collins's steam yachts and motor switchback, Relph and Pedley's two superb sets the racing motors and the Japanese airship, or wheeling the whirl, P. Collins's galloping horses, and sets of gem horses by Cordwell and Turner. Caddick's photo van was on its accustomed site, and Fossett's photo saloon and various side-show attractions complete the list of novelties other than stalls and throwing games. The splendid array of shooting galleries were headed by the well-known concerns of Fossett, Wright, and Turner; throwing games, houp-las, and stalls by Messrs. Caddick, jun., Hart, Cordwell, Turner, Salisbury, Simon, Greatorex, Hall, Wilson, and other caterers.

Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union.

An important meeting of the Union is advertised for Wednesday next, the 20th inst., at the Manchester headquarters. Members attending Hull Fair are urgently requested to attend.

"As Good as a Holiday."

Last Saturday the Daily Chronicle printed an excellent article on "The Picture Palaces of London." The writer is of opinion that a visit to a picture theatre "gives the tired sightseer an hour's respite from the noise and fatigue of the streets, and in some cases it dangles the tempting bait of 'afternoon tea gratis' before this type of prospective patron. To the regular theatre it stands in the same relationship as a 'snack' does to a formal luncheon. It is the resource of the man with only an hour to spare, the lady who doesn't like to be out late, the girl whose papa doesn't approve of theatres, the little boy who must be in bed at six, the hospital nurse who has only two hours off duty, and the family party from the provinces whose train starts at ten sharp." Then as regards the pictures the writer says:—"Most successful of all are the travel pictures, where scenery is absolutely realistic and the sense of motion admirably conveyed. No 'book of views,' however beautiful, can fascinate as this moving panorama does. It is as good as a holiday—and somewhat cheaper! Have the picture shows come to stay? Yes; they have filled a gap."

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD AT WREXHAM FAIR.

For three years past the organising chaplain, the Rev. T. Horne, has held a conference with the prominent showmen and amusement caterers on the North Cheshire and Welsh Border Rounds, at Wrexham Fair.

This has served the useful purpose of bringing before an important body of showpeople the work of trade defence, so ably carried on by the Showmen's Guild. It has, in addition, served the equally useful purpose of bringing before public authorities and the public in general the important truth that showpeople as a body are deserving of much better treatment than has hitherto been their lot to receive.

For example, three years ago, it was regarded as a great discovery by the good people of Wrexham that the showmen were combined together for mutual help and protection, and that, in order to further the work, they had a trade society and an educational and religious work of great importance entirely maintained by the showpeople themselves.

The advent of the organising chaplain to conduct meetings and to preach at Guild services was an event of great interest and considerable surprise to the people of Wrexham.

The general effect of this part of the Guild work has been to uplift the show business in public esteem, and to secure for it greater liberty and recognition.

The Sunday Conference of Guildsmen.

Owing to the great pressure of business engagements in the Midlands, the president of the Guild, Mr. Patrick Collins, was not able to be present at the Sunday conference. Mr. Patrick Ross Collins was voted to the chair, and, as upon former occasions, proved himself, by his opening remarks, a capable and most worthy chairman.

Amongst the prominent showmen were Mr. Joe Caddick, Mr. John Fossett, Mr. J. Greatorex, Mr. J. Turner, Mr. J. R. Styles, Mr. C. Shaw, Mr. Kelly, Mr. G. Carter, Mr. A. Taylor, J. Caddick, jun., Mr. F. J. Green, Mr. J. Jones, Mr. J. Cordwell, Mr. J. Humphries, Mr. T. Relph, Mr. J. Symons, Mr. J. Clarke, and a large number of the employees and the small traders attending the fair.

Mr. P. R. Collins, in introducing Mr. Horne to the meeting, said that the Guild chaplain had made the journey expressly to put before that meeting the important work undertaken by the Guild. It was impossible to exaggerate the value of that work, and it could not be too well known that at every point of attack the Showmen's Guild stood as the defender of the many interests of the show business. Whether in Parliament, or in dealing with corporations, or in the necessary work of educating public opinion, the Showmen's Guild was a great power for good.

He was confident that that conference would derive great profit from what their chaplain had come to speak about, and it was with the greatest pleasure that he asked the rev. gentleman to address the meeting.

Vigorous Speech by the Organising Chaplain.

Mr. Horne, in his opening remarks, congratulated the showmen of Great Britain upon the great forward movement which the Guild had made during the past few years. Twenty years ago, the very thought of what they were able to do to-day with comparative ease would have been regarded as a Utopian dream.

He referred at considerable length to the fight for Mitcham Fair. His point in referring to this victory of the Guild was to show that, having achieved the honour of sending two representatives to the Parish Council of Mitcham, it might be necessary, at no very distant date, to make still greater enterprises, and to secure representation upon some of the great Borough Councils where difficulties might arise with regard to the show business.

He even went further, and said that under the stress of circumstances of a possibly adverse character, it might be necessary in the future for showmen like the other great organised industries of the country, to have direct representation in Parliament.

Veterans in the movement, like Mr. Caddick Mr. Fossett, and himself, might not see that vision fulfilled, but when he saw around him, as he did that day, the coming men of their movement—when they had so able a son of a celebrated father as their chairman that day to preside over their conference, and men like Joe Caddick, jun., James Styles, Fred Green, and others, worthy disciples of the Guild, to carry on its work and to maintain its power—he did not feel at all alarmed either about the stability of their movement or its possible adventures in the Imperial Parliament in days to come.

Recent Victories of the Guild.

He claimed that the return of two representatives of the Showmen's Guild on the Parish Council of Mitcham was a forward step of the greatest value and importance. The Showmen's Guild had made every effort during the past four years to bring about a just settlement of the fair-grounds dispute at Mitcham.

The last weapon left to the organised showmen was to make their power felt at the municipal election. As this election only happened once in three years, it was of vital moment that the action taken by the Guild should be decisive, practical, and effective.

The position at Mitcham now was that whenever the question of the fair arose at the Parish Council or in negotiations between the Parish Council and the Board of Conservators controlling the common lands, there would be always two representatives on the local governing body who would be able to speak with knowledge and authority for the showmen and for the fair rights of the people of Mitcham.

These two important interests had hitherto received but scant attention. They had been voiceless in the past, but in the future their claims would be championed with no uncertain voice.

It had been often asked at conferences of the Guild by showmen who took a very narrow view of life, or a very selfish one of the show business, what good could come to showpeople in the provinces by fighting the battles of showmen in and around London?

He asked them to consider what would be the immediate effect if the London fairs, or the southern county fairs were squeezed out of existence by the local authorities. There would be this inevitable effect: the south country showmen would be driven to the Midlands, the Northern Counties, on to the Welsh and West of England rounds, and the fight for a living on the fairgrounds would be intensified by the increased competition which the southern invasion would bring with it.

To the narrow-minded showman, and to that class of mind, he submitted that argument. But to the broad-minded, large-hearted, and far-seeing Brotherhood of the Road, he made no such narrow appeal. He claimed that when the Guild was defending a fair in any particular part of the country the local circumstances were but a small part of the interest involved, and that every fair saved was a security to every other fair throughout the United Kingdom.

They had won a notable victory at Mitcham, and their fight for Mitcham had had wide-reaching effects. Just before Christmas, he said, three other London suburban fairs were threatened with extinction—Hounslow Fair, Isleworth Fair, and the May Day fair at Heston Green.

The Guild had prevented the abolition of these three fairs. He was confident that their success in preventing the extinction of these three fairs was largely owing to the brave fight they had made at Mitcham.

The Home Secretary, in his answer to the petitioners who wished to abolish these fairs, said that he had made inquires; that he saw no reason why the people's fairs should be taken away from them.

It was the work of the Guild to take care whenever a fair was threatened to petition against it being extinguished, and to supply the information that would satisfy the Home Secretary that the people still wanted their fair.

The Importance of Saving the London Fairs.

He asked his hearers to consider the tremendous growth of London. A population equal to that of a moderate provincial city was added to London every year. Great London Town was spreading out and absorbing the small towns and villages in its onward march. In a very few years the towns like those he had already named would be swallowed up in the onward march of great London.

To his mind it became increasingly necessary—and in this view he was far from being alone—that these old charter fairs should be saved in order that the people of the future might have the wholesome and healthy open-air amusement that modern fairs provided.

To many who, like himself, regarded this question from the higher ground of public service, it was of the utmost importance that in years to come these old charter fairs should remain to bless the toilers and to give some little cessation from the labour of their lives, that they might be let free for a while to have some little enjoyment of life.

The old charters secured not only the right to hold the fair, but the equally important right of the people to claim a holiday whilst the fair lasted.

The second victory this year of the Guild Executive Council was the dropping out of the Handsworth Corporation Bill of the penal clauses against the show business.

When Parliament met this year, only two Corporation Bills contained clauses that threatened the interests of the fairground. Heywood wanted extraordinary powers over cinematograph exhibitions—in fact, a Cinematograph Act of its own.

When the Guild pointed out to the Heywood Corporation that every provision for public safety was secured by the general Act of Parliament under which cinematograph shows were fully controlled and licensed, the Corporation withdrew the objectionable clauses and the matter came to a speedy end. It was not so with the Handsworth Corporation. What that Council sought was power to stop entirely the show business within their boundaries. All the worst features of previous ill-considered attempts to penalise the travelling showman were embodied in the Handsworth Bill. Negotiations with a view to a settlement were at once opened up with the authorities at Handsworth, and with some promise of success. However, the Guild, in order to secure a hearing against the measure, had to send a petition against it, and set to work to prepare the case for the showmen. In these cases the way to secure peace is to be ready for war. Everything was in readiness. The legal advisers of the Corporation must have prevailed with that body for only that week the Guild had received the welcome news that the clauses objected to by the showmen would be dropped out of the Bill. This constituted the end of the Guild's Parliamentary defence work for the present year. It was a notable victory, and one that he was proud to be able to tell that meeting.

The General Work of the Guild.

The signal victories at Mitcham and at Handsworth were but significant incidents in the increasingly important work of the Guild. Local bylaws, private bill legislation, the vindication of show life in the public press, the education of a just public opinion with regard to the people's fairs and holidays; in fact, the whole range of their work had this end in view—the uplifting and the betterment of the showman's business and avocation in life. He confidently appealed to them to support the Guild, and to make it more and more fitted for its necessary and important work.

Mr. James R. Styles, in eloquent terms, proposed a vote of thanks to the Rev. T. Horne. He referred to the great work Mr. Horne had done for the whole body of showmen. A recent writer on current events had said: "Here is a great emergency. Where is the man to undertake it and to rightly lead the people." With showmen he averred there were no such difficulties. However great the emergency, they had the man to meet it. He regarded their Organising Chaplain as their leader and their friend, their advocate and counsellor for every difficulty that beset their life. It was a pleasure to him and an honour to work with the leaders of the movement. He moved, with great gratification, the best thanks of the conference to their Chaplain for his able address. The motion was seconded by Mr. C. Shaw and carried by acclamation.

A like compliment was paid to the Chairman and the conference closed.

The following subscriptions were taken at the gathering, and subsequently a number of new members were enrolled: P. R. Collins, 5s.; J. Caddick, jun., 5s.; F. J. Green, 5s.; J. R. Styles 5s.; G. Carter, 2s. 6d.; C. Shaw, 2s.; J. Jones, 1s.; J. Clark, 1s.; A. Taylor, 1s.; J. Cordwell, jun., 1s.

Guild Service at Night.

The usual evening meeting of the Guild took place in Collins's Wonderland Theatre; the congregation was a large one, and deeply interested in the service. Assisting the Guild chaplain were the Church Mission Band and Choir, led by Capt. and Mrs. Codling, of the Wrexham Branch of the Church Army. Three of the Parish Church clergy were present, and the Rev. T. Horne conducted the service and preached.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our Districts Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.
LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HORACE COLE, The Empire, Liverpool.
SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.—MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.
TOURS COMMITTEE.—LLEWELLYN JOHNS and DISTRICT MANAGERS.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists and Agents wishing to submit TRIALS for their Acts in the North, should apply to the Manager, as Matinées are held every Wednesday for that purpose.

N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This issue of Shares is for the purpose of acquiring the established profitable Electric Picture Theatre at Kensington High-street, and of providing working capital for extending the business in other quarters where options on suitable sites have been or may be secured.

The Company will acquire a twenty-one years' lease of the new Theatre in Kensington High-street (hereinafter referred to as the Kensington Picture Theatre), which has been fitted up in a luxurious manner, all the latest improvements in construction and apparatus having been adopted. The regulations of the London County Council under the new Act have been complied with, the Theatre having been constructed in accordance therewith. This Theatre, having seating accommodation for 400 persons, was opened on Sept. 27 last by the Mayor of Fulham, and the Receipts up to date have been highly satisfactory. In an appreciative article, the "Morning Post" of Nov. 26 states: "On the whole, the Kensington Picture Theatre is much the best thing of its kind yet seen."

In addition to the above, negotiations have been entered into to acquire suitable sites and premises at East Dulwich, Tooting, Kilburn, Knightsbridge, Brixton, Islington, and Holborn.

Mr. Arthur W. Osborn, M.S.A., who has acted as Architect for the Vendors in connection with the Kensington Picture Theatre, in his Report, dated March 11, 1910, states:—

"In my opinion, all the Sites and Properties which I have inspected are in excellent positions for the purpose of Moving Picture Theatres, and cannot fail to be remunerative, if opened and fitted up in the same manner in which the Kensington Picture Theatre has been equipped."

The possibilities of lucrative employment of capital in this class of business are immense. The first cost of fitting-up premises and the necessary outfit is comparatively small, whilst the earnings are obtained at prices of admission within the reach of all. The performances given are generally continuous, and the spectators can enter and leave at any time, the pictures being repeated without interval and the programme changed twice a week or oftener if requisite. Animated pictures appeal to a section of the public to whom the ordinary Theatre or Music Hall offers little or no attraction, and once the Electric Picture Theatre is established, it becomes an institution, and receives the constant patronage of the surrounding residents.

PROFITS.

The Receipts for the twenty-six weeks ended April 2, 1910, during which the Kensington Picture Theatre has been opened, amounted to	£2171	8	1
While the Expenses, including depreciation, were	1596	0	6
Leaving a Net Profit from the working of this Theatre of	£575	7	7

An average of £22 2s. 7d. per week.

During the initial period, and until the Theatre became better known, the receipts were comparatively small. The takings for the last three months, however, were £1258 19s. 7d., equal to £96 16s. 10d. per week. Deducting the average weekly expenses, based on the figures certified by the Accountants (which include depreciation), the profit would work out at £35 9s. per week for the three months ended April 2.

According to the Report of Mr. Arthur W. Osborn, if the Company's Capital is fully subscribed, it would enable twenty-five theatres to be operated. Basing calculations upon the results obtained at the Kensington Picture Theatre, and taking the weekly profit at only £20, the figures would work out as follows:—

25 Theatres returning a profit per week of £20 each would amount per annum to	£26,000
Less Estimated Adminstration Charges	2,500
	£23,500
To pay 10 per cent. upon the total Preference Capital would take	4,850
Leaving for further distribution (subject to provision for reserve)	£18,650

That this is a fair estimate of profits is borne out by the report of ELECTRIC THEATRES (1908), Limited, presented to the Meeting held on Feb. 1 last, when the net profits were reported to be over £15,000 from the working of eighteen Theatres for the period ended Dec. 30, 1909, at which Meeting the Chairman said:—"I venture to say it is very few Companies which can claim to have paid 40 per cent. during the first year."

At the Meeting of the BIOGRAPH THEATRES, Limited, held on Dec. 15, 1909, when a final dividend for the Quarter ended Nov. 2, equivalent to 20 per cent. per annum, was declared (making 17½ per cent. for the year), the Chairman, Sir Brodrick Hartwell, Bart., said:—"Our receipts have consistently increased from quarter to quarter. . . . We are enormously increasing the number of our patrons, and proving that this class of entertainment is no mere passing craze, but has come to stay as surely as has the daily paper. I repeat again the belief I gave utterance to at the Statutory Meeting, held in February last, that the time is not far distant when the moving picture hall, with its daily changing display of the world's events, will be found everywhere, and will be the popular supplement to the daily paper."

An Agreement has been entered into by which the Company will secure the services, for a period of five years, of Mr. J. E. Park, of Bank Buildings, Kingsway, W.C., the present proprietor of the Kensington Picture Theatre, to act as Managing-Director after allotment.

The minimum subscription upon which the Directors may proceed to allotment is fixed by the Articles of Association at 25 per cent. of the Cumulative Participating Preference Shares now offered for subscription, but as 15,000 of these Shares have been underwritten at a commission of 10 per cent. on the nominal value of such Shares, the Directors will proceed to allotment immediately on the closing of the lists.

The qualification of a Director shall be the holding, in his own right, of Shares, of any class or classes, in the Capital of the Company of the nominal value of not less than £100.

Application will be made in due course to the Committee of the London Stock Exchange to grant a settlement in the Shares.

Applications for the Cumulative Participating Preference Shares may be made upon the form below, and sent with deposit to the Bankers of the Company. If an allotment is not made in full, the balance overpaid on application will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment. If no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned in full.

Complete Prospectuses may be obtained from the Bankers, Solicitors, and Auditors, and at the Offices of the Company.

Dated April 14, 1910.

THIS APPLICATION FORM MAY BE USED.

To be sent with a deposit of 1s. per Share to the London Joint Stock Bank, Limited, 120, High Holborn, London, W.C., Head Office, or Branches.

FILM GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

Picture Theatres, Ltd.

This company is announced with a capital of £50,000, of which 48,493 ten per cent. cumulative participating preference shares of £1 each are now offered for subscription at par. These shares are also preferential as to capital, being further entitled to a moiety of any surplus profits after provision has been made for reserve. The company will acquire a twenty-one years' lease of an established profitable electric picture theatre at Kensington High-street, capable of seating four hundred persons, and at the present issue of shares will further provide working capital for extending the business to other districts where options have been or may be secured. During the half-year ending the 2nd inst., the receipts of the Kensington Picture Theatre amounted to £2,171, and the net profit, after providing for depreciation, was £575, giving an average of over £22 per week. For the second half of the period the profit is estimated to have averaged over £35 per week.

Twenty-five Theatres to be Operated.

The intention is to operate twenty-five theatres, and on the basis of a weekly profit of £20 each theatre the dividend on the preference capital would be covered, and £18,650 left for further distribution, subject to reserve as above. Mr. George Ashton, a director of Ashton and Mitchell, Ltd. (Ashton and Mitchell's Royal Agency), is the chairman of the board, which also includes Mr. Frank E. Butcher, of the firm of W. Butcher and Sons, Ltd., cinematograph manufacturers, Farringdon-avenue, E.C. The subscription list closes on Thursday next.

Cricks and Martin's Enterprise.

Messrs. Cricks and Martin will send a free poster for each of their comic and dramatic pictures to any showman making application for the same. The display of the posters outside a show has a good effect on business—at all events they are worth a trial, and a post card will bring a sample. Messrs. Cricks and Martin are also busy preparing for the issue of "pictorials" with their subjects.

English Sweetmeat-Making.

Messrs. Cricks and Martin have produced one of the most notable films of the month in English Sweetmeat Making. The production of delicacies of this description calls for much ingenuity and the use of machinery of an extremely clever character, and the schoolboy will, if possible, take a still deeper interest in his bull's-eye and the lady in her chocolates, after learning the secret of their manufacture from this picture. It is, by the way, a matter for congratulation that an English firm should have taken the lead in this interesting and educational side of cinematography, and showmen who have not already had them would find it a good policy to feature The Watchmaking Industry, Candle Making, The Birth of a Big Gun, and other Lion's Head industrials, in addition to that already mentioned.

One of Tyler's Best.

My Maid is too Slow is an Eclair-Tyler film, 470ft. in length. A drawing-room scene introduces us to an awkward servant maid, who waits on her master and mistress and a gentleman guest with a provoking deliberation of manner which brings a sharp reproof from the lady. The latter has no effect whatsoever on the maid. A sharp push from her mistress, which sends her to her knees, causes her to remain there in a thoughtful posture for some time. The husband sees in the street a hawker offering for sale a battery which has the effect of quickening the movements of all to whom it is applied. He hastens to buy one, and at home shows it to his wife, with great glee at having discovered a means of putting some life into the girl. The battery is attached to one of the lady's old blouses, and the girl is summoned into the room and made to put it on. The results are remarkable.

Rough on the Poet.

Tylers have issued an amusing film, entitled A Poet at any Cost. A young married couple are annoyed at breakfast by an individual, who from an attic window opposite persists in addressing verse to the young woman. The husband goes to the poet's room and throws him out of the window. The poet falls on a porter, who throws him through a shop window. He mounts a lamp-post and continues to recite his verse. He is soon dislodged by people who are tired of his rhymes, and eventually find his way to the police-station.

New Aid to Recruiting.

A correspondent makes the suggestion that the popularity of the cinematograph shows now running throughout England should be utilised for the benefit of the Territorial Army. If the programme of each hall included a film showing the various arms at work, it would stimulate recruiting throughout the land. The time is close at hand for all regiments to proceed to camp, and this year particularly would produce some good films.

New Non-Flam Cinematograph Film.

At the Photographic Exhibition a demonstration has been given by the Sheffield Photo Company with a non-flam film. It is claimed for the new material that it may be exposed to the rays of the arc lamps for half an hour and not ignite. On the occasion under review, after the film, which was taken by the company, was completed, the operator allowed the intense rays of the lantern to play upon it for three minutes. The effect was merely a certain amount of frizzling. Again, when touched with a naked light, the new film burnt slowly, and could be easily extinguished, whereas the old type immediately flares up. The material experimented with is certainly a great improvement, and reduces the danger of serious fire to a minimum.

"By-Ways of Byron."

There was a new departure in electric theatres last Wednesday afternoon, when the management of the Electric Palace at Marble Arch presented a picture-play by Mr. Gilbart-Smith, entitled The By-ways of Byron. The audience saw the whole of Byron's romantic career, and lived for a time amid the scenes that Byron saw, including those which inspired portions of "Childe Harold." As the films appeared on the screen descriptive verses written and recited by Mr. Gilbart-Smith helped the audience to recreate each episode in the poet's career, including his famous swim across the Hellespont.

Percy Whiteley Comes of Age.

A benefit performance was held on Saturday last at the New Central Hall, Silverwell-lane, Bolton, on behalf of Percy Whiteley, son of the well-known amusement caterer, Mr. Thomas Whiteley, to celebrate the coming of age of the young gentleman. The function was a great success, and a very long programme was submitted. Mr. Percy was presented with a cheque for £25 and a motor-car by his father. His mother gave him a valuable camera for taking animated pictures. His eldest sister and brother-in-law presented him with a gold watch and guard; his sister Julia gave him a gold hunter; his sister Dolly presented him with a solid silver cigar-box; and his youngest sister, Kate, with a cabinet decanter. A splendid diamond ring, a silver-mounted pocket-book, a gold scarf-pin, a dressing-case, a silk muffler, a silver-mounted walking-stick, a silver match-box, and a cigarette-case were among the other numerous presents received.

The Globe Electric Theatre, High-street, Clapham, was opened on Thursday last. There is to be a complete change of pictures every Monday and Thursday. Two of the finest bioscopes have been installed, namely, Gaumont's Chronos, and the proprietors have been enabled to secure the services of one of the best operators in Great Britain, Mr. A. E. Kidd (late chief operator to the Gaumont Co., Ltd). Mr. Manville Morton is the resident-manager. He has relinquished a similar post with another well-known company to take up the management of the Clapham Globe. It is the intention of the management to run weekly competitions, for which valuable prizes will be given, to both ladies and gentlemen.

"Armed Boers" Invade Greenwich.

Great excitement was recently caused in Greenwich and districts by the appearance of a commando of Boers, who were fully armed and mounted on sturdy ponies. The crowds who lined the streets were quite peaceful, and cheered the invading forces, which turned out to be a splendid advertisement idea for Selig's picture, The Highlander's Defiance, then being exhibited at the Greenwich Electric Theatre. On Saturday last a grand naval night was given to augment the funds of the Greenwich Battalion Navy Cadets. It was an animated scene when at 6 p.m. these smart lads marched down Bridge-street with colours flying, headed by their band. At the main entrance they were posted as a guard of honour to receive His Worship the Mayor of Greenwich (Chas. Newberry, Esq., J.P.) and the Mayoress. Mr. J. W. Chapman (the manager), who is a lieutenant in the corps, during the afternoon gave a stirring illustrated recital, entitled "The Pride of the Troop." As a result of the entertainment, a substantial amount was handed to the funds, and the Mayor expressed himself as being thoroughly pleased with the pictures and with the way the entertainment was organised.

Hurndall's King's Hall.

At Hurndall's King's Hall, in London-road, S.E., 5s. is paid on picture nights (Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays) to fortunate people who have been cinematographed unawares in the street, and whose counterfeit presentment appears on the screen. On Thursday nights King's Hall is given up to boxing tournaments, and on Tuesdays and Saturdays to dancing.

Kensington Picture Palace.

The Kensington Picture Theatre programme for this week has included A Poet at Any Cost (Tyler), Sheep with the Six Legs (Tyler), Double Sight (Pathé's), New South Wales (Tyler), His Father's Voice (Gaumont), Coco Turns Nigger for Love (Cines), The Wrong Road (Pathé's), and The Final Settlement (American Biograph).

King's Hall, East.

The Commercial-road King's Hall has been open just twelve months. Before its cinematograph conversion the hall was used for Jewish wedding festivities. Large Biblical paintings still adorn the walls—three on each side, and one on either hand of the screen, which measures 16ft. by 14ft. The arched ceiling is of varnished oak. Between, over and above the mural artistry, red paperhangings impart to one's environment a warm, cosy appearance. The auditorium is 80ft. long by 30ft. wide. Mr. George Stone is the manager.

Latest Palace Pictures.

Paris Herself Again most aptly describes an admirable new series of "Kinemacolor" life-motion pictures in the actual tints of Nature lately taken from the deck of a Seine steamboat by Mr. Charles Urban, now an attraction to the Palace Theatre.

Strand Theatre de Luxe.

The programme seen at the Theatre de Luxe this week has included the films The Usurper, A Child's Faith, The Old Maid and the Burglar, His Just Deserts, The Trials of a Chauffeur, and A Trip to the Moon.

New Bath Theatre.

Mr. Bannister Howard's new electric theatre in Westgate-street, Bath, was opened on Saturday last. On the preceding Friday a private reception was held, at which many of the prominent town officials and citizens were present. The building is a well-designed one, and apparatus is installed which reduces to the minimum any risk of an accidental fire.

Bath.

New Dublin Picture Palace.

The Cinematograph Theatre, Lower Sackville-street, Dublin, was opened to the public last Saturday afternoon, and the attendance at the performances showed that the innovation is likely to prove very successful. The theatre is cosy and snug, and equipped with every comfort. It has a beautiful panelled ceiling, and the walls are panelled and decorated in red and white in the Georgian style, while the floors are carpeted with velvet pile. The seating, with separate chairs, is in green velvet, and the curtains and other hangings are made to harmonise.

For years the pretty and quaint old town of Harrow has languished as regards entertainments. Occasional concerts have been given in the public hall, and one night touring companies have occasionally visited the place. An enterprising company has, we are informed, now erected an up-to-date electric theatre, which will be opened on Saturday next.

Lancashire Cinematograph Theatres.

The Lancashire Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd., which has a capital of £50,000, divided into 100,000 shares of 10s. each, is about to make an issue of 100,000 shares of 10s. each at par. The number of electric theatres is quickly increasing in various parts of the country, and Manchester and its neighbouring towns and districts are regarded as amongst the most promising fields for enterprises of this kind, having regard to the large surrounding population. As regards Manchester itself, cinematograph entertainments are given at the Grand Theatre, Peter-street; the Opera House, Salford; the Central Hall, Blackfriars-road; the King's Hall, City-road; the Picture Palace, Newton Heath; the Central Hall, Longsight; and a few other places.

New Theatre for Salford.

The Lancashire Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd., have arranged to build an electric theatre in Regent-road, Salford, with a seating accommodation of 800, as well as other similar theatres in Manchester, Bolton, and Wigan.

New Theatre for Sheffield.

A company has just been registered, under the title of "The Sheffield and District Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd.," with a capital of £50,000 in 10s. shares. The company has been formed for the purpose of erecting in the city of Sheffield and district cinematograph theatres on up-to-date lines. A most advantageous site has already been secured in the centre of the city, where it is proposed to erect and complete within three months a handsome block of buildings, to be known as Electra Palace, capable of seating 1,000 persons.

CINEMATOGRAPH OPERATORS.

The annual luncheon of the cinematograph operators will this year surpass their previous efforts to organise a popular function. The result is largely due to the energy and tact shown by Mr. A. Malcolm, the president, who will preside on Tuesday next. The vindictive aunt was acted with grim fidelity by Miss Elspeth Dudgeon; Miss Muriel Pope ably seconded as the shallow and scheming Jenny; and the Dick of Mr. Norman M'Keown was well rendered. The lawyer, Caleb Crass, is played with quiet dignity by Mr. Franc Stoney; while his heroic son, Dr. Allan Crass, is finely rendered by Mr. Reginald Stephens. Mr. P. Ramsey Foreman as Bertram Bridge acts the villain with ability; and his accomplice is strongly rendered by Miss Rita Trekella as Cynthia Bridge. A spirited portrayal is that of an ex-lady detective by Miss Josephine Middleton; Miss Ella Dixon as Nina May amusingly depicts a chorus girl of free-and-easy manners; while the elderly Mrs. Slack is well played by Miss Dorothy Maude. The other parts are satisfactorily filled by Messrs. Harry Newman, H. Ainger, L. Fass, R. Strete, and Jack Arthur.

Metropole, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Under the Iron Heel forms the attraction here. The Scottish Cup Final proves an item of interest on the Bioscope.

THE KAISER AND THE STAGE.

"The essence of the patriotic plays produced under his Majesty's supervision is what the Social Democrats call 'Hurra-Patriotism,'" says "Eulenspiegel" in an article on "The German Emperor and the Theatre," in the Fortnightly. "Like Nicholas Nickelby and Vincent Crummles' real pump the playwrights enjoying Imperial patronage have to write their plays around a definite object, the throne. The Hohenzollernstücke, to quote his Majesty's own phrase, seek to show the monarch in an ideal light, as the father of his people, the Elect of God, 'unbeirrt' by such modern inventions as constitutions and parliaments, diffusing a ray of mild beneficence from the throne. Some incident, generally historical, runs through the play, which ends in the triumph of Right and the apotheosis of monarchy, i.e., Hohenzollerndom amid a blaze of scenic splendour, brilliant dresses, and flashing accoutrements. These plays call for little acting but make great demands on the Régisseur, and it is just this office that the Kaiser discharges with the most conspicuous success. The finer nuances of acting do not interest him or encounter from him the same recognition as from George of Saxe-Meiningen. What William II. loves is a stage full of supers, a scene like the March of the Priests in Aida, or the Entry of the Guests in Tannhäuser.

"At present the Emperor takes most interest in the Berlin Opera. The Opera House is but a stone's throw from the Castle and he can easily run in and conduct rehearsals. It is entirely owing to his unflagging efforts that the productions at the Berlin Opera have attained to such a pitch of perfection in everything that concerns mounting, so that the revivals of Aida and Les Huguenots are now regarded as standing without a rival both for the historical accuracy of the dresses and the richness and taste of the setting. When the rehearsals of a play, in which the Kaiser is interested, are under way, he loses no time in going to the theatre to see whether the instructions which he has appended to the stage directions in the MS. are being properly carried out. Some morning when the vast stage of the opera is humming with activity the well-known primrose-coloured motor-car will drive up to the entrance, and the Emperor, accompanied only by a single adjutant, will emerge. In three minutes William II. will be seated at a big business-like table placed in the stalls, before him a pile of paper and an array of pencils. When he is in the house there is no doubt whatever in anybody's mind as to who is conducting the rehearsal. His General Manager stands at his side in the darkened auditorium and conveys his Majesty's instructions to the stage, for the Kaiser never interrupts the actors himself. He makes a sign to von Hülsen, scribbles a note on a sheet of paper, while the manager, who is the pattern of unruffled suavity, just raises his hand, and the performance ceases abruptly. There is a confabulation, the Emperor explaining, with that wealth of gesture peculiar to him, his views on the grouping of the supers, the positions of the principals, the dresses, the uniforms, the arms, using anything, pencil, penholder, or even his sword, to illustrate his meaning. Again and again up to a dozen times the supers will be put through their paces until the Imperial Régisseur is entirely satisfied that a dramatic effect has been obtained. All those who have been privileged to witness this Imperial stage-manager at work agree in asserting that the Kaiser possesses a most remarkable flair for the dramatic. Very often one of his suggestions about an entrance, a piece of 'business,' or a pose, will be found on trial to enhance considerably the effect of the scene. A story is told illustrative of the Emperor's insistence on accuracy and the minute attention he pays to details at rehearsal. After his visit to Ofen-Pest some years ago for the jubilee celebrations, which had included a number of Hungarian national dances, the Kaiser stopped a rehearsal of the ballet at the Berlin Opera while a Czardas was in progress and pointed out to the baleteuses certain minor details which were not correct.

"In his attitude towards the Court actors and actresses the Emperor displays that charm of manner which bewitches all with whom he comes in contact. He calls them 'Meine Schauspieler,' which makes one think of 'His Majesty's Servants' at Shakespeare's Globe Theatre. This practice of the Kaiser sometimes has amusing results. Once when the Theatre Royal comedian, Dr. Max Pohl, had been suddenly taken ill, the Emperor said to an acquaintance, 'Fancy, my Pohl had a seizure yesterday,' and the acquaintance, thinking he was referring to a pet dog, replied commiseratingly, 'Oh! poor brute.' After rehearsal the Emperor often goes on to the stage and talks to the actors about their parts.

"At the recent revival of Les Huguenots, upon which the Kaiser lavished his whole attention to secure the most absolute accuracy of costume and armour, he assembled the principals around him and delivered a lengthy lecture on the period of the play. In the interval he was so occupied in discoursing to the assistant stage-manager on the weapons used in the production that he failed to hear the bell for the next act, with the result that the resumption of the opera was considerably delayed. Apropos, it is interesting to note that during the first years of his reign the Kaiser was an enthusiastic Wagnerian, but has latterly entirely forsaken Wagner for Italian and light German (Nicolai and Lortzing) opera.

"The Emperor has shown particular attention to the numerous Americans who sing at the Berlin Opera. One of his little jokes is to call Mr. Putnam Griswold, the American bass, who sings the kingly rôles in Wagner, 'my best colleague.' When he received the singer after the recent revival of Aida, in which Mr. Griswold played the King of Egypt in a particularly swarthy make-up, the Kaiser jestingly remarked, 'Thank heavens, Mr. Griswold, you are not as formidable as you look!' At the Berlin première of Puccini's La Bohème last year he sent for the American tenor, Mr. Francis McLellan, who sang Rodolfo, and Miss Florence Easton (who in private life is Mrs. McLennan), who sang Musette, and congratulated them on their renderings. The Emperor commented on the unique circumstance of a husband and wife appearing together in principal rôles in grand opera, and expressed the opinion that it was a good example which he should like to see followed.

"With his cosmopolitan tastes, it is a matter of course that the Emperor attends all performances given by foreign companies at the Royal theatres.

"When Sir Herbert Tree visited Berlin last year the Emperor witnessed the performance of Richard II. on the opening night, when he had a talk with Sir Herbert on the character of the unfortunate king. He also saw Antony and Cleopatra. He gave Miss Viola Tree a diamond bracelet and sent the English actor an unusually high Prussian order. His interest in the English actors did not prevent his going several times to the Monte Carlo Opera Company, which was performing at the Royal Opera House during the same week. The visits of these foreign companies attract His Majesty not only for artistic reasons, but because they afford him an opportunity of seeing how their stage settings compare with his and of collecting useful hints for future productions."

MR. EDITOR.—SIR,—In the last issue of The Era my name is included in the cast for the forthcoming production of The Dawn of a To-Morrow. Will you kindly correct this, as I am not appearing in the play.—Faithfully yours, FELIX FITT, 17, Effra-road, Brixton, S.W., April 16.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, April 18, the Drama by Frederick Melville entitled

"THE BAD GIRL OF THE FAMILY"

The astounding success of Mr. Frederick Melville's drama at the Aldwych Theatre naturally caused great interest in the visit of his company to the King's Theatre this week. Thus the house was crowded to its capacity on Monday evening, and to judge by the laughter and applause the audience thoroughly enjoyed the piece. Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves renders the part of Lieut Richard Marsh, R.N., in incisive and manly style, cleverly earning approbation in his painstaking efforts to win the girl of his choice. A thoroughly capable villain is Mr. Geo. R. Montford as Harry Gordon, and no better sign of his undeniable success can be stated than the howls of execration which greeted him on his calls before the curtain. Mr. Fred K. W. Freeman is a dignified Lord Erskine, and Inspector Laurence is well played by Mr. Charles Eustace. Mr. Tom May makes a very laughable Sammy Snozzle, the audience fully appreciating his comical antics and acting. Admirable is the Barney Gordon of Mr. Luke Forster, his enactment of the stage Jew leading to much merriment. A neat and distinctly skilful representation of Jerry Holmes is given by Mr. George Belmore, and Mr. James Selwin is good as the Rev. Mr. Evans. The part of John Moore is capably personated by Mr. R Duncan Bell. Miss Violet Crossley in the title-rôle (Bess Moore) is excellently placed, her free and easy acting just fitting the character. As her vindictive sister, Honour Moore, Miss Margaret Tueskie displays impassioned acting of merit. Mrs. Moore is pleasantly undertaken by Miss Guinevere Shilton, and Miss Daisie Cook is as winsome a Gladys Erskine as could be wished. The eighteen scenes are all of exceedingly good quality.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

The Geisha has been played here this week with great success. Miss Aimée Grey appears with immense credit as O Mimosa San. She has a bewitching presence and style, and her singing is delightful. As Molly Seamore, Miss Adela Crispin wins all hearts, her dainty dancing being keenly appreciated; and as Juliette Diamanti Miss Renée Reel contributes a clever and agreeable performance; Miss Mary Morrison as Lady Constance Wynne acts with tact and skill; and the guests are effectively embodied by Misses Olive Eileen, Cecilia Morris, and Jessie Hale. Miss Dorothy Clancy as Tom Stanley is full of briskness and vitality; and Mr. Walter Johnstone Douglas as Fairfax acts with manly confidence and sings with strength, spirit, and feeling. Messrs. Sam Lockridge, Hartwell D. Morice, and Sydney Langworth are good as the other officers; and Mr. Herbert Uzielli as Captain Katana pleases by his refined vocalism; Mr. Harry Reynolds as Takemine and Mr. Lionel Brahmam as the Marquis Imari are excellent; and the important part of Wun Hi has an admirably alert exponent in Mr. Edward Carlton. The mounting and dressing are liberal and effective.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, April 18, the Opera entitled

"ERNANI."

Ernani, which was presented on Monday by Cav. P. Castellano's opera company, formed the foundation of Verdi's European fame, and its bold, virile music is typical of the composer's earliest style. Signora Protti's vivacity and charm are exactly suited to the part of Elvira, the maid with many lovers, and the florid music brings out the range and strength of her voice to perfection. She is a good actress as well as a good singer, and the part suits her to a nicety. Signor Barbato as Ernani exhibits a voice of wonderful power, which is heard above all others in the strenuous choruses. With a little added sympathy and cultivation he should take a high place as an operatic artist. Signor Massia is well placed as the stern, relentless, proud Don Silva, and his deep, sonorous voice is heard to advantage. Signor Modesti makes a good Carlo V., and the King's song of pardon and freedom to the conspirators in Act III. is very finely rendered, and receives a well-deserved encore. The minor rôles of Giovanni, enacted by Signora Massia, and Scudiero and Iago, by Signori Antonini and Quintana, are capably rendered. Ugonotti was given on Tuesday; Rigoletto —a very first-rate performance, with especially noteworthy renderings of the name-part of the jester by Modesti, Barbato as the Duke, and Garlosca as Gilda—at Wednesday's matinée, Lucia di Lammermoor in the evening, Carmen on Thursday, and I' Puritani on Friday. Il Barbiere di Seviglia is set down for this afternoon, and this evening, being the last night of the three weeks' season, will witness a grand farewell performance in which all the artists will appear in acts from Rigoletto, Lucia di Lammermoor, Faust, and Ernani.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, April 18, the Play, in Four Acts, entitled

"THE SIGN OF THE CROSS."

This favourite piece is attracting good audiences to the Shakespeare this week. Excellently staged and enacted by a really capital company, under the direction of Mr. William Greet, the piece was received on Monday evening with unstinted applause. Mr. W. Lawson Butt presented a striking portrait of Marcus Superbus, and graphically delineated the dauntless courage and passionate nature of the character. Mr. W. Mayne Lynton was very successful as Nero, and fully suggested the infirmness of this dissolute Emperor, both in appearance and delivery. Mr. Charles Aldred rendered the scheming Tigellinus in good style, and acted throughout in the most convincing manner. The brutal Licinius was excellently portrayed by Mr. J. Wetherall; and Mr. Frank Wood was very amusing as the wine-sodden Glabrio, his quaint characterisation and broad comedy-acting meriting warm praise. Mr. Harry Jones submitted a careful study of the effeminate Philodemus; and Mr. H. Thurston Harris as Servilius and Mr. Martin Palmer as Strabo contributed valuable assistance. Mr. Phil Ellis was an efficient Virturius; and Mr. Walter Fleet as Favius and Mr. Henri Raymond as Titus invested their rôles of the unfortunate Christians with the right tone of sincerity and resignation. In the rôle of Mercia Miss Evelyn Hope quickly won the sympathy of the audience, and her sterling performance stamps her as an actress of considerable ability. The steadfast religious faith of the character was depicted in a quiet yet telling manner, which made a deep impression on the audience. Miss Beryl Hamilton was very good as Poppœa; and Miss Esmé Lee fully brought out the fascinations of the irresponsible Dacia. Miss Dorothy Lart deserves warm praise for her clever impersonation of Berenice; and Miss Mary Newcombe made the most of her opportunity as Ancaria. Miss Winifred Delevanti enacted the part of Stephanus with boyish grace and emotion; and Miss R. Chapman rendered good support as Melos.

THE BRIXTON.

On Monday, April 18, the Play, entitled

"SAPHO."

A return visit is being paid here by Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's representative company with a dramatised version, by Ada G. Abbott, of Alphonse Daudet's "Sapho," and good houses have ruled. In the part of Fanny Legrand, "the worst woman in Paris," Miss Ada Abbott scores a success, making a deep impression by her realistic acting. Mr. Edward Ouston submits a clever presentation of Jean Gaussin; Mr. Edwin Keene proved very amusing as Uncle Cesaire; and Mr. John Drake does justice to the rôle of Henri Dechalette. Flamant finds a useful exponent in Mr. Stephen Crossley; and Mr. John Lester is an able Caoudal. Mr. Weedon Ross is a capital representative of Old Legrand; Miss Ethel Tinsley very admirably sustains the part of Aunt Divonne; and Miss Florence North makes an engaging Lucy. Miss Rose Duncan is prominent as La Corinne; and Miss Marjorie Tennant is well cast as Michette. La Gouvernerie is capably represented by Mr. Jas. Meadows, and Hettema by Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown. Sapho is well mounted, the scenery being typical of Parisian Bohemian life. On Thursday and Friday evenings Trilby was presented, with Mr. Ernest R. Abbott as Svengali and Miss Ada Abbott in the title-rôle, supported by a capital company.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, April 18, the Drama

"WAS SHE TO BLAME?"

This well-written drama, from the skilled hand of Mrs. F. G. Kimberley, is drawing excellent audiences to the above house. It is very well staged, and its interpretation leaves little to be desired. The company is headed by Mr. F. G. Kimberley, who gives an exceedingly good character study as William Clark, a broken-down actor; Mr. George Keene is a manly Captain George Courtney; as the Vicar of Beechwood, John Norman, Mr. Henry Rutland makes an excellent clergyman; Mr. Clavering Craig as Frank Rosselle, alias Franklyn Harcourt, is all that a stage villain should be; Mr. Chas. Rogers does effective work as Dr. Forbes; Mr. John Arthurs gives a good rendering of a Jew pawnbroker, Joseph Isaacs; as Jim Harford Mr. A. Smith is quite satisfactory, as also is Mr. Harry Stone, the village police-constable; as Mrs. Kate Rosselle, a retired actress, Mrs. F. G Kimberley (Miss L. Addison) acts with power and much charm; Miss Constance Laurier is a pathetic and sweet Lilian Norman; and Miss Ellen Beverley does well as Mary Norman, the Vicar's wife. Miss Florence Steyne is laughable as the drunken Alice Firearms. Some extremely funny comedy is provided by Mr. Francis Cavanagh as Timothy Swales and Miss Nita Owen as Sarah Swales.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 18, the Musical Comedy

"OUR MISS GIBBS."

Crowded houses, spirited performances, and constant encores have been the order at Kennington Theatre this week, where Mr. Robert Arthur's run of musical comedy reached its climax with the production of Our Miss Gibbs. The piece is presented by Mr. George Dance's company, now nearing the termination of a successful provincial tour, and nothing is wanting in dressing, staging, chorus, singing, or orchestration to appeal to those who want an evening's genuine amusement. The chorus is particularly good, and the White City scene is one of the most picturesque stage spectacles that have been seen at Kennington for a long time. The principals are all familiar figures in the musical comedy world, and the company is as well-balanced as it is strong in talent. Mr. Tom Shelford scored a big success on Monday as the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint, an amateur criminal, introducing a lot of genuine comedy. As the Earl of St. Ives Mr. E. Darrell was very good. The part of Miss Gibbs was admirably represented by Miss Kathleen Courtney, a bright and winsome lady who sings well and acts with much vivacity, her song "In Yorkshire" receiving a loud recall. Miss Gladys Ivery was an excellent Lady Elizabeth, singing delightfully. The life and soul of the piece was undoubtedly Mr. Theodore Leonard (Timothy Gibbs), who is a comedian of the first water, and whenever he was about—which was most of the time—the house was in roars. The rôle of Madame Jeanne was adequately filled by Miss Nancy Hervyn, and Mr. Henry de Salla was well placed as Mr. Bravis, the family solicitor. Mr. Craufurd Kent scored a big triumph as Lord Eynsford, his fine voice being used to great advantage, the song "My Yorkshire lassie" bringing down the house, whilst he acted with consummate ability. Miss Winifred Knightly was very successful as the Duchess of Minster, and Miss Jennie Richards deserves mention as Mrs. Farquhar, an impecunious Irish lady. The other members of the cast also played their parts in excellent style, those who should not be overlooked including Mr. R. M. Strachan, a wonderfully good Mr. Toplady, manager at Garrod's; Mr. J. E. Stevenson (Slithers), Mr. A. Cavendish (the taxicabby), Mr. M. Stephen (Mr. Amalfy), and the Misses Violet Lingard, Ella Merton, Susie Beardon, Marion Gordon, Cissie Gordon, Kitty Mead, Hilda Grand, Nancy Alwyn, and D Dickens.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, April 18, for the First Time in London, the Drama, in Four Acts, by C. Watson Mill, entitled

"THE SINNER."

Monk Stretton, J.P., K.C.	Mr. Wilson Benge
Edgar Thornhill	Mr. Chas. Burdon
Paul Levaine	Mr. Alec Finlayson
Bill Stanton	Mr. Frank Radcliffe
Jim Stephens	Mr. Sydney P. Clewlow
Chris. Floppington	Mr. Jay Kay
Lord Ewen	Mr. Henry Danson
Jack Ewen	Mr. Harold Playfair
Hollam	Mr. Bert Roberts
Geordie McGregor	Mr. George Loreno
Chauffeur to Monk Stretton	Mr. Charles Mann
Detective Jason	Mr. G. Kennard
Sergeant Butcher	Mr. F. E. Thomas
Meg Stanton	Miss Mona Grey
Vera Ewen	Miss Geraldine Verner
Honor Thornhill	Miss Muriel Dean
Little Ned	Miss Dora Olga
Nora Stretton	Miss Sadie Smith

False accusations are the food of melodrama, and the new piece which has this week found its way to London thrives on them exceedingly. The Sinner which was originally produced at the Theatre Royal, Sunderland, on July 26 last, has a full measure of dramatic incidents and a goodly share of appeals to the heart which have proved irresistible to large audiences at the Elephant and Castle. The gentleman to whom the appellation indicated in the title of the play attaches is Monk Stretton, who, in the capacity of J.P., has had to send to prison a woman named Meg Staunton, convicted of theft. Meg's boy, thus parted from his mother, is taken care of by Stretton, who places him in the care of an old farmer till his mother shall be released. Meanwhile Monk becomes engaged to Vera, the daughter of Lord Ewen, but that young lady's fortune is coveted by Edgar Thornhill, who proceeds to blacken Monk's character in every possible way. He tells Vera that Monk has betrayed Meg Stanton, and is the father of her boy, and secures Meg Stanton's support by informing her that Monk has neglected his promise to take care of her boy, and is unable to produce him. His statement is confirmed when the farmer to whom the lad had been entrusted comes with the news that the child is nowhere to be found. He has, in fact, been kidnapped by Paul Levaine, an accomplice of Thornhill's, and the pair further conspire to accuse Stretton of a diamond robbery, for which the latter is sent to prison, branded as a "sinner."

Out on ticket-of-leave Monk Stretton seeks seclusion at a quiet seaport town, where he dwells unknown as a fisherman with a little boy, whom he had found wandering on the road. He gains the friendship of Bill Stanton, Meg's father, who has sworn to revenge himself on his daughter's betrayer, whom he is told is Monk Stretton. Elegantly dressed, Meg comes to the village to see her father, who questions her as to the source of her fine clothes, and tears off the pearl necklace which she declares is the price of her shame. Later a storm rises, and Stretton is called upon to go out in the lifeboat. A yacht anchored off the jetty is that of Thornhill, who is enjoying a sea voyage. Unexpectedly he meets his former accomplice, Levaine, who demands money, but Thornhill tells him to take a boat out to the yacht, and arranges with the boatmen to throw him overboard. The lifeboat, however, is at hand, and it is Monk Stretton who rescues from a watery grave the man who had contributed to his downfall.

Meg has by this time learned that Thornhill is deceiving her, and intends to marry Vera, who has given a grudging consent to wed, and she goes to Lord Ewen's house to reveal his crimes, but the villain prevails upon her to remain silent, until Stretton discovers that the boy he has taken charge of is no other than her lost son, who testifies to his protector's care and kindness. With the evidence of Levaine, who is full of gratitude to his preserver, Stretton's honour is fully vindicated; but it is left to the last act to secure the doom of Thornhill, who meets with well-merited punishment, while Stretton's happiness is at length secured.

Adequate justice was done to the piece by Mr. Wilson Benge and company. Mr. Benge made a gallant and chivalrous hero, being particularly effective as the young boatman in a series of well-acted scenes. He should, however, guard against a tendency towards monotone, and a too rapid utterance which at times rendered his lines indistinct. Villainy was ably personified by Mr. Charles Burdon, who made Edgar Thornhill an object of detestation to all. Mr. Alec Finlayson is to be credited with a capable performance of Paul Levaine, a rascal with the redeeming quality of humour. Mr. Finlayson acted the part with a Jingle-like spirit of philosophy that was highly acceptable to the audience, to whom he was the cause of many a peal of laughter. Forcible expression was given to the wrath of Bill Stanton by Mr. Frank Radcliffe, an actor of ripe experience, who made the scene in which the old boatman loses his reason very impressive, while his resonant voice gave every effect to his lines. The ladies of the cast are particularly to be praised. Miss Muriel Dean was a prepossessing Honor Thornhill, acting throughout with rare refinement and grace. Miss Geraldine Verner played in equally agreeable fashion the rôle of Vera Ewen, wearing some stylish dresses very becomingly. Miss Sadie Smith was a fresh and girlish Nora, Stretton's youthful sister, and the bride of Chris. Floppington, a gilded youth with a stutter, who was obliged to break into song in order to express himself, thereby occasioning much laughter. That part was played with a constant flow of mirth by Mr. Jay Kay, who became a great favourite. A pretty impersonation was the Little Ned of Miss Dora Olga, who, however, would be well advised to overcome a kind of American twang, which mars an otherwise attractive performance. Miss Mona Grey admirably realised the rôle of Meg Stanton, presenting a faithful picture of the outcast in rags, and making a handsome personage in her elegant raiment of the later acts. Mr. Sydney P. Clewlow rendered good service as a young fisherman; and Mr. Henry Danson was a duly stern and aristocratic Lord Ewen. The drama contains some picturesque scenes, which were artistically set, and numerous calls before the curtain testified to the satisfaction of the audience.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 18, the Musical Play,

"THE BELLE OF NEW YORK."

Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company, presenting The Belle of New York, are delighting Dalston audiences this week with a most acceptable performance of the ever-popular musical play. Mr Frank Lawton is decidedly funny as Blinky Bill keeping the audience in almost continuous laughter; Mr. Paddy Dupres is a success as Ichabod Bronson, rendering the songs peculiar to the part with an apparent relish. Mr. Harold Wardroper is an efficient Harry Bronson, becoming quite a favourite with the audience. Mr. J. R Tate is the Polite Lunatic, and the audience follow his vagaries with keen excitement; while they are also greatly amused with the funny antics of Mr Lionel Yeoman and Mr. R. L. Cody as the twin Portuguese. Mr. Owen O'Brien acts realistically as Mr. Snooker, the reporter; Miss Dorothea Clarke impersonates the Salvation Army lass; and Miss Alice Nixon forms a contrast in the way of worldly vivacity as Fifi Fricot. Miss Maud Nicholls scores as Cora Angelique; and Miss Florence Herree is a distinct favourite as Mamie Clancy; Mr. Charles Rayne is funny as Peeper; and Mr. Dutton Nicholls as Twiddles is noteworthy.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, April 18, the Musical Comedy entitled

"MISS HOOK OF HOLLAND."

A welcome change to musical comedy is being highly appreciated this week, and Mr. George Dance's well-selected No. 1 company in Miss Hook of Holland is, as usual, drawing large audiences. Miss Gertrude Melville in the title-rôle proves herself an engaging and talented actress, rendering her songs in good style, and speedily becoming a great favourite; Mr. Edmond Russell makes the most of his opportunities in the character of Mr. Hook, his highly-popular contributions securing many a hearty laugh. Simon Slinks, the loafing Dutchman, has an amusing exponent in Mr. Fred Dark, who produces considerable hilarity by his drolleries and unfailing humour; he is accorded a flattering reception. Mr. Wood Mansey makes a capital Captain Adrian Paap; he has a fine voice which he uses with ability and excellent effect. Mr. Arthur Ballance shows to considerable advantage as Bandmaster Van Vuyt, possessing a well-cultured voice; he affords much pleasure by the rendering of the various numbers allotted to him, and scores well. Ludwig Schnapps is capably handled by Mr. George Mudie, jun., and Mr. C. F. Hewett is seen to advantage as Lieut. De Coop. A praiseworthy interpretation of Mina is given by Miss Cissie Sephton, her "Petticoat" song gaining several encores.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, April 18, the Musical Play, in Three Acts, entitled

"THE GIRL FROM KAY'S."

The Girl from Kay's, which is no stranger to Stoke Newington, is paying a return visit, the company on this occasion being under the direction of Mr. Neville Claude. Every possible chance is given to the piece in the matter of production, both the scenery and dresses giving no grounds for reproach. An exceedingly happy selection has been made for the representative of the title-rôle, and to Miss Florrie Millington is due unstinted praise for her spirited and vivacious performance of Winnie Harborough. Miss Millington brightens and enlivens every scene in which she is concerned, and to her is largely due whatever success is achieved. Miss Blanche Courtenay is an acceptable Norah Chalmers, and scores with her vocal numbers, notably so with the "crying" song in the second act. As the maid, Ellen, Miss Irene Vere plays the part with considerable go and abandon; and Miss May Wiltshire is in every way a satisfactory Mrs. Chalmers. The idiosyncrasies of Max Hoggenheimer, now played by Mr. Henry Adnes, appear to cause as much amusement as ever; as do the inanities of Percy Fitzthistle as presented by Mr. C. A. Kingston. Mr. John A. Latham sings and acts well as Harry Gordon; Mr. Chalmers and Theodore Quench, K.C., have capable exponents in Messrs. Charles Leverton and Richard Adcan; Mr. Barron H. Heron raises a good deal of laughter as the hall-porter, Joseph; and a very clever and perky little page boy is found in Master W. H. Pink, who appears as Pepper. A special word of praise is due to a young lady, whom it is not possible to identify from the programme, for her song in the second act, "Sambo," and the dance that follows it. Other parts are filled by Miss Norah Gordon and Messrs. Jameson Thomas and Charles Power. The chorus, which is under the musical direction of Mr. D. Tom Lewis, lacks neither quantity nor quality.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

SHAKESPEAREAN WEEK.

It was a happy idea which suggested to Mr. Peter Davey, the managing director of the Royal County Theatre, Kingston, the commemoration of the anniversary of Shakespeare's birthday by the production for a week of some of the most popular of his plays in the riverside town, for the venture, which was not without its risks, has turned out to be a great success artistically and financially, and one that is likely to leave a pleasant memory behind. A striking feature of the venture is the discovery, hitherto unsuspected, that in Kingston, which is supposed to be wedded to drama more than to any other form of stage play, there exists a very large section of the community who are lovers of the works of the great master, for not only were the higher-priced seats well filled at each performance, but many people had to be content with standing room in the pit and gallery. Miss Florence Glossop-Harris's company was engaged to appear in eight plays, and it may be said at once that their presentation of them was of an exceptionally creditable character. Miss Glossop-Harris, who took a leading part in each, earned golden opinions for the masterly manner in which she acquitted herself, and her company was immensely strengthened by the presence of that rising young tragedian, Mr. Frank Cellier, whose genius was first discovered as a member of a local dramatic society, and who undoubtedly has a brilliant career before him. On Monday night, the occasion of our visit, The Merchant of Venice was on the bill, with Mr. Cellier as Shylock and Miss Glossop-Harris as Portia. Of the performances of both nothing but words of praise can be written. Mr. Cellier, who has been on the boards at the Royal County before, surpassed himself in his delineation of the crafty, selfish, and spiteful money-lending Jew. It never once failed to be impressive, and the audience were several times so carried away by the portraiture that the artist was recalled three or four times at the end of the acts. Mr. Cellier's most successful moments were when he discovered the loss of his daughter and of his jewels, and when he furiously insists upon his bond in the great trial scene. It was here also that Miss Glossop-Harris made the greatest of her many hits, her pleading for the Jew's hapless dupe, with the familiar speech upon the attributes of mercy, standing out as a very fine piece of acting. Her mother and Mr. Edward Terry, the well-known actor, were spectators of her efforts. The part of Jessica was entrusted to Miss Ine Cameron, who was a great favourite with the onlookers, who could not but admire the alternately piquant and impressive picture she gave of the Jew's wayward daughter. Mr. J. H. Irvine was cast as Bassanio, and acquitted himself on the whole fairly well in the part, though his efforts were marred somewhat by the occasional inaudibility of his delivery. The Antonio of Mr. H. F. Owen and the Lorenzo of Mr. Murray Kinnell were also parts that called for more than passing commendation. A particularly bright and entertaining picture of the lad Lancelot was given by Mr. Gordon Philpott, whilst other parts were well filled as follows: Salarino, Mr. James Mason; Salanio, Mr. E. G. Cove; Gratiano, Mr. Vernon O. Crabtree; Nerissa, Miss Nora Craigie; Stephano, Miss Madge Spencer Old Gobbo, Mr. Vickers Smith; Leonardo, Mr. Owen Edis; the Prince of Morocco, Mr. Arthur Seaton; Tubal, Mr. H. P. Owen; Duke of Venice, Mr. Eugene Wellesley; Clerk of the Court, Mr. H. Vickers Smith; Priest, Mr. Maurice Ingram. Great care had been bestowed on the dressing of the play, whilst the scenery was all that could be desired. On Tuesday night Romeo and Juliet was produced, on Wednesday at a matinée Twelfth Night, on Wednesday evening Taming of the Shrew, on Thursday Othello, and last night Much Ado About Nothing, whilst The Merry Wives of Windsor will be presented at a matinée to-day, and Hamlet in the evening. A pleasing feature of the week has been the attendance of school children, who have been admitted at reduced prices.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, April 18, the Drama, entitled

"THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN."

In the evergreen favourite, The Ticket-of-Leave Man, Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton and company present for the current week a well-mounted and attractive play, which proves itself quite to the taste of patrons of this house. The interest is ably sustained throughout by a judiciously-selected cast. As Robert Brierly Mr. Walter Clarke distinguishes himself by a clever portrayal, and infuses dramatic effect into the character in a painstaking style, which is duly appreciated and applauded. Miss Lelia Zillwood essays the rôle of May Edwards in a powerful fashion, and deserves praise for an impressive rendering of this pathetic part, which is the outcome of the necessary experience and ability; she is amply rewarded for her efforts. James Dalton is judiciously undertaken by Mr. Fred G. Kay, who displays much talent in his representation. Mr. Arthur Hinton makes an excellent Hawkshaw, his lines being crisply and well delivered. Mr. Travis Green imparts much humour to his delineation of Melter Moss, and submits a capable study of the part. Mr. Gibson is suitably undertaken by Mr. Charles Clifford, who scores well. Miss Effie Dane is completely successful as Sam Willoughby, her rendering meeting with every sign of approval. Miss M. Canfield supplies a clever study of the old lady, Mrs. Willougby, which provokes much mirth. Assistance is also afforded by Mr. Rupert Lorry as Green Jones, Mr. A. N. E. Bodie as Maltby, and Mr. N. Avie as Brunton.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, April 18, the Comedy by J M. Barrie, entitled

"PETER PAN."

Mr. Chas. Frohman's company in J. M. Barrie's entrancing fairy play Peter Pan should attract all juvenile Stratford to the Borough Theatre this week. Their elders too should find Peter Pan much to their liking, for as a production the piece, with its aerial arrangements and stage traps, the beautiful scenery, the sparkling and humorously naïve dialogue, which represents J. M. Barrie at his best, interpreted by a strong cast, which includes Pauline Chase in her original part, should on its merits be one of the season's successes here. Repetition seems only to enhance the charm of Miss Pauline Chase's performance as Peter Pan, and the reception she gains is cordial in the extreme. Miss Gertrude Lang is a dear, delightful "little mother," very naturally depicting Wendy's maternal regard for and sweet superiority over the other children. Wendy's brothers John and Michael have intelligent, unaffected representatives in Masters Harry Duff and Herbert Hollam, and an exceedingly clever animal impersonation comes from Mr. Edward Silward as Nana. Mr. Frederick Annerley as Hook contributes a highly diverting burlesque of a bloodthirsty pirate captain, whose followers are excellently represented by Mr. George Shelton (Smee), Mr. Charles Trevor (Starkey), Mr. Charles Medwin (Cookson), Mr. Chris. Walker (Mullins), Mr. W. Luff (Cecco), Mr. James English (Jukes), and Mr. John Kelt (Noodler). The members of Peter's band are spiritedly portrayed by Miss Ninon Duckey (Tootles), Miss Nellie Bowman (Nibs), Miss Dorothy Bell (Curly), Miss Maidie Andrews (First Twin), and Miss Bertha Stewart (Second Twin), completed by Mr. A. W. Bascomb, very droll as Slightly. Mr. Walter Pearce does well as Mr. Darling; Mrs. Darling is charmingly portrayed by Miss Sybil Carlisle; and Miss Tessie Parke effectively doubles the parts of Baby Mermaid and the servant Liza.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, Thursday, April 21.—This is not a new work of the Viennese dramatist, but was given here some twelve years ago at the Deutsches under Dr. Brahm's management. The author terms it a dramatic poem. It is in verse, of course, and the scene is laid in the East. Whether the piece was worth the trouble of revival is a question. It possesses one big rôle, that of Sobeide, and Frau Agnes Sorma has included it in her repertory of late years, for which reason the play is now being given. Sobeide weds a wealthy Damascus merchant who is old enough to be her father, if not her grandfather. When the pair are alone after the ceremony is over and the guests have departed, the fair bride announces to her husband that she can never be his except in name, as she loves a younger man. The merchant is a philosopher. He makes neither a scene nor reproaches, but tells Sobeide to go where her heart dictates. Although she has not seen her lover for some months, Sobeide is quite sure of his faithfulness, and off she goes to obey her husband's behest literally and immediately. She has reckoned, nevertheless, without man's inconstancy, and finds her lover in a distinctly original situation, which is to the impartial spectator not without its comic side, though it is death to poor Sobeide. The young man—Schalnassor by name—is just in the act of thrashing his own father, who is his rival in another and not very reputable love affair. On Sobeide he has not cast a thought all these months. Her despair at discovering her lover's real worth is so great that she takes her life, throwing herself from a high tower and expiring in her husband's arms. Frau Sorma gave every phase of the rôle in a masterly manner, and was enthusiastically applauded; the other parts were also very satisfactorily sustained. This tragic fragment was followed by Bernard Shaw's one-act comedy Wie er ihren Mann belog. Frau Sorma played the part of Aurora with success.

"Goldene Herzen," a four-act volks-play by C. Karlweiss, was produced at the Schiller last week with good results, and a still better reception would have been the case were the piece not so spun out. The author has written a clever persiflage upon charity entertainments and their promoters. The piece is a series of loosely-connected scenes, with a number of incidental episodes. One of the chief figures is a commissioner of the poor who turns a tenant out of doors because he cannot pay his rent, and then deducts the rent from the proceeds of a charity bazaar in which he is concerned. Another rascal—a painter, who is as lazy as he is talentless—gets written up by a friendly journalist, who says the artist has attempted suicide under stress of poverty. The painter thus boomed enjoys the proceeds of various benevolent entertainments given for him by the "golden-hearted," and becomes famous. The acting was extremely good, and a very cordial reception will certainly be followed by a lengthy run.

At the Schiller Theatre, Charlottenburg, Gustav Davis's four-act comedy Die Katakomben is being given with a good deal of success. The piece was produced for the first time on any stage at the Lessing a good many years ago, and was at the time fully described in your columns. The "catacombs" is the nickname given by the clerks of the local civil service to their basement office, and the plot details the life of one of the more ambitious employees, who is released from durance vile later on and gets into a more congenial and remunerative berth. Foremost in the capital cast was Herr Köstlin, in the part of a particularly gruff official. The audience enjoyed themselves immensely, applauding unusually heartily and frequently by open stage.

FULHAM THEATRE.

Gilbert and Sullivan fill the bill at Fulham throughout the present week, and it says something for the taste of the public that they fill the house as well. The company began with one on their finished performances of The Gondoliers on Monday. The Duke of Plaza Toro was played by Mr. Henry Lytton with all his accustomed humour, and the Grand Inquisitor was in the hands of that great favourite, Mr. Fred Billington, who was as delightfully quaint as ever; Mr. S. Granville did well as Luiz; Mr. Henry Herbert and Mr. Leicester Tunks were admirable as the two Gondoliers; Miss Louie Reno was a stately Duchess, and the dainty Miss Mabel Graham charmed with voice and person as Casilda; Mrs. Arthur Rousbey's fine voice was heard to great advantage in the songs allotted to Gianetta; and Miss Beatrice Bearer sang and acted excellently as Tessa; Miss Edith Holmes did well the little that was required as Inez. Needless to say, the scenery and dresses were fresh and tasteful, and the chorus quite adequate, while Mr. François Cellier controls the music with his customary skill. Patience, The Mikado, Yeomen of the Guard, and Pinafore, with Trial by Jury, are also in the week's bill.

"But a few days ago," writes Mr. Austin Brereton, "the Shakespearean revivals at the Lyceum were alluded to by a speaker, who was moved to ask, 'But how many of those revivals paid?' Well, sir, with two exceptions, they all paid, and some of them paid exceedingly well. I need only mention in passing the unequalled run of Hamlet for 200 nights at the Lyceum in 1874-75, as Henry Irving was not then his own manager. Yet it may be mentioned that there was a net profit of £10,000 upon that series of performances.

"When Henry Irving began his management of the Lyceum (Dec. 30, 1878) it was with Hamlet, which certainly 'paid.' A year later he revived The Merchant of Venice, and upon this—the first run at the Lyceum—there was a trifling profit of £18,000 odd. Then, in May and June, 1880, came Othello, which 'paid' to the extent of £3,805; Romeo and Juliet, revived in March, 1882, was played for 161 consecutive nights. During its first five months it drew £34,099, and, despite enormous expenses, it "paid" to the extent of £10,000.

"Those, however, are mere trifles in comparison with Much Ado About Nothing, the first revival of which lasted from October, 1882, to June, 1883, when it had to be withdrawn because of Irving's first visit to America, and upon which there was a profit of £26,000. Macbeth, revived on Dec. 29, 1888, enjoyed the longest run of the tragedy ever known, 151 performances, and the average receipts were £330 a night. Irving's next revival at the Lyceum was Henry VIII. It was a gorgeous and costly pageant (Irving's personal triumph as Wolsey is well known). A profit of £11,000 did not justify the enormous expenses and the tremendous risk. Nevertheless, it was a profit. King Lear and Cymbeline were comparative failures, 'in the pecuniary sense,' yet they 'paid' to the extent of £1,297 and £2,500 respectively.

"As a matter of fact, there were only two Shakespearean revivals at the Lyceum which did not pay—Twelfth Night (July, 1884) and Coriolanus (April, 1901). The loss on these was trifling, and was more than covered by the profits on almost any one of the successes."

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A spectacular service drama from the pen of Arthur Rosebery, produced for the first time at the Theatre Royal on Monday, has the making of an attractive play, but the dialogue should be cut down, the various characters at present having a tendency to speeches in lieu of conversation. The opening scene depicts a motor engineer's office, where it is learnt that Frank Manley is inventing a motive power which should revolutionise the navies of the world. It further appears that he has conceived an attachment for his employer's (George Gold) daughter, which will certainly be distasteful to the parent, who indulges the hope that Mary will eventually become the wife of Sir Richard Gaythorne, whose extravagances have forced him to sell his estate to Gold. Sir Richard, however, is in love with Blanch Pearl, a successful but much-abused actress. After the conveyance of the property, Sir Richard intends to leave for South Africa to earn his living in the ranks.

The earlier scenes in the second act produce some exciting business in South Africa, in which Gaythorne obtains the V.C. Meanwhile, at home, the villainous Major Hawke is plotting to secure the hand of Blanch, and obtains a hold over her by discovering her in the presence of a suicide, and threatening to denounce her as the man's murderer. In the third act the inventor completes his discovery, and requests the hand of his master's daughter. The request is refused with indignation, but Gold's anticipations are crushed by Gaythorne's acceptance of Blanch Pearl, whom he openly proclaims to be a wronged and innocent woman. The last act is a fine spectacle, setting forth the deck of H.M.S. Triumph, and the fulfilment of the inventor's ambition, after which comes the indispensable happy ending. Mr. Otto Minster sustains with energy and ability the part of Frank Manley; Mr. Charles Dickens endows Major Hawke with all the necessary villainy; Mr. Kenneth Black plays George Gold creditably; Mr. Frank Robertson appears as Sir Richard Gaythorne; Miss Bessie Rignold as Blanch Pearl acts with expression and earnestness; and Miss Marie Duncan as Mary does excellent work. Mr. George H. Asquin as Bob Manley, Miss Mary Stafford Smith as Trixie, and Miss Polly Marsh as Dame Manley are amusing and supply the necessary comic contrast.

BRITISH EMPIRE SHAKESPEARE SOCIETY.

A very fine dramatic reading of Antony and Cleopatra was given in the Botanical Theatre, University College, on Monday afternoon last to a crowded audience. The reading was handled in masterly style by a full professional cast, including Mr. Acton Bond as Antony (by permission of Mr. Arthur Bourchier), Mr. Leonard Shepherd as Enobarbus, Mr. Athol Stewart as Cæsar, and Miss Charlotte Granville as Cleopatra (by permission of Mr. Herbert Trench).

Twenty-five very capable actresses and actors comprised the cast, among them, in addition to the foregoing, being Mesdames Dora Jesslyn, Eve Tame, and Victoria Addison, and Messrs. Leonard Shepherd, Geo. Silver, H. L. Owen, L. A. Hutchinson, Roy Beard, Walter Armstrong, Herbert Lester, Maurice Elvey, Edwyn Holloway, and James Geldard.

The stage directions were read in the clearest possible way by Miss Mona Hungerford, and the greatest credit must be given for the speedy manner in which the proceedings were conducted.

Mr. Acton Bond's arrangement and rehearsal of the five acts and twenty-six scenes reflects the highest credit on that gentleman, for we all know that if not in capable hands Antony and Cleopatra is apt to drag and become tedious. This particular classic had been cut from the Henry Irving edition to bring it within the limits of a reading, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the many members, associates, and ardent students of Shakespeare present. Mr. Bond read the part of Antony with great distinction, speaking the blank verse admirably. Especially powerful in the later scenes, Mr. Bond's performance must rank amongst his highest achievements. The Cleopatra was Miss Granville, who was fascinating, subtle, and of "infinite variety." Mr. Athol Stewart was an intelligent Cæsar, while Mr. Maurice Elvey showed much vigour and dignity as Pompey. Mr. Leonard Shepherd was a very humorous Enobarbus. Mr. J. Edwyn Holloway as Eros and Mr. Walter Armstrong in several small parts did excellent work indeed. As this arrangement of the famous play should commend itself to every Shakespearean enthusiast, we reproduce the scenes selected from the various acts. The first act was taken in its entirety and represented: Scene 1, Alexandria: a Room in Cleopatra's Palace; Scene 2, Another Room; Scene 3, Another Room; Scene 4, Rome: a Room in Cæsar's House; and Scene 5, Alexandria: a Room in Cleopatra's Palace.

In Act II. the first, third, and fourth scenes were cut, leaving Scene 2, Rome: a Room in the House of Lepidus; Scene 5, Alexandria: a Room in the Palace; Scene 6, Near Misenum; and Scene 7, On Board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.

The first two scenes in Act III. were omitted, and a start made with Scene 3, Alexandria: a Room in the Palace; then Scene 6 was taken, Rome: a Room in Cæsar's House. Scene 7, Antony's Camp, near the Promontory of Actium; Scene 9, A Plain near Actium; Scene 10, Another Part of the Plain; Scene 11, Alexandria: a Room in the Palace; and Scene 13, the same.

Ten scenes were taken in Act IV., being Scene 1, Cæsar's Camp at Alexandria; Scene 4, Alexandria: a Room in Cleopatra's Palace; Scene 5, Antony's Camp near Alexandria; Scene 6, Cæsar's Camp before Alexandria; Scene 8, Under the Walls of Alexandria; Scene 9, Cæsar's Camp; Scene 12, Between the Two Camps; Scene 13, Alexandria: a Room in Cleopatra's Palace; Scene 14, Another Room; and Scene 15, the same. A Monument. The finale was given in Scene 2, being The Monument, Alexandria.

MR. J. WELLESLY LYNN writes:—"I am anxious to trace the MS. of a play produced about twenty years ago, in which Mr. J. H. Barnes took part, entitled The Grasshopper. Can you help me in any way to this end by publishing this letter, which may come to the notice of the present owner of the MS.?"

MR. LYNN is not correct as to date. The Grasshopper, the second play with that title, was an adaptation by John Hollingshead from Meilhac and Halévy's La Cigale, and was produced at the Gaiety, on Dec. 9, 1877, with Nellie Farren in the title-rôle. Edward Terry as Pygmalion Flippit, J. H. Barnes as Adonis Stipple, Bob Soutar as Gyngall, Mrs. H. Leigh as Lady Buckram, John Maclean as the Earl of Bogland, and Teddy Royce as the Hon. Sidney Morass.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Minutes of the council meeting, held on Tuesday, April 19, at 32, Regent-street. Present:—Mr. R. A. Greene (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Cyril Cattley, Clarence Derwent, Chris Walker, F. H. De Quincey, C. Hayden Coffin, Murri Moncrieff, Langford Reed, Edward Morgan, C. F. Collings, Misses Joan Pereira, Beatrice Chester, and Mr. D. Young (secretary).

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

With regard to a letter from Mr. Leonard Clark referring to a case of bogus management, the secretary was directed to thank Mr. Clark for his letter, and to say that the council were making inquiries from the different gentlemen mentioned.

The standard contract was further discussed and alterations agreed to. The secretary was instructed to write to Mr. Vedrenne as follows. The council of the Actors' Association believes that the enclosed contract offers a basis of negotiation between the artist and the manager, and the council would be glad if Mr. Vedrenne would place the contract before his committee for consideration.

Sunday Defence Committee. It was decided that the original resolution with reference to the Association agreement with the joint committee be rescinded, and that the following letter be sent to the committee in the terms suggested by the hon. solicitor:—"The council feel that the object for which the Association originally joined the S.D.C. having been accomplished, they wish to withdraw from the committee." The secretary was instructed to send a letter withdrawing the names of the representatives of the Association from the committee named. The Finance Committee's report was tendered by Miss Joan Pereira, and adopted.

Miss Beatrice Chester kindly promised to present four bells for the refreshment-room, and the council tendered her their thanks. The secretary reported five engagements through the Agency. Mr. R. A. Greene was, for special reasons, appointed chairman for the next meeting.

The secretary was instructed to write to several of the most prominent cinematograph film producers, acquainting them with the fact that if they are in want of artists the Association is in a position to supply them.

COLONEL MAPLESON'S RETIREMENT.

Colonel Mapleson, who will shortly complete his fortieth anniversary of opera and concert management, intends to celebrate the event by resigning his position as chairman of Mapleson and Co., Ltd., as soon as the shareholders have chosen a worthy successor. Colonel Mapleson represents four generations of Maplesons, who have been famous in the musical world before him. It was Colonel Mapleson's great-grandfather who produced jointly with Hill and Rossi Handel's opera Rinaldo in Italian, at the Queen's Theatre, Haymarket, on Feb. 24, 1711. Colonel Mapleson's father managed the Italian Opera at His Majesty's Theatre, Covent Garden, and Drury Lane Theatre for nearly fifty years, and presented for the first time Faust, Lohengrin, Mignon, Carmen, The Niebelungen Ring, and nearly all the operas which are the greatest attraction at the present time. Colonel Mapleson was for many years associated with his father, and they jointly managed grand opera in London and New York, when their companies included such artists as Patti, Nilsson, Titiens, Trebelli, Gerster, Minnie Hauk, Marie Roze, Foli, Santley, Sims Reeves, Campanini, Faure, and a host of celebrities too numerous to mention. Colonel Mapleson has taken an active part in the direction of musical enterprises throughout the Continent, and is Président de la Société Internationale de Musique. In recognition of Colonel Mapleson's services to lyric art the French Government conferred upon him the Cross of the Legion of Honour, and two years ago a public subscription was opened for a Colonel Mapleson testimonial, which realised upwards of £3,000.

MR. JAMES K. HACKETT, in the title-rôle of the five-act comedy Beaucaire, fulfilled an engagement last week at the West End Theatre, New York. Written by Booth Tarkington and Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland, this play was produced about nine years ago by the late Richard Mansfield. Creston Clarke, recently deceased, also played the part. It is one that fits Mr. Hackett exceedingly well, and the romantic story of the nobleman who masqueraded as a barber, but finally won Lady Mary Carlisle, is well told.

The Retort Courteous.

THE great tragedian Macready was very irritable in the business of the stage, and always demanded from his companions the exact cue—or "property," as the case might be—and without these he could not, or would not, go on with the scene. On one occasion he was being supported by Ryder (who also had a temper of his own), and in the middle of a long and important scene Ryder had to say to him, "Take this purse of gold." When Ryder came to this speech he found that he had forgotten the purse, so he pretended to place it in Macready's palm. The great man, however, opened his hand, showing the audience he had received nothing, and growled to Ryder, "I cannot speak to this, sir!" Ryder answered in the same tone: "Can't you, by Jove! Then you can stand there mumchance all night!" and walked off the stage, leaving the irate tragedian to finish the scene as best he might.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Edward Mervyn has succeeded in writing a clever musical comedy, the music being distinctly good, and the plot far above the average. The first act opens at the Hotel Europa, in the Far East, where Mr. Reginald Mudwick is staying with his pretty daughter Violet. Mudwick has resolved that his daughter shall, above all things, marry money. The Sultan Je-hu-tah has seen Violet, and engages one Solomon Ikestein, a mercenary Jew, to drug and kidnap the girl, with a view to putting her in the harem. Ikestein sees Mudwick, and tells him that the Sultan wishes to marry Violet, to which her father is quite agreeable. Lieutenant Warrington, however, is in love with Violet, and she will not hear of going to the Sultan's palace, as she suspects his vile purpose. Solomon, who has been plentifully supplied with cash by the Sultan, engages Fido Tennyson, the porter at the hotel, to help him to kidnap Violet. Fido, after having some drink, confides in Warrington that he has received the bribe from the Jew. Warrington appeals to his patriotism, and asks him (Fido) to help him to save the girl. This Fido agrees to do, and Warrington makes him his orderly in order to further his purpose. By calling a false alarm of fire at the hotel, Solomon attains his purpose, and abducts the girl, despite the intervention of Warrington and Fido.

The second act opens in the Sultan's palace, when Violet is brought in, and pleads for her release, which the villainous Sultan will not grant. He informs the distraught girl that he is going to sell her as a slave to another Sultan, who is momentarily expected. The other Sultan arrives, and turns out to be Fido. In an excruciatingly funny scene, Fido bargains for Violet, and attains his purpose, the resident Sultan giving him unlimited power while he remains in the palace. Fido exercises his powers to the full by ordering all and sundry who cross his path to be executed, when Warrington arrives on the scene, and all ends happily.

Mr. Charlie Towers is the life and soul of the piece as Fido, and keeps the audience in a continual ripple of laughter. Mr. Tom Lyle makes a first-class Frank Warrington, and Mr. Ralph Shore is excellent as Reginald Mudwick; Solomon Ikestein has a capable exponent in Mr. Tom Ashby; Miss Cissie Mawson is a sweet and winsome Violet, and Miss May Warden takes the part of Estulah, an Egyptian Princess, who is in love with Warrington, in a most convincing manner. Not only does she act well, but her voice is good, her rendering of "Someone" bringing her three encores on the opening night. Mr. Will Parkin is the Sultan, and a right good one he makes, his song in the second act bringing down the house. Miss Gracie Hern is very good as Trixey Sherlock. The chorus is well balanced, and the scenery all that could be desired. Mr. Will Parkin is stage-manager, and Mr. Tom Billington has the onerous post of business-manager, which he fulfils in a most capable manner. Mr. Leslie Stanley, the proprietor of the company, is to be complimented on an excellent production.

STAGE SOCIETY DINNER.

Sir John Grant presided at the eighth annual dinner of the Incorporated Stage Society, at the Criterion Restaurant, on Sunday evening, and amongst those present were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Whelen, Mr. W. B. Yeats, Miss A. E. F. Horniman, Mr. Alfred Wareing, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Eadie, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Trench, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Spence, Mr. Carl Hentschel, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hertz, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Quartermaine, Colonel Charles Campbell, Mr. Walter Crane, Admiral Sir Douglas Gamble, Mr. A. E. Drinkwater, Mr. J. E. Raphael, and Miss Auriol Lee.

The chairman having proposed "The Incorporated Stage Society,"

Mr. Frederick Whelen proposed "The Repertory Theatre," and announced that the next play the Stage Society would produce would be a German one, which had met with great success in Berlin; and the last play of the season they were producing was the first work of a newly-discovered English dramatist. He believed that repertory theatres were needed in the gloomy and less pleasant parts of our great cities. Indeed, he hoped to see the time when the people would go out from the richer parts of the cities to the poorer districts, and produce there plays that totally differed in quality from those they had at present.

Mr. W. B. Yeats, who first responded, said in Ireland they wished to see represented on the stage the life that was most Irish. They had to-day in Ireland the cult of the peasant.

Miss Horniman, responding, next said they had made a good beginning in Manchester. There had been difficulties, for a sort of superstition existed amongst theatre-goers in the smaller towns, as well as large ones like Liverpool, Manchester, or Glasgow, that everything that was not musical comedy or melodrama with beautiful posters on the wall must be very dull, or immoral, and most likely by Ibsen. They had a sixpenny gallery at Manchester, and she wished in every large town in England there were such sixpenny galleries to make the public understand what art was. A lot of talk about "elevating" the drama was mere impertinence.

Mr. Alfred Wareing, Mr. Dennis Eadie, and Mr. Charles Quartermaine also made interesting speeches.

A SERIOUS difficulty has confronted Mr. George Tyler, who is to produce the successful American play The Dawn of a To-morrow, for the first time in England, at the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, on Monday week. The entire production, including scenery, properties, and all the essential impediments, was despatched from New York aboard the Minnehaha, and remains in one of the flooded foreholds, and there is very little hope of salving it in such a state as to be practicable. In consequence Mr. Tyler, who is the executive chief of Liebler and Co., has had to give instructions for an entirely new production to be built and painted, which has to be made within the available ten working days, and will constitute an exceptionally heavy undertaking.

WE regret to record the death of Mrs. C. H. Locke, the wife of the acting-manager at the Theatre Royal, Jarrow. She was only married last August, and went to Jarrow from London. She contracted a severe cold, and about six weeks ago was advised to have a change of air, and returned to her father's home in the metropolis. After a fortnight's stay there she had a relapse, and died of heart failure on the 10th inst. Mrs. Locke's death came as a great shock to both her old friends and to her new-made ones in Jarrow, and her husband has the deepest sympathy of all. The deceased was interred in London on the 15th inst.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MR. WILLIAM PRINGLE.

"The call of the footlights" came to Mr. William Pringle in his early twenties. At that time, knowing no one with any influence in the profession, he was compelled to start his career with any engagements that offered, and consequently he underwent some rough experiences, which, though uncomfortable enough at the time, are certainly amusing to look back upon. Those experiences might easily have quenched the histrionic spark in a youngster less fond of his art or less doggedly determined, but once gone through they undoubtedly did some good in knocking off the rough corners, and have probably helped in a measure to produce Mr. Pringle's present easy style of acting.

Being naturally musical and light of foot, Mr. Pringle soon found his way into pieces in which those qualities were imperative, and became associated with dancing parts, beginning with Dick Cunningham in The Geisha. Shortly afterwards, on account of his expert whistling, he was cast for Blinky Bill in The Belle of New York, a rôle he has played close upon six hundred times. Another dancing part which brought success in its train was François, the French waiter, in The Prince of Pilsen.

Mr. Pringle's first pantomime engagement was in a comparatively small part at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Liverpool, in 1903-4. Later, as Capers, the page, in Messrs. Stevens and Buchanan's Cinderella at Brixton, he attracted the notice of Mr. Leslie Stuart, with the result that he obtained his first West End engagement at the Vaudeville in The Belle of Mayfair, in which his duet and dance with Miss Lillian Digges was one of the most popular numbers. Other London engagements followed at the Apollo in The Three Kisses, and at the Prince of Wales's as Ludwig Schnapps in Miss Hook of Holland.

It is often assumed that if a man can dance and play in musical comedy, he is, therefore, unable to acquit himself creditably on the legitimate stage. This may be true or not, but in Mr. Pringle's case it must certainly be regarded as a fallacy, for he has distinguished himself in comedy several times, notably as Hubert Grey in A Snug Little Kingdom, as George Fisher in Are You a Mason? and as Geoffrey Smith in An Englishman's Home, a part which suited him to perfection. Mr. Pringle prefers this class of work as being more artistic than musical comedy, and his ambition is to settle down in legitimate comedy in London.

MR. W. HENRY HARGREAVES.

After considerable experience as an amateur elocutionist and character actor Mr. Henry Hargreaves started his professional career by playing Sir Tristram Mardon in Pinero's farcical comedy Dandy Dick. A term of strenuous work followed with Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Dartrey, playing such parts as Levison in East Lynne, Bob Brierly in The Ticket-of-leave Man, Rudolph in Leah, and Beauseant in The Lady of Lyons. A short tour with Mr. Chas. Harrington was followed by an engagement with Mr. Chas. Hartley for Lord Darlington in Lady Windermere's Fan and Sir John Harding in The Idler. More répertoire and some Shakespearean work with various managements came next, Mr. Hargreaves' parts including Alan Villiers in The Red Lamp, Sir Geoffrey in King René's Daughter, Louis XIV. and Huguet in Richelieu, Tom Stanhope in The Glass of Fashion, and Montano in Othello. Mr. H. V. Neilson then engaged him to play Harker in A Bunch of Violets.

Mr. Hargreaves never regrets his drama experience, which he considers to be absolutely necessary to an actor's training. His work in that department included tours as juvenile leading man with Mr. J. A. Campbell, Mr. Robt. Perris, Mr. Walter Melville, and Mr. Beresford Whitcomb. Mr. Hargreaves then went to Mr. H. F. Maltby for that gentleman's first tour to play Gerald Wendover in that charming old-world play The Youngest of Three. A long stock engagement followed with Mr. John A. Thompson at Paignton, Mr. Hargreaves playing such parts as Sir Philip Marchant in A Bunch of Violets, Gerald in The New Woman, Brabazon in Sowing the Wind, Capt. Carew in His Excellency the Governor, Young Marlow in She Stoops to Conquer, Salem Scudder in The Octoroon, Shackleton in Jane, Citizen Sangfroid in Delicate Ground, Tullington in Poor Jo, and David Garrick.

Mr. Hargreaves then went on a most interesting tour through India, the Straits, China, Japan, Cairo, and the Mediterranean as juvenile leading man in the Bandmann Comedy Company, playing an enormous répertoire of West End pieces, changing the bill every night. At one of the Bombay seasons, to cite an example, the company played twenty-four pieces in twenty-six nights. Among the parts Mr. Hargreaves played on this tour were—Pasquali in The Morals of Marcus, Stephen Rollo in Alice Sit-by-the-Fire, Trevor Lerode in John Glayde's Honour, Carney Griffin in Niobé, Peter in Peter's Mother, Lieut. Seton Boyne in Beauty and the Barge, Lord Brocklehurst in The Admirable Crichton, Bunny in Raffles, Arthur Weatherby in The Earl of Pawtucket, Jacky in Sunday, Horatio Drake in The Christian (new version), Larrabee in Sherlock Holmes, Frank Perry in Are You a Mason? and Harry Dallas in The Walls of Jericho.

On his return from the East Mr. Hargreaves played juvenile lead with Mr. Walter Melville in Her Second Time on Earth. Mr. Herbert Ralland then engaged him to play Filmer Jesson in His House in Order. His next engagement was with Mr. Wentworth Croke for Michael Sunlocks in The Bondman. A short engagement with Mr. Russell Rosse followed, and then Mr. Herbert Ralland re-engaged Mr. Hargreaves for his annual stock at the Gaiety, Douglas, during which he played one or two of his old parts—Sir Philip in A Bunch of Violets, Dick Desmond in Facing the Music, David Cairn in Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace, Ted Morris in The Prude's Progress, &c. A short engagement with Mr. Mark Blow in The Prisoner of Zenda came next, and then he was engaged for the part of Ned Drayton in In the Ranks.

Like many actors of recent years, Mr. Hargreaves has appeared on the halls. It will be noticed that Mr. Hargreaves has been a great deal in stock and répertoire companies, and in one year he played over fifty parts. He now finds the benefit of such strenuous work, because it has enabled him to acquire an experience, though only in his twenty-seventh year, of which many a man more than twice his age cannot boast. It is interesting to add that Mr. Hargreaves served two years with the Imperial Yeomanry in South Africa during the war, receiving the Queen's medal and four bars.

A BOHEMIAN CONCERT.

A pleasant evening was spent at the King's Hall Theatre, Covent Garden, on Thursday, April 14, when the new Ellesmere Club gave their first Bohemian concert and a one-act play. The Ellesmere Club has been formed for the purpose of holding dramatic performances, dances, whist drives, concerts, and other social gatherings, and, to judge by the large audience present on the 14th inst., the club should be a great success.

The first portion of the programme was devoted to vocal and instrumental items. Miss Rose Baker, who has a contralto of considerable power, sang "My Ships"; and Miss Athole Robertson gave a very effective recitation of "Lasca." Mr. Frank Desprez's popular poem. Mr. Douglas Wesley, who has a well-trained tenor voice, not of any great power, but remarkably sweet and pure in the upper notes, was heard in "My Dreams." Later in the concert Mr. Wesley achieved a distinct success with his artistic singing of Blumenthal's "The Message," one of the late Sims-Reeves' favourite songs. Although Mr. J. Duncan Porteous might have chosen a finer subject for his violin solo than W. Henley's "Hungarian Rhapsody," he proved a very able executant and won hearty applause.

Miss Jessie Reeve (who appeared by kind permission of Mr. Tom B. Davis) sang "Little Princess, look up!" (Amasis), Faraday, and received an enthusiastic encore. A recitation of comedy and tragedy was cleverly given by a Miss Hodges, whose name did not appear on the programme; while Mr. Walter Montagu delighted the audience by his funny stories and really admirable playing of the Intermezzo from Cavalleria Rusticana on a one-string cigar-box violin. Miss Jessie Reeve was again heard in Max Strang's "Danion," and Miss Rose Baker in "The Enchantress," by Hatton. Mr. Clement Speed, a tenor, sang well, but if ever a song required a full rich baritone it is "Blow, blow, thou winter wind" (Sargeant).

After the interval, Browne with an E, an original farcical comedy, in one act, by Leopold Montague, was played. Browne with an E, it must be confessed, is a somewhat mild affair, but the little farce answered the purpose of amusing the audience. Mr. Robert Brown, on a trip to Switzerland, meets at the Hôtel Pension Rose des Alpes a charming young American lady, Miss Excelsiora J. Peak, who strongly objects to his name not having a final "e." Mrs. Gushington Nervesby is also at the hotel to meet her son-in-law, who does spell his name Browne, and as she has, it seems, never met him, complications naturally ensue with Mr. Robert Brown. There is a lively old German, Graf Von Donnerwetter-Nebermterhinterberg, at the same pension. Mr. Wilfred B. Emeon was effective as Robert Brown; and Mr. Bernard W. Siegle aroused much laughter by his performance of the old German. Mr. Sidney Foster was excellent as the waiter, M. Verifrau Pagon; and Miss Maude Evelyn did well as Mrs. Gushington Nervesby; while the part of Miss Excelsiora J. Peak was attractively played by Miss Ivy Sylvia. During the evening a selection of music was given by the club orchestra, under Mr. Henry J. Dolan.

A VERY interesting lecture on "Modern Scene Painting" was delivered on Monday last by Mr. Alfred Wareing, director of the Repertory Theatre, Glasgow, to the students of the Glasgow School of Art in the theatre of the institution. The lecture was illustrated by many beautiful models of stages, with scenery and lighting arrangements complete, which the lady and gentleman students examined with great interest. Mr. Wareing did not entirely approve of electric light as an illuminant of stage scenery, as it threw too strong shadows, but preferred gas, as giving a softer light. On the other hand, the electric light was more under control, and minimised the risk of fire.

MR. WAREING traced the evolution of scene painting from the simple Elizabethan times till the exacting present day, and commented on the works of Clarkson Stanfield, Sam Bough, James Grieve, William Glover, and other artists who had exerted their influence on scenic art. He then referred to several artists of the present day, such as Mr. Joseph Harker, of whose work three splendid models were displayed, and Charles Ricketts, who had produced some beautiful stage settings.

At the close of the lecture Mr. Wareing invited any of the students who were interested in the subject to visit the painting room of the Repertory Theatre and see the process of scene painting, and even to try wielding the brush if so disposed. At the instance of the Head Master, Mr. F. H. Newbery, who was in the chair, Mr. Wareing was cordially thanked for his instructive lecture, and suitably replied. The lecture theatre was crowded with an attentive audience of both sexes.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Herbert Tree and company will appear this afternoon in Hamlet at His Majesty's Theatre, and this evening in Julius Cæsar. For the special bill to be given at the matinée on April 29, in addition to one act from Othello, one act from Macbeth, one act from The Clandestine Marriage, and the special recitation which Mrs. Kendal has kindly consented to give, the Screen scene from The School for Scandal will be performed, with the same cast as at His Majesty's last year. In this Sir Herbert Tree, Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. Basil Gill, Mr. Robert Loraine, Mr. Henry Morrell, and Miss Marie Löhr will appear.

The joint benefit to Mrs. Billington and Mr. Herman Vezin will not take place until the autumn season. Meanwhile Mrs. Kendal has, with great generosity, secured Mrs. Billington freedom from anxiety until the matinée is given. Mrs. Billington cannot speak too highly of the kindness she has received from Mrs. Kendal.

Mr. George Alexander will pay a flying visit to the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, on Thursday, and will give there a special matinée of The Importance of Being Earnest.

Mr. James Welch's season at the Criterion Theatre will end on Saturday, May 21, and on the Monday following Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore will return to the theatre where they have so often evoked laughter and applause, and will give a few performances of The Mollusc, which will be followed by a revival of The Case of Rebellious Susan.

Mr. C. G. Compton's complimentary benefit at the St. James's Theatre, by permission of Mr. George Alexander, will take place on Friday afternoon, May 6. Mrs. Kendal will give a reading from As You Like It, to a musical accompaniment by Mr. Stedman's choir, and Sir Charles Santley, Mr. Frank Gleeson, Mr. Anderson Nicol, and Miss Marie Löhr have kindly offered their services.

Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Herbert Trench will give a special matinée at the Haymarket on June 10 to raise funds to complete the equipment of the Keats-Shelley Memorial House in Rome, which was opened by the King of Italy just a year ago. Among the patrons of the movement are the Prince and Princess of Wales, and Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, who has kindly consented to act as president of the executive committee, of which the Countess of Crewe and Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild are vice-presidents. The programme will include tableaux, scenes, and recitations from the works of Keats and Shelley. Mr. Forbes Robertson, Mr. Henry Ainley, Miss Carlotta Addison, and Miss Genevieve Ward will appear, and Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, Mr. Frank Dicksee, and Mr. Percy Macquoid will design the tableaux. Sir Hubert Parry, Mr. Coleridge Taylor, Mr. Norman O'Neill, Miss Maude Valerie White, Mme. Kirkby Lunn, and Mr. Gervase Elwes will supply the music.

Mr. Alex. Henderson will present at the Apollo Theatre this evening a new musical comedy, by Major Marshall, music by Philip Michael Faraday, entitled The Islander. The cast will include Mr. Sam Walsh, Mr. Fred Allandale, Mr. Laurence Legge, Mr. Laurence Caird, Mr. Neil Kenyon, Mr. Reginald Lawrence, Master Bobbie Andrews, Miss Ethel Morrison, Miss Mary Dibley, Miss Elaine Inescort, Miss Elsie Spain, Miss Stephanie Stephens, Miss Mabel Burnege, Master P. Heron, and Miss Edris Coombs. The first act takes place On British Territory, and the second Somewhere in the Persian Gulf 51° 32′ North Latitude, 09 5′ 12′′ West Longitude. The play will be produced by Mr. Harry Grattan.

Mr. George Tyler has taken the Garrick Theatre and will produce there early in May Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's three-act comedy The Dawn of a To-morrow. The scenery used in America for Mrs. Burnett's piece went down in the Minnehaha, and even if recovered would be useless, so a new set of scenes is being painted. The play is to have a week's trial run at Liverpool, starting on Monday, May 2. The cast will include Mr. Herbert Waring, Mr. James Lee Finney, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. James Hearn, Mr. James Geldard, Mr. Henry Ainley, Mr. J. Parish Robertson, Mr. Frank Bertram, Mr. John Tresahar, Miss Ada Dwyer, Miss Portia Knight, and Miss Gertrude Elliott.

Mr. Charles Frohman and Mr. Arthur Bourchier will, at the end of the run of The Tenth Man at the Globe Theatre, produce there an adaptation by Mr. Paul Potter of Emile Fabre's La Rabouilleuse, which was originally played at the Odéon, Paris. The Honour of the Family, as the English version is called, has already been performed with success in America. La Rabouilleuse is founded upon Balzac's Ménage de Garcon, and the action of the play takes place in the small French town of Issoudun, near Bourges, in 1824. The part of Colonel Philipe Bridau, the soudard, or rascally swashbuckler, who dominates the action, will be played by Mr. Arthur Bourchier, and the cast will include Mr. A. E. George, Mr. Norman Trevor, Mr. Oscar Adye, Mr. Frank Atherley, Mr. George Bealby, Mr. Acton Bond, Mr. Bertram Forsyth, Mr. Frederick Sargent, Mr. Drelincourt Odlum, Miss Marie Linden, Miss Rosalie Dupré, and Miss Gladys Mason.

Mr. Curtis Bennett's statement in the recent matinée hat case to the effect that a theatre ticket is nothing else than a revocable licence has raised the question of the playgoer's rights. The presence of a theatre-goer at any theatre is entirely subject to the consent and discrimination of the manager or lessee of that theatre. The possession of a ticket does not entitle the holder to admission to the theatre; nor, having once gained admission and occupied his (or her) seat, does it secure for the holder the right to remain till the conclusion of the performance. The management is within its rights in either refusing admission or demanding expulsion—even though the dress and deportment of the ticket-holder so treated leave no possible ground for complaint. A theatre manager can frame and enforce such regulations as he thinks fit, providing these regulations are made public before the commencement of the performance.

The London County Council some months since passed a resolution that "It is unnecessary to differentiate between the licences granted to theatres and to music-halls"; and instructed the Theatres Committee to consider and report what amendments should be made in the standing orders of the Council with the view to granting a general and uniform licence to all places of entertainment licensed by the Council under which it would be optional for the licensee, subject to such restrictions as might be considered desirable, to give either dramatic or what are known as variety entertainments. The committee have come to the conclusion that nothing practical can be done in the direction indicated by the resolution without fresh legislation on the subject, and until it is known whether the Government contemplate taking any steps to give effect to the recommendation of the Joint Committee on Stage Plays, the London County Council Committee do not think that any useful purpose would be served by the Council at the present time promoting legislation to give effect to the recommendation. The Council is to be asked to proceed no further with the resolution.

Mr. H. B. Irving will end the run of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde at the Queen's Theatre on the 29th inst., and on the following evening will revive Louis XI., with himself in the title-part, Mr. Eille Norwood as Nemours, Mr. Charles Allan as Philip de Comines, Mr. Tom Reynolds as Coitier, Mr. Frank Tyars as Tristan L'Ermite, Mr. Henry Vibart as François de Paule, Miss Rosina Filippi as Martha, and Miss Dorothea Baird as Marie de Comines. Mr. Irving will also give three special matinées of Hamlet on May 4, 11, and 18.

Mr. Wentworth Croke has introduced two innovations, one of which is of a somewhat startling character, into his new version of East Lynne, which, while retaining the story right through, is a very workmanlike production. One novelty is the substituting of "Beauty's Eyes" for "When other lips," and the other is the appearance of little Willie in pyjamas instead of the traditional nightgown and bare feet.

In connection with the National Theatre movement to establish a theatre as a national memorial to Shakespeare, a meeting was recently held in the Newcastle Council Chamber, Sir Henry Newton presiding. Mr. Philip Carr, secretary of the Memorial Committee, in explaining the scheme, said that it was proposed to establish in London an institution similar to those in other countries in Europe. A permanent company of actors would be engaged, and there would be a constant change of programme. It was proposed to raise a capital of £500,000, and of this amount £78,000 had been raised. The company of actors would be divided into two parts, and one part would be constantly touring the provinces, and each place visited would be expected to guarantee the expenses incurred. A public meeting would be held in Newcastle in the autumn, and meanwhile collecting sheets with a minimum subscription of one shilling would be issued. On the motion of Mr. Gibbon, seconded by Mr. Jebblin, it was decided to form a local committee of those present, with power to add to their number.

Poor children will benefit materially by the anniversary performance of The Arcadians next Thursday at the Shaftesbury Theatre, Mr. Courtneidge having decided to hand over the proceeds to the Fresh Air Fund. The performance will be marked by special features. To the new numbers will be added "The Call of Arcady," which will be sung by Miss Florence Smithson. Mr. Alfred Lester now includes a version of "I've got a motter" which can only be described as extremely Anglo-French. It runs, "J'ai un motter. Toujours joli et gai." The Arcadians, moreover, will be entirely re-dressed, the display of new gowns including costumes which have been designed for the scenes representing Askwood Racecourse and the Arcadian Restaurant.

Miss Elizabeth Dexter, who has made many friends in the land of her fathers, is paying a holiday visit to the United States, sailing on the Minnewaska to-day. Mr. Bernard Shaw, by a political lecture, awakened her interest in eugenics, and she will endeavour to spread its tenets among her school mates and relations abroad. Her plans include visits to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, and Cincinnati. We wish Miss Dexter all success on her visit.

We regret to announce the death of Miss Annie Brophy, a once well-known actress, who passed away on Tuesday at Tufnell Park after a long illness, in the course of which she underwent much suffering. In private life Miss Brophy was the widow of the late Frederick Aubrey Thomas, physician, and was in her fifty-second year.

At the last meeting of the Theatres Alliance—which was the annual one—the following officers for the ensuing year were unanimously elected:—President, Mr. Wentworth Croke; vice-president, Mr. Ernest Stevens; hon. treasurer, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; auditors, Mr. Peter Davey and Mr. J. S. L. Moss; and hon. secretary, Mr. Moverley Sharp.

Mr. Edward Compton will to-morrow be the guest at dinner of the Manchester Playgoers' Club at the Midland Hotel. Afterwards Mr. Compton will read a paper to the members and their friends on "New Humour and Old Comedy." The reading of the paper will most probably take place in the theatre attached to the hotel.

Miss Annie Hughes terminates her very successful engagement as the Chorus Lady at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, on May 21, and on the following Monday will turn her attention to the music halls, appearing with her own company at the Chelsea Palace in a sketch entitled The Belle of the Washtub. In this sketch Miss Hughes will enact the dual rôle of Madame Sans-Gêne and Catherine Duchess of Dantzig, and will have the support in the rôle of Napoleon of Mr. Henry Deas, an actor who made a great success as Dan Mallory in The Chorus Lady when this play was recently at the Coronet and Kennington Theatres. Fouché, Chief of Police, will be in the clever hands of Mr. Mayne Lynton, who is at present playing Nero in Mr. William Greet's Sign of the Cross company.

Mr. Walter Reynolds, L.C.C., returned on Monday from his tour of the seaports of Morocco, the Canary Islands, and Madeira. Mr. Reynolds has been elected Chairman of the Parks and Open Spaces Committee of the London County Council.

At this week's meeting of the London County Council, the Improvements Committee reported the granting of a six months' option for the lease of the Aldwych-crescent site to M. Ernest Gerard, who recently renewed the application laid before the Council in July, 1907. If the agreement is completed a lease will be granted for 99 years, at a rental of £55,000 a year. It is proposed by M. Gerard to form a syndicate with a capital of £1,000,000, a large portion of which, it is stated, has already been guaranteed in France.

The plans show a large building containing galleries for the accommodation of a permanent exhibition of arts and manufactures. On the Strand frontage and in the two side streets will be rows of shops with offices overhead. The centre of the site, which covers 24,000 feet, will be occupied by a theatre, a concert hall, a restaurant surrounded by courts, and other buildings.

The season of grand opera at Covent Garden will commence to-night with a performance of La Traviata. Mme. Tetrazzini will be the star, Signor Sammarco will be the Giorgio Germont, and Mr. John McCormack the Alfredo. On Monday the first cycle of the "Ring" will commence with Das Rheingold. Herr Van Rooy will be the Wotan, Herr Zador the Alberich, and Herr Bechstein the Mime. Six of the singers are English-speaking artists. Die Walküre, on Tuesday, will begin at 5 p.m., with a dinner interval after the first act. Mme. Saltzmann-Stevens will be the Brunnhilde, and a newcomer, Mme. Kent, the Sieglinde. Herr Sembach, the Siegmund, will also be new to Covent Garden. For Wednesday Rigoletto is chosen, and Tetrazzini will be supported by Signor Rostowsky, a tenor new to Covent Garden. On Thursday Siegfried will be given, with Herr Cornelius in the title-rôle, and Mme. Saltzmann-Stevens will be the Brunnhilde. Götterdämmerung will be sung on April 30.

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's London company of Don scored a distinct success at the Grand Theatre, Southampton, this week, the reception being most enthusiastic, and the booking very heavy. Additional companies touring in the early autumn, under the entire control of this popular management, include Smith (North and South companies), Brewster's Millions, and Arsène Lupin at Christmas, when Mr. Percy Hutchison will appear as Arsène Lupin at the Opera House, Blackpool, the entire London production, including all the trick scenery as used at the Globe Theatre, being carried.

The Miners' Theatre, Ashington, Northumberland, is for sale, tenders being invited by the owners. The site of the theatre, which seats about 2,000 persons, and other adjoining land is 1,545 square yards, held on leases which expire on Nov. 11, 1993. Particulars of sale and form of tender may be obtained on application to Messrs. Watson, Burton, and Corder, solicitors, Pilgrim House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

Mr. Gaston Mayer's company, direct from the Vaudeville Theatre, where on Saturday, April 2, the curtain was finally rung down on the 244th performance of The Brass Bottle, will appear at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, next week. The suburban tour, which will then commence, is under the business direction of Mr. E. H. Bull, the advance management being in the hands of Mr. Cecil P. Blumberg.

Mr. Frank Withers has been re-engaged for the business management, on the autumn tour, of Mr. James Welch's company with When Knights were Bold.

We regret to hear that that well-known young actor, Mr. Edward A. Coventry, who has been playing the part of Mr. Belmont in Mr. J. E. Vedrenne's Fires of Fate company, during the struggle in the third act on Saturday afternoon at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, fell a distance of about twelve feet. He was conveyed in an unconscious state to the Royal Infirmary, where it was found that he had fractured his left shoulder and received a very severe shaking. Mr. Coventry, we are pleased to announce, is progressing favourably.

At the Theatre Royal, Aldershot, on the 15th inst., two new one-act pieces, By Mutual Agreement and The New Life, both by R. A. Brandon and George Bull, were played for copyright purposes by Miss Dorothy Duncan and other members of A White Man company. It may be added that the title of The New Life has been utilised twice before, once for a drama produced at the Theatre Royal, Barnsley, in March, 1884, and once for a one-act piece staged at the Avenue ten years later.

Mr. Lewin Mannering is shortly joining the ranks of regular managers. A new and powerful play is being written for him by a well-known dramatist, which Mr. Mannering will produce and tour shortly after Christmas.

Mr. Allan Wilkie's next addition to his extensive répertoire will be an elaborate revival of Shakespeare's comedy Twelfth Night. Special attention will be paid to the spectacular side of the production, and beautiful new scenery and costumes are being designed. It is confidently anticipated that Mr. Wilkie will be particularly well suited in the character of Malvolio.

Mr. Charles Windermere's new farcical comedy Where is William? scored a complete success on its first appearance in London last week at the Fulham Theatre, the business going up each night. The piece was received with roars of laughter, and four and five calls were taken after each act. Mr. Windermere has already been approached by a West End manager, and negotiations for a London run are now in progress. Should these fall through, Mr. Windermere will put it on himself at Christmas, having several return dates to fulfil in the autumn.

Mr. Fred Ball, late assistant-manager at the Hippodrome, Southampton, has taken up his duties as resident-manager at the Theatre Royal, Wolverhampton. Prior to his departure from Southampton occasion was taken by the staff at the Hippodrome and his many friends to make Mr. Ball a handsome presentation.

The Universal Theatrical Bureau, which has been established at 49, Bedford-street, Strand, undertakes to supply anybody or anything a theatrical or music hall manager, an actor, an artist, or an agent may require to assist him in the conduct of his business. No order will be either too great or too small to receive the prompt and careful attention of the firm. By concentrating all the many branches of the entertainment world—professional or amateur—in one centre, they believe that they can save their clients many hours of tedious work and much heavy expense. Probably no other business suffers so much from "emergencies" as theatrical and music enterprises, and by either ringing up Gerrard 3714, sending a telegram to "Utryburo, London," or writing to 49, Bedford-street, Strand, such emergencies will be easily dealt with.

Mr. Herbert Trench has secured a lively comedy of English life, by Mr. Rudolf Besier, called Baldwin, and will produce it in due time at the Haymarket.

Mr. R. C. Luxton, who has been for some time the manager for the Lowestoft Corporation of the various entertainments carried on by that body, has been appointed by the directors of the New Spa and Gardens at Bridlington to succeed Mr. Harry Tunbridge at that fashionable pleasure resort. Mr. Tunbridge has been appointed manager of the Britannia Pier, Yarmouth, and takes up his duties there at the end of May. During the two years in which he has had the management of the Spa Gardens and Theatre Mr. Tunbridge has made himself greatly popular, and he will leave Bridlington with the best wishes of his many friends for a successful career in his new venture.

The performance of The Red Herring, announced by the Play Actors at the Court Theatre for April 24, is unavoidably postponed till the following Sunday. All tickets issued for the prior date will be available on May 1.

The enthusiasm with which the Marie Brema Orpheus revival at the Savoy has been received has necessitated extra performances, and to meet the wishes of many who cannot attend matinées, two of these will take place on Tuesday evening (26th) and Friday evening (28th), the other two being arranged for Wednesday afternoon (27th) and Saturday afternoon (30th). As a rule, the garlands used in the tomb scene are "property" flowers, and the rose petals with which Orpheus strews Eurydice's grave are made of coloured paper. But such is the esteem in which Miss Brema is held by her company that on the first night the chorus (which has been specially trained by Miss Tita Brand, Miss Brema's talented daughter, and Miss Rose von Etlinger) prepared a charming surprise for Miss Brema by exchanging the stage garlands for real flowers and the "property" petals for fragrant rose leaves. One of the principal features of this remarkable production has been the Hellenic dancing of Miss Margaret Morris, the daughter of the well-known Manchester artist whose paintings adorn several art galleries.

Mr. Arthur Phillips and his company in The Merchant of Venice opened their tour auspiciously at Birkenhead last week, nearly five thousand persons paying for admission during the week. The magnificent scenery and dresses, together with the artistic merits of the company, were highly praised by the Liverpool Press.

Both performances at the King's Theatre, Gateshead, on Monday were exceedingly well patronised, when Councillor Harold Arnold, the manager, took a well-deserved benefit. The ordinary bill was supplemented by turns from the neighbouring music halls, and in a short address Mr. Arnold expressed his gratitude to those in front and intimated that he would still be in touch with the King's Theatre, although having to manage the Tynemouth Palace.

"The Little Damozel" will be at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, and Prince of Wales's Theatre, Grimsby, next week. Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's two companies have done excellent business with this play, being rebooked at every theatre visited.

As the result of the competition just held at the Trinity College of Music, London, scholarships tenable for one year, with possible renewal, have been awarded as follows:—Organ, Sidney H. Sheppard; singing, Edith M. Davies and Lilian Goodson; violin, Dorothy I. Meallin. Free instruction has been awarded for one year to: Double bass, John H. Silvester; flute, Margaret E. Gibson. The following candidates were highly commended:—Leonard Gordon, Eric Hurst, Joseph Myers, Ruby L. M. Shepherd, and Winifred D. Bianchi.

The oil painting of the late George Daventry as "Nebu Singh" in "The Indian Mutiny" was won in the drawing by Mrs. Fred. C. Somerfield (Miss Marie Dagmar) by the number 23, Mrs. Daventry has received a charming letter from Mrs. Somerfield in acknowledgment, and is forwarding the picture to Warrington to the owner's residence.

The Elizabethan Stage Society, under the direction of Mr. William Poel, will present Two Gentlemen of Verona at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday evenings next, and at a matinée on Saturday. The company will be identical with that which has been appearing this week in Sir H. B. Tree's Shakespearean Festival, and the comedy will be acted on an Elizabethan stage. The Society will also present Everyman, the sublime old Morality Play, which will be acted on Wednesday afternoon and the evenings of Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Having successfully launched his East Lynne tour, Mr. Wentworth Croke will now be turning his attention to his suburban tour of Herbert Leonard's popular drama, The Girl of My Heart, which he will send out on May 9 with a strong cast and the same complete production that characterises all Mr. Croke's companies. The piece will be produced by Mr. W. P. Sheen, who also plays his old part of Joshua Bradley.

As Mr. Mollison was appearing at Sir Herbert Tree's Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's on Thursday afternoon, he was unable to take up his part in The Chorus Lady at the Lyceum, Newport, but returned in time to impersonate Colonel James Fullard, D.S.O., in The Touch of the Child which on this night was played after the main piece.

An old-time Welsh comedian has passed away in the person of Mr. John E. Noakes, who succumbed to a long illness at New Mills, Derbyshire, at the age of seventy years. "Johnny Noakes," as he was more familiarly called, was some thirty years a shining light in the land of the Leek, and at Llanelly he was responsible for the erection of the Royalty Theatre. Mr. Noakes toured towns in South Wales and Monmouthshire with a portable theatre, staying as long as six months in one place at a time. He was a versatile and clever comedian, and was wont to appear nightly in different characters. He and his family were held in the highest respect wherever they went.

The dramatic and musical entertainment at the Victoria Hall, Waterloo-road, on Thursday had many attractive turns, and one of them was a most interesting performance of some excerpts from Sheridan's famous comedy The School for Scandal by Miss Ella Erskine and Mr. Bruce Winston. Naturally the two quarrel scenes between the tetchy Sir Peter and his young wife were chosen, and these were played with much animation, the gaiety and wit of the dialogue being well brought out. Miss Erskine's Lady Teazle was a most fascinating heroine of the picturesque period of powder and patches.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hargreaves have been engaged by Mr. Alan Wilkie to play Romeo, Bassanio, Orlando, Charles Surface, &c., and Nerissa, Phœbe, Constance, Maria, &c., in that gentleman's répertoire company.

Miss Daisy Smith, a member of the theatrical company which is playing The Arcadians in Dundee Theatre this week, was severely injured on Monday, by accident. The company arrived in Dundee on Sunday. A paper target was fitted up on one of the walls of the sitting-room of a boarding-house, and while Mr. Harold Gaze, another member of the company, was shooting at it with a miniature rifle, Miss Smith entered the apartment. Mr. Gaze pointed the gun at Miss Smith, and, unaware that the weapon was loaded, drew the trigger. Miss Smith threw up her arms, gave a piercing scream, and dropped to the floor. Mr. Gaze 'phoned for a doctor, and it was found that Miss Smith was badly wounded. She was taken to the local infirmary, where a medical examination showed that the bullet had entered the left side two inches below the heart, perforated the thorax, and passed through the liver, coming out near the spine. Miss Smith bore her suffering bravely, and steps were taken to communicate with her friends, who live in London. Miss Smith had been touring with Mr. Robert Courtneidge's Arcadians company since August last. She was a member of the chorus, and a great favourite.

Mr. Gaze was placed under arrest, and a formal charge of reckless discharge of firearms was made. He was brought before the Dundee magistrates on Tuesday, and liberated on bail.

The annual "Ladies' Concert" of the Playgoers' Club will take place on Sunday evening, at the Playhouse, which has been kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. Cyril Maude. The concert will consist of light music, and the London Pavilion orchestra, under the direction of Mr. A Bond Sayers, by permission of Mr. Frank Glenister, will accompany. The undermentioned artists have already accepted invitations to be present:—Misses Christine Birkett, Viva Birkett, Bessie Bowness, Ada Colley, Alice Esty, Olive Fox, Dora Grover, Clarice Mayne, Constance Montague, Decima Moore, Maggie Neil, Elsie Southgate, Edith Trevor, and Florence Venning, and Messrs. Wilkie Bard, J. H. Barnes, Hubert Connorton, Seymour Dicker, Alf. Hurley, C. Ibbotson, Randell Jackson, Harrison Latimer, Alfred Lester, George Mozart Henry Neville, Ernest Pike, H. Scott Russell, Harry Thornton, Sam Walsh, and Gwilym Wigley. The artists will appear by kind permission of the directors of the Palace Theatre, Mr. Alfred Butt, Mr. Frank Glenister, Mr. Robert Courtneidge, and other managers.

"The Naked Truth" at Wyndham's is clothed in fascinating costumes, which give distinct character to each type of part. In the first act Miss Maude Cressall as the pleasure-loving Mrs. Hayter dons a graceful dress of a soft, deep Nile lily-blue satin charmeuse. Over it falls a long coat-like clinging tunic of Maltese lace of a duller shade of similar blue, woven with metal. All round is a border of dull, old-gold Maltese lace. Above the hem the tunic is of plain Egyptian, night sky blue, attaching to the blue metallesque lace with two bands of gold lace. The long lines of gold lace are caught high on the bodice, and again near the hem of the tunic, with star-shaped ornaments of oblong pearls in every shade of subtle blue with gold over. The bodice part, with sleeves all in one, is of chiffon over under-bodice of dull-gold, wide-meshed net; at the neck is a line of gold and bluish scarab-shaped pearls. A hat of paille d'Italie is worn in the natural bass straw colour, decorated with black Chantilly lace and a large bow of blue velvet, with little clusters of Louis Quinze roses of varied hue.

A charming contrast to the above creation is the simple frock worn by Miss Phyllis Embury. It is of pink silk crépon, a dull and subtle shade of rose. The skirt is pleated and the bodice finished with cords of the material down the front at either side of a vest of paler chiffon. There are ornaments at either side of buttons and loops of the material, which are also used on the cuffs at the elbow. A quilled frill of white lace, with a small black bow, finishes the neck, and at the waist is a band of antique gold galon. A mob-cap shaped hat of white spotted net is worn, the brim soft pleated frills of lace, with a galon round it of almost luminous blue-green, with a design of carnations in rose and white.

Miss Vera Maitland, who is reputed to be a Russian princess in her own right, has an exquisite clinging slim-looking dress of a peculiar shade of gold-green mousseline poplin, patterned over with a tiny sprig of black. At the hem the skirt is arranged in pleats, headed by a broad band of the material, into the design of which touches of ivy-geranium pink are introduced. Down the front are a series of closely-set loops and buttons. The bodice, fastened across in front, shows a vest below and above of floss silk embroidery in a bright shade of russet. The neck-band is a frill of lace, with a russet-satin ribbon band. The sleeves to the elbow are similarly finished. The hat, of dark blue Tagel straw, is high in shape, and finished with curling, white quill feathers. A blue sunshade lined with dull gold-green, like the dress, having a long gold-green handle and flat gun-metal top, completes the scheme.

In the second act Miss Maitland has a smart coat and skirt of ivory white and shaded-grey blue-striped cashmere suiting. The plain effect of the perfectly cut skirt is softened by a cascade effect at either side produced by slant-wise bands of the material piped with grey-blue silk. The coat is short, just clearing the hips. The fronts are laid back with two buttons and loops near the dainty collar of white lawn embroidered with grey-blue silk, and frilled with white lace, and the natty tie of grey-blue silk. There is a chemisette and high stand collar of white tucked net. There is a waistband of the material to the coat showing cunningly at the back, and at either side corners of grey-blue silk. The sleeves have long buttoned cuffs with pearl-blue buttons to the elbow. A white paille de Riz hat is worn, trimmed with white quills.

Simple but wonderfully effective is Miss Embury's dress in this act. It is a Russian coat of monthly rose-petal-pink zibeline tussore. It is made all in one, buttoned down one side with pink buttons and loops. Pockets are simulated with similar buttons and loops, and the turned-down collar of embroidered lawn is finished with a black silk broderie Anglaise tie. There is a waistband of patent leather and gold-green galon. A wonderfully chic cape of embroidered lawn in creamy hue is worn. It is in graduated points, with turned back revers and long ends of the pink fabric finishing with balls. The cuffs are turned back with embroidered lawn below the elbows. A black chip hat is worn, with a wreath of large pink cabbage roses without foliage round the crown.

Miss Cressall graces the scene in a cleverly conceived costume of foulard satin in an old-world shade of Marie blue spotted with white. The skirt, falling in pleats at the hem, is plain in front and pleated at the sides. The bodice is of blue chiffon. The low neck is finished with a tucker of quilled white lace and a deep band coming down in front of copperas green, blue, and white embroidery. From it are boatswains' cords of copperas green silk, to which a piece of carved jade and a coral bead are fastened. The cachet of this smart little gown is in a crossed pèlerine coat with a habit basque back of the foulard. In front the broad crossed bias bands, like those on the skirt, are edged with a gracefully, easily-falling deep pleat of the material, while revers are of black satin foulard. A black crinoline straw hat is worn with a wide brim and a high crown, having at one side a large velvet bow, from which rises a high black osprey.

Novel designs are also found in the third act, wherein Miss Cressall appears in a gown of black satin lumineuse. There is a long tunic of black pleated chiffon, having a deep hem of black satin. The tunic is over white. Down the front is a border at either side of silver cording in soft, rich gold work, à la Japonais. A corner of this novel, rich, soft work is carried up on to the bodice in front. The bodice is itself of black chiffon over silvery blonde lace. It is finished with a hem-stitched border of black chiffon round the square yoke, which is of soft deep old ivory-tinted net. The sleeves to the elbow are of chiffon over blonde net, finished with hem-stitching. A large black straw hat is worn, with a wide brim, over this falls first a handsome rich fringe of soft grey-blue ostrich feather, then one deep and rich of black, while a dark blue velvet bow is placed at one side.

Miss Maitland is becomingly arrayed in a lovely summer frock of yellow chiffon, patterned with white. The skirt falls in soft, beautiful lines, caught up at one side with a band of brown velvet, and showing an under-skirt of softest apricot-skin yellow, veiled with blonde lace. The bodice crosses, showing a square yoke of blonde lace, outlined with brown velvet, wrought in bronze bead work, of which the belt is also composed. The sleeves to the wrist are of blonde lace, with draperies all in one, with the bodice falling over the shoulders. The hat is Louis XIV. in shape, turned right up at the back, and of Tagel straw. It is finished in front with a bank of wallflowers that look as if they were growing.

A pure white dress worn by Miss Embury is of grenadine, sown all over with white china beads. It is all in one, and has deep insertions of white Irish lace, from which, once on the bodice and twice on the skirt, fall deep fringes of white china beads. There is one band of unfringed insertion round the skirt, and the yoke is outlined in lace unfringed. There is no collar band, and the yoke is of net, sprigged and finished with a line of white pearling.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Barrie and Pinero.

"PEOPLE are always curious to know what the playwrights are personally like who have written the plays that have pleased them," writes Mr. Charles Frohman in the Saturday Evening Post (American). "There is the sweetness of a gentle philosopher and the tenderness of a child in the face of J. M. Barrie, but in his speech and manner there is the shyness and diffidence of one who could never be expected to confide his philosophy or tenderness to the public at large. The plays of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero are seemingly the works of an austere, trenchant, slightly cynical observer of the world and its ways. One's first impression of him is of a cold, analytical, rather austere personality. As a matter of fact, the man is a great lover of fun, a simple, genial gentleman, kindly, courteous, considerate.

Pinero as a Host.

"IT was about three months before Arthur Wing Pinero was made Sir Arthur Pinero that I was a guest at his little house at 14, Hanover-square, London. On the night I speak of there also sat at his table J. M. Barrie, John Galsworthy, Alfred Sutro, and Granville Barker. That little party gave me my first full impression of Pinero, the simple, retiring, almost shy man, in contrast to the Pinero of many famous plays, known throughout the four corners of the world as one of the greatest of living masters of stage technic. If anything, it was the quiet, even bashful Barrie, who, sitting next to him at the table, saved Pinero from seeming the simplest big man I had ever met.

His Methods of Play-writing.

"IT is with the utmost precision and only after a solid year or two of reflection that Pinero will take up a pen to lay the foundation of a play. Then the work proceeds with all the deliberation and deftness of a superb architect laying the groundwork of a building that, once sketched out in the flat, must inevitably rise in but one way. Pinero's plays are like perfectly woven tapestries—except that, unlike tapestries, they read brilliantly whichever side is looked at. Or they are like perfectly proportioned mosaics, each word precisely placed in each sentence, each speech deftly thought out, exquisitely chiselled and always contributing to the whole; each act a combination of cumulative scenes, and the whole moving, like the inevitable march of Fate, to a conclusion that is about as easy to deny as the total sum of a correctly added column of figures.

Third Act First.

"BARRIE, on the other hand, is just as apt to start writing a play by beginning at the third act. Then, when by writing through the third and fourth acts he has reached the fifth and is nearly ready to commence the first, he thinks it great fun to decide suddenly that the third act shall be the first. That is the difference between the two men. They are like two architects—the one first sees his building as a drawing in the flat, which when finished in all the multiplicity of its details will rise inevitably as it was originally planned; the other first sees his building as a completed structure and then works inwardly from that picture to the gradual arrangement of details.

A Firm Friendship.

"THUS, having everything that Barrie has not, there is much in Barrie's equipment that Pinero is without; yet Pinero's admiration for Barrie the playwright, is only second, and just barely second, to his fondness for Barrie the man. Yet, admiring Barrie as he does, Pinero has an equal fondness for the German stage, especially for the manner with which in every detail the Germans put on Shakespearean plays. The thoroughness of the German mind, as it is revealed in the theatre, has a great fascination for him. I suppose it is this fondness for a copious, German-like detail that is seen in the wonderfully full and unmistakably clear stage directions that distinguish his manuscripts from the plays of any other writer. If, with a good cast, you take a Pinero comedy and strictly follow its stage directions and its stage business in producing it, interpolating as little as possible of your own ideas, you will evolve the most spirited and genuinely humorous performance possible to that comedy. Pinero might take any of his plays—he has each one privately printed, not typewritten, before it is performed—and mail it to an intelligent stage-manager in Australia, with no directions other than those contained on the printed pages, and if that stage-manager has a capable company he can give just as perfect a performance of the play as if Pinero himself were present directing the rehearsals.

Pinero's Condensation.

"I DON'T think I have ever cut out a single line from all the Pinero texts I have ever staged—and that because I could not afford to do so. His manuscripts are constructed with a most copious attention to details of speech and of action, but always it is a thrifty copiousness, with never a thought or a word too little or too much.

His Generosity.

"PEOPLE who really know Arthur Wing Pinero know a man of a large outlook on life, a free hand and an abundant generosity, characteristic of a personality given to continuous expression. Once, when John Hare came to Pinero for a play, the playwright listened to him, said little, promised less, and seemingly hoped for nothing. But in the seclusion of his study he was soon busy, not with pen and ink but in quiet thought, evolving a wonderful drama of everyday English life. When he had though it all out he reduced his ideas to manuscript and called the play The Gay Lord Quex. It quickly brought him renewed fame and Mr. Hare a great personal success—possibly suiting that actor better than anything else he ever did on the stage. And then Pinero gave Mr. Hare all rights to the play for America.

How He Rehearses.

"HIS custom at rehearsal is to sit at a table in the centre of the stage, with a stenographer at his left and another at his right, both of whom he keeps continuously employed taking down notes on the rehearsal that mostly consists of additional stage business, points in acting, or technicalities in the readings of the lines. Before the next rehearsal everybody in the cast is furnished with a typewritten copy of the additions, corrections, or suggestions that have occurred to the playwright with regard to the performance of his or her part.

"PINERO is relentless in his insistence upon the carrying out of these instructions. I remember an actor who was floundering among the lines that he should have memorised, but, instead, had hoped to master during rehearsals. Finally losing even his own amazing assurance he stepped forward with the remark: 'I know my lines, Mr. Pinero, I really do.' To which Pinero quickly answered: 'Yes, but not mine.'"

What He Really Wanted.

A WELL-KNOWN actor took out one of the Conquest-Merritt dramas, For Ever, on tour. In it he had to represent a curious being—half-man, half-monkey—called Zacky Pastrana. His face is almost covered with hair, and a hirsute waistcoat carried on and completed the resemblance to a monkey. The actor, in his rendering, endeavoured to endow the creature with pathos as well as grotesqueria. In one scene he had to make love to the heroine in language something like this: "Oh, Ruth, I love you with all my heart and soul! My form may be hideous, but my heart is pure. Give me your love!" when a voice from the gallery shouted: "Give him some nuts, miss; that's more in his line!"

The fourth week of the Festival which has been running its glorious course at His Majesty's began with a performance of The Taming of the Shrew, Mr. F. R. Benson suspending his labours at Stratford-on-Avon in order to contribute to the London celebrations. A crowded house was entertained with a performance carried out with wonderful spirit and elaboration, and embellished by ingenious bits of dumb show that added to the humour of the situations.

Ever one of his most popular impersonations, Mr. Benson's Petruchio has thoroughly matured, and is now a highly finished performance. Mr. Benson is a picturesque Petruchio—boisterous, unrestrained, and mirthful, but managing by many clever touches, to surround the character with an air of romance that is very welcome. Mrs. Benson abandons herself wholly to the demands of the part of Katharina. She makes her an hysterical shrew rather than a passionate, but her tantrums are skilfully diversified, while the contrast obtained in the latter scenes, when the scold, broken in spirit, moves on to eventual regeneration, is admirable. Both Mr. and Mrs. Benson were cordially greeted at their first appearance, and numerous curtain calls were bestowed upon them by a delighted house.

A young actress whose appearances at the West End ought surely to be more frequent, Miss Nora Lancaster, played Bianca with girlish freshness and grace. She has a voice capable of exquisite modulations, and in her love scenes her acting was tenderness itself. Mr. Alfred Brydone was happily placed as Baptista, and was the courteous and tactful old gentleman to the life. Another performance of particular merit was the richly droll Biondello of Mr. Eric Maxon, a comedian with a peculiar suave manner, who aroused much laughter.

Ripe humour also distinguished the performance of Mr. H. O. Nicholson, who acted the inebriated Gremio with remarkable naturalness. The elderly swain was realistically represented in the Hortensio of Mr. G. B. Rathbone. Mr. Murray Carrington was a handsome and lover-like Lucentio, whose father was capitally personified by Mr. John Howell, admirable in delivery, but rather young in make-up; and Mr. J. Moffat Johnston made an excellent appearance as Tranio. Curtis was brought into agreeable prominence by the artistic acting of Miss Elinor Aickin; and as Grumio Mr. Harry Caine, who rejoices in a striking appearance, loyally seconded Mr. Benson's efforts to create laughter. Miss Cissie Saumarez won honours for her cultured singing of "Should he upbraid," which she rendered with delicacy and feeling. Miss Winifred Durie adopted a duly tragic delivery as the Widow; and the remainder of the cast displayed adequate appreciation of their duties. It is a worthy tribute to Mr. Benson's efforts in the cause of Shakespeare that a travelling company bearing his name should be selected to figure in the celebrations at His Majesty's, and the enthusiasm of the audience showed that the choice was amply justified.

On Tuesday Afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson and their Shakespearean Company, appeared in Shakespeare's Tragedy,

Coriolanus is less often seen in London than most of Shakespeare's plays, and the size of the stage of His Majesty's Theatre, and the opportunity which it affords for the display of effective scenery, were all advantageous to the revival which Mr. Benson and his company gave on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Benson is, in many ways, well suited to the representation of Coriolanus. His features are aquiline, and he is an athlete. He realises admirably the bitter pride of the patrician, and his contempt and his hatred for the common people. There is an almost ascetic flavour about his Coriolanus, who, we are told, was distinguished from the patricians of his time by his indifference to pleasure and gain. When Mr. Benson first enters, calm and serene, amidst the angry mob, he strikes the note of pride which he consistently maintains till the final fall of Coriolanus in the last act. Miss Genevieve Ward's clear and sharp distinctness of delivery was very agreeable in the character of Volumnia, and she depicted with practised skill the triumphant exultation and patriotic spirit of the Roman mother. Miss Nora Lancaster was a very sweet, gentle, and charming Virgilia, Miss Violet Farebrother as Valeria admirably indicating the lively, agreeable, sociable style of a Roman lady of the period. Particularly good were Mr. J. Moffat Johnston and Mr. Murray Carrington as the two tribunes, Sicinius Velutas and Junius Brutus. They effectively represented two striking types of character. Mr. John Howell gave a fine, bold, burly embodiment of Titus Lartius; and a very keen and clever reading of the rôle of Menenius Agrippa was supplied by Mr. H. O. Nicholson, whose elocution and characterisation were equally excellent. Mr. Eric Maxon played Tullus Aufidius very creditably; and Mr. Edward Harrison was good as Cominius. Mr. Harry Caine was a praiseworthy First Citizen, Mr. Guy B. Rathbone enacted the Second Citizen ably, and the minor parts were all well represented. It should be mentioned, however, that the energies of the young people who represented the crowd needed repression. They were so loud and so eager that they often cut short the speeches allotted to the named characters, and many were evidently over-anxious to achieve personal distinction by exaggerated sound and action. The mounting and dressing of the piece were of the best, the scenery, especially that of a Street in Rome, with a temple in the background, being very artistic. In praising the smoothness and closeness of the performance, we must not omit to give credit to Mr. John Douglass, Mr. and Mrs. Benson's excellent stage-manager, and to his assistant stage-manager, Mr. Harry Stafford. The overture to Beethoven's "Coriolanus" was performed by Mr. Adolf Schmid's fine orchestra in one of the intervals.

On Wednesday, April 20, the Elizabethan Stage Society presented Shakespeare's Comedy,

"THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA."

Duke	MR. ARTHUR HANDS

Third Outlaw	MR. GILBERT HUDSON
Servant	MR. C. ANSON
Julia	MISS MARY MANNERING
Silvia	MISS OLIVIA GLYNNE
Lucetta	MISS MARGARET BUSSE
Nurse	MR. G. BUCKLER

This representation of one of Shakespeare's weakest comedies was curious rather than satisfactory. The cast was very uneven, being decidedly stronger on the female side. The play was performed on a stage part of which was built out over the orchestra, the background being a conventional porch and balcony with tapestry hangings. The allotment of the part of Valentine to a lady prevented any illusion; and though Miss Winifred Rae did the best in the circumstances, she was hopelessly handicapped by the injudicious arrangement. Mr. Arthur Hands was too much inclined to introduce senile comedy into his reading of the rôle of the Duke, but on the whole gave a sound and careful interpretation, a little wanting, perhaps, in weight and dignity. There was little that was aristocratic, either, in Mr. George Ellis's Proteus, and he was too anxious to suggest the duplicity of the personage early in the play. Proteus may be weak and fickle, but he is not an intentional traitor. We find no warrant in the text for attributing a "stiff leg" to Thurio, and Mr. Frank Cochrane's representation of the character as a limping dolt was purely fantastic. A very clear and polished reading of Sir Eglamour was, however, supplied by Mr. Frank Darch; and Mr. Leonard Howard, though inclined to lag and pause too much, was by no means bad as Launce; Mr. Edwin Coates being good as Speed. Mr. Clive Currie gave a firm and sound performance of the part of the Host, and the outlaws had bold and distinct representatives. Miss Mary Mannering contributed a very pleasing and appreciative embodiment of Julia, full of feeling and delicacy. Miss Olivia Glynne put plenty of earnestness and some excellent elocution into her delivery of Silvia's lines; and Miss Margaret Bussé was a vivacious Lucetta. The music was under the direction of Miss Nellie Chaplin. "Who is Sylvia?" sung to an Elizabethan tune adapted by Sir Frederick Bridge instead of to the customary Schubert setting, was agreeably rendered by Miss Isabel Merson. Mr. W. Nugent Monck was the assistant stage-manager for Mr. William Peel, the founder and director of the Society.

One of the most important and interesting of the series of Shakespearean performances at His Majesty's was the revival on Thursday afternoon of King Henry V., in which Mr. Lewis Waller first appeared at the Lyceum in 1900. He again revived the play at the Lyric in November, 1908, so that the task of finding anything fresh to say concerning Mr. Waller's Henry V. is not an easy one. Criticism has been practically unanimous in agreement upon the many striking merits of his performance. It has been truly said of Mr. Waller that he combines the vigorous elocutionary power and strength of the old school of actors with the variety, grace, taste, and discretion of the new. These words of praise are specially applicable to his Shakespearean impersonations, and from the very first scene on Thursday afternoon Mr. Waller gripped the attention of the large audience and delighted them by as fine a performance as the most devoted admirer of Shakespeare's plays could wish to see. To paraphrase a term that has been often used in reference to another character—here was the King Harry that Shakespeare drew. The strong, dignified King, the brave soldier, the bold wooer of the timid Katherine of France—each varying phase of the character was admirably represented. The lines were delivered with just the right emphasis, and once more did Mr. Waller give the address to the English soldiers just before the attack on Harfleur with such spirit and fine elocution as to excite the warm enthusiasm of the audience. There were many calls for Mr. Waller in the course of the afternoon, and after the final fall of the curtain he came forward and said:—"Ladies and gentlemen,—As you seem to want a few words from me, my task is a very easy one—it consists of nothing but thanks. I have to thank Sir Herbert Tree for giving us the opportunity of playing in this splendid theatre, also I have to thank the members of my company, some of whom have appeared at considerable inconvenience to themselves, more particularly Mr. William Mollison—whose Pistol you have so heartily applauded this afternoon—who travelled all the way from Wales this morning, and is going back to-night. Finally, I have to thank you all for coming here this afternoon and giving us such a splendid reception. In the words of King Henry, 'We have everything to be thankful for.'"

Mr. Lewis Waller had excellent support from the members of his company. Mr. Halliwell Hobbes was a dignified Archbishop of Canterbury; and Mr. J. H. Irvine did well as the Bishop of Ely. Mr. Patrick Digan as the Duke of Gloucester, Mr. J. H. Napper as the Duke of Bedford, Mr. Franklin Dyall as the Duke of Exeter, and Mr. S. J. Warmington as the Earl of Westmoreland, were quite satisfactory in their respective parts; while the three traitors, the Earl of Cambridge, Lord Scroop, and Sir Thomas Grey, had praiseworthy representatives in Mr. H. B. Tabberer, Mr. Cronin Wilson (who also appeared as Sir Thomas Erpingham), and Mr. Frank Woolfe. Mr. A. E. George proved a capital Fluellen, and was ably supported by Mr. Frank Ridley as Captain Gower and Mr. C. McGuinness as Captain McMorris. Mr. William Mollison repeated his clever and amusing rendering of Ancient Pistol, Mr. Robert Bolder scored as Bardolph, and Mr. Alec F. Thompson was a droll Nym. The part of Michael Williams was quite safe in the experienced hands of Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. Harry Duff was particularly good as the Boy, Mr. Tom Heslewood deserves to be congratulated on his telling portrayal of Charles VI., and Mr. William Devereux was well placed as the Constable of France. Miss Madge Titheradge played with charm the rôle of Katherine; and Mrs Tapping doubled the parts of the Queen of France and the Hostess of the Tavern. Others characters were carefully sustained by Miss De Serville and Messrs. Caton Woodville, Lewis Broughton, and W. L. Branscombe. Miss Tittell-Brune, who acted as the Chorus, made a favourable impression. Mr. Lewis Waller was assisted in the production by Mr. Herbert Jarman. The battle scenes were excellently stage-managed, and the play was presented with a completeness of detail that was quite remarkable for a single performance.

"A POT OF CAVIARE."

Tragedy, in One Act, by Arthur Conan Doyle, Produced at the Adelphi Theatre, on Tuesday, April 19.

Professor Mercer	MR. MURRAY CARSON

Mr. Patterson	MR. A. G. CRAIG
Father Pierre	MR. A. CORNEY GRAIN
English Naval Officer	MR. ARTHUR BURNE

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's play, which was put on at the Adelphi Theatre, on Tuesday, in front of The House of Temperley, touches on the very nice point how near to certain death and torture one should be before committing suicide or merciful murder. The time is that of the Boxer Insurrection of 1900, and the scene is the bungalow of Professor Mercer, an entomologist, in the besieged European quarter in Ichau, China. Gathered together in the bungalow, and waiting for rescue to arrive in the shape of an English regiment, are Colonel Mannering, James Ainslie (of the Civil Service), Mr. Patterson (a missionary) and his wife and daughter, Father Pierre (a French Catholic priest), and a Chinese Christian servant. A dying Chinaman, who has been brought in, asks to see the Colonel, and tells him that the promised relief cannot arrive before three days. As there is no hope of keeping back the Boxers for more than a few hours, the Europeans are obviously doomed to death by slow torture; so the Professor poisons a pot of caviare and induces them all to eat of it. One by one they fall into the sleep of death, the Professor succumbing the last; but before he is quite dead there is a noise of firing, and a detachment of English troops enter. "Don't eat any of the caviare," cries the Professor, and then dies.

A very impressive and picturesque performance of the part of Professor Mercer was given by Mr. Murray Carson, who was remarkably well made-up; Mr. Stratton Rodney was smart, strong, and soldierly as Colonel Mannering; Mr. Claude King was free easy, and natural as James Ainslie; Mr. A. G. Craig was commendable as the Missionary, and Miss Hetta Bartlett and Miss Dorothea Desmond were capable representitives of his wife and daughter. Mr. A. Corney Grain endowed the French priest with delicate distinction and refinement; and Mr. Arthur F. Thorn was efficient as Ching. The curtain was three times raised at the conclusion of the piece in response to continued applause.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—May I, whilst thanking you for the friendly tone of the leading article in your last issue on the National Theatre, point out two small inaccuracies for the sake of record? The idea of the forthcoming Shakespeare concert ball, to be held at the Albert Hall on June 27, originated with the members of the Ladies' Committee, of which the chairman is Mrs. George Cornwallis West, and the vice-chairman the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton. Lady Tree is one of numerous ladies, not members of this committee, who have promised to help, and has undertaken to carry out a charming little conception of which at present I must not reveal the details. The other ladies you mention are amongst the list of patronesses of the ball, but are not all members of the Ladies' Committee.

It is a matter for rejoicing that the members of the acting profession, some of whom have hitherto opposed or been indifferent to our great project, are now evincing a more friendly and sympathetic attitude. Their fraternal co-operation will, I am sure, at all times be cordially welcomed by the committee.

With reference to your concluding paragraph, it should be stated that the object of the National Theatre (in addition to its significance as a memorial) is not to provide a home for "annual seasons or festivals," so much as to establish a highly-trained repertory company which will pass the best products of the classical and modern drama in regular review.—Yours faithfully,

H. S. PERRIS,
Organising Secretary.

Giving Him His Quietus.

PHELPS also was a very difficult actor for a nervous person to be on the stage with for the first time. He was a disciple of Macready, and, together with many of his master's excellencies, he had acquired some of his mannerisms, particularly a very awkward one of repeating in an undertone the words of his comrade's part while the latter was speaking them aloud. George Rignold, on the first occasion of his meeting Phelps on the stage, was greatly upset by this peculiarity. He was playing Adrien de Mauprat to Phelps's Richelieu, and during his long speeches in the chamber scene Phelps was accompanying him in a semi-distinct murmur. At last, Rignold could stand it no longer. Breaking off in the middle of a speech, and descending from poetry to plain prose, he said, aloud: "Mr. Phelps, if you don't leave off mumbling and grumbling, I can't go on." Phelps was struck dumb at the young actor's temerity, and the rest of the scene proceeded in silence.

THE "LAL" BROUGH SALE AT SOTHEBY'S.

BY TOM CRAVEN.

FIRST DAY'S SALE.

One of our leading London dailies remarks that "the attendance was disappointing—one expected to see the sale-room crowded with stage celebrities." Well, as a matter of fact, there were but four faces familiar to the theatrical firmament—Miss Ellen Terry, Lyn Harding, Arthur Williams, and genial, smiling little Harry Randall, who, by the way, we may shortly expect to see in musical comedy, in which, I feel sure, he would be extremely successful. The question will be put, "Why was the sale-room at Sotheby's not packed by 'Lal's' legion of friends and admirers?" Well, I can give two reasons why dealers were overwhelmingly predominant. Brough's pictures and engravings—to which the whole of Wednesday was devoted, no less than 151 lots falling under Mr. Snowden's hammer—had so recently been seen hanging on the venerable walls of our dead friend's beloved home, Percy Villa, that many of his famed comrades and intimates who had held the dear old gentleman in the most affectionate esteem, could not face the ordeal of seeing "Uncle Lal's" cherished household goods being "put up" and "knocked down," so they commissioned agents to bid for them. Mr. Fred Terry's representative, for instance, made successful bidding for several Phil May etchings. Did not every little item bring a lump to one's throat, a suppressed tear to one's eye, especially to such as had often accepted the famous comedian's delightful hospitality at that veritable "Liberty Hall"—the quaint old rambling residence in South Lambeth-road, where "open house" was found by the humblest to the greatest, where John Burns often sought an hour's recreation, and revelled in Brough's inexhaustible store of unrivalled anecdotes? Again, Wednesday was an unfortunate day for a theatrical sale, for is it not the great matinée day of the week, and are not most of our stars in harness? Still, I maintain that had the goods sold been once the property of a lesser man than "Lal" they wouldn't have fetched half the price. As it was, the first day's sale of pictures realised the comfortable sum of £235 17s. 6d. Theatrical portraits, ancient and modern, were, of course, greatly in evidence, for what man, dead or alive, loved his profession more than their sometime owner? There were Shuters, Garricks, Quicks—Quick always tickled the fancy of George III.—Siddons, and Foote. By the way, talking of Foote, Brough once chatted to me regarding "thinning out" his all-too-crowded picture collection. "If I ever could bring myself to offer at auction any of my dear old theatrical engravings, I hope I shan't put my Foote in it." Messrs. Tooth and Sons were the purchasers of an exquisite signed proof by Haig, "Mount St. Michael," which realised £28; an engraving of Sir Walter Scott brought £11 5s.; a solitary (attributed) Whistler, "Trees in Hyde Park," only secured a sovereign. Some very early rough sketches ranged from a guinea to £4 6s. apiece. Phil May's sepias, black-and-white, and water-colours fetched £49 9s.; a water-colour by David Cox, signed and dated 1840, tempted many buyers, but fell at £4 6s. An oil-painting of "Lal" by Spurrier was bought by an admirer for ten guineas.

The second day was relegated to the sale of old china, theatrical relics, books ranging from octavo et infra to quarto and folio volumes. Sidney Brough, that favourite actor and only surviving son of Lionel Brough, was in attendance, and many other notabilities. Lot 230, Charles Dickens's "Is She His Wife?" a comic burletta, Pierce Egan's "Show Folks" (plates, 1831), Geo. Colman's "Heirs at Law" (1808), autographed by Brough, fell to a bid of £5 15s. Lot 270, Ackermann's "Microcosm of London; or, London in Miniature," was purchased by Mr. Fred Terry for £20. The manuscript play of The Heathen Chinee, as represented in the extravaganza of Bluebeard "atte ye Globe," from Dec., 1874, to July 3, 1875, with about a dozen beautifully executed water-colour drawings by Groenhill, and graced by Brough's autograph, went for £4 10s. Mr. Spencer secured a most interesting photograph album for the modest sum of £3 15s. A splendid collection of water-colour and pencil drawings, including one by John Hayter (signed), two by Gainsborough, and three by Phil May, became the possession of a lucky gentleman for the moderate sum of £11. Malton's "View of Dublin" settled down at £4 16s. A really unique collection of old playbills relating to Drury Lane, 1814-1815, and containing such immortal names as Kean, Elliston, and Wallach, succumbed at £7; and a collection of engravings of ancient and modern masters found a contented buyer at £2 12s. Little things, such as matchboxes and whatnot, absolutely of no intrinsic value, fetched fancy prices because they had once been held in the hands of Lionel Brough. The result of Sotheby's sale, irrespective of furniture, came to £496 17s.

Many of those present left this memorable sale thinking and talking of the irreparable loss we have, one and all, sustained by the departure of a famous comedian, raconteur, and never-failing friend. Many would willingly have given a far higher price than that commanded by the disposal of his effects could they, by some miracle, have purchased his recall.

A Dish for a King.

WHEN Ennis Lawson was a young man he was offered, and accepted, the heavy lead at Astley's Amphitheatre, then carried on as part theatre, part circus, and menagerie. He was to open in a piece called The Monarch of the Woods. At rehearsal, when Ennis made his entrance in the third act, the stage-manager said to him, "Oh, Mr. Lawson, he follows you on here." Ennis looked round, but could see nobody on the scene but himself, so he naturally inquired, "Where is the gentleman?" "Oh, he's not here this morning!" "And do I address this long speech to him at night?" "No; you take no notice of him at all; but when you make your exit he follows you off." "And, pray, who is this gentleman who dogs my footsteps?" "Why, the lion, of course," said the stage-manager. "The Monarch of the Woods, you know. He's all right; he's old and quiet as a baby; he won't hurt you." "I'm not going to give him the chance," said Ennis, and threw up his part on the spot.

An Alarming Invitation.

WHEN Clarence Holt was with his company playing New Babylon at Sanger's Amphitheatre, Ramsgate, some of the actors were guests of William Sanger one night after the performance. Business was good, and William was in a jolly mood. He said to Holt, "What are you doing to-morrow, Clarence?" "Nothing particular," answered the tragedian. "Then come with me and we'll have a splendid outing. I'll drive you over to Margate, where Brother George's menagerie is stationed just now. We'll have a day with him; he'll show you everything worth seeing, and finish up by taking you with him through the den of lions." "Will he, by Jove?" said Clarence; "not if I know it. I've just remembered that my book's full for to-morrow. I've a particular appointment in town to-morrow. Thank you all the same!"

THE Gordon Highlanders stormed the Lyceum on Wednesday evening by invitation of the management, and thoroughly enjoyed the performance of The Fighting Chance. The men, in scarlet tunic, kilts, and tartan plaid, arrived in groups shortly before seven, and were accommodated in the dress circle, the officers being seated in the stalls. During an interval the orchestra played Scottish airs, and the dress circle lustily sang "Auld Lang Syne" to the music of the band.

Large and fashionable crowds are to be found at the Stow Hill Rink, Newport, at each session. On Thursday night a fancy dress carnival was held in aid of the Newport and Monmouthshire Hospital. The arrangements were in the hands of the Mayoress (Mrs. W. Blackburn) and a strong committee, who have been devoting a great deal of time to the necessary work. There were a large number of competitions for many prizes, and the events attracted a big entry.

DEATH OF MR. SYDNEY SHAW.

The death of Sydney Shaw, after a long and painful illness, which took place on Tuesday at Prairie Cottage, Barnes, S.W., removes a well-known figure from the ranks of musical comedy productions. Born in Liverpool forty-five years ago, Mr. Shaw was originally intended for the medical profession, but his passionate love of music was soon demonstrated. He first studied under the late Dr. Rohner, of Liverpool, and produced his opera, Love's Trial, at the Queen's Hall in that town at the early age of sixteen. He was then sent to the Conservatoire of Music, Leipsic, and passed all examinations with highest honours. While in residence there he received an invitation from the late Abbé Liszt, which to the end was one of his most treasured possessions.

At the age of twenty-one Mr. Shaw produced his oratorio Gethsemane at St. James's Hall, London, with Mr. Ben Davies and Mme. Clara Perry as principals. A more recent composition, "The Irish Guards' March," was graciously accepted by her late Majesty Queen Victoria. The deceased musician was a brilliant pianist, violin, and violoncello player, and has conducted over a score of operas in every town in the United Kingdom, among the more notable works being Rossini's Cinderella (with the late Georgina Burns and Leslie Crotty), Fauvette, Pepita, The Old Guard, Falka, Dorothy, His Excellency, The French Maid, Orlando Dando (with the late Dan Leno), The Silver Slipper, A Country Girl, The Girl from Kay's, the Duchess of Dantzic, Sergeant Brue, Miss Hook of Holland, Havana, and The Geisha. He leaves a widow, known in musical comedy as Miss Adela Rane, to mourn his loss.

THE LATE MR. SYDNEY SHAW.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

At a meeting of the Committee dealing with the Annual Theatrical Sports, held on Thursday night, Mr. J. Cullen, master carpenter of the St. James's Theatre, in the chair, and others in attendance being Messrs. C. T. Cory (Vaudeville), Philip Sheridan (Strand Theatre), Philip Raphael (Lyceum), H. Porter (Criterion Theatre), Wm. Pullinger (Globe Theatre), H. J. Kemp, C. Thorogood, A. Malcolm, and Wm. Johnson, Hon. Secretary, the replies received were read, and it was ultimately agreed that the committee undertake to organise the sports as usual, and that they be given on Tuesday, July 5, at the Stamford Bridge Sports Grounds.

Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, has again consented to act as the hon. treasurer for the Sports Committee, and Mr. A. P. Horne, of the St. James's Theatre, will be the deputy-chairman. The following were appointed as a sub-committee with power to add to their number: Messrs Cullen, Dyball, Sheridan, Raphael, Kemp, Thorogood, Porter, Malcolm, and C. T. Cory. A well-known actor is to be invited to be the chairman of the committee, and further particulars of the arrangments will be issued as soon as possible. Those who have been invited to act as one of the representatives of the committee at the various halls and theatres are requested to kindly intimate their intention to the hon. secretary at 29, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C.

Mr. C. Porter, who held the position of master carpenter at Terry's, Shaftesbury, and other theatres, has been appointed to that position at the Apollo Theatre.

The dinner given on Saturday to the staff of the Vaudeville Theatre by Mr. F. Anstey, author of The Brass Bottle, was the third given by the author of this play to the staff. The dinner was provided by Mr. E. W. Kent, of the Angel Hotel, City Road, and was well served and of excellent quality. Forty-seven members of the staff attended. Mr C. T. Cory, the popular master carpenter of the theatre, presided, and was supported by Mr. L. Mercanton, Mr. Claude Vernon, and Mr. H. Norton, the latter of whom will be the stage manager of the company going on tour in England.

After the dinner an entertainment was given, consisting of toasts, songs, recitations, &c., contributed by members and friends of the staff. During the evening a telegram was received from the author expressing the hope that all present would have an enjoyable evening. As a matter of fact every one enjoyed himself, and the whole affair was a great success.

The latest quotations of theatres and music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1⅞; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅞; Empire (10s. paid), 1⅛; London Pavilion (5), 3⅜; London Pavilion Pref. (5), 5; Metropolitan, ⅝; Moss' Empires, (5), 4⅛; Oxford (5), 6⅜; Palace Theatre (9s. paid), 1; Tivoli, New (5), 6¼.

A great wrestling match has been arranged to take place at the Oxford Music Hall on Monday next, at 3 p.m., between John Lemm and André Cherpillod, the two champions. The contest is for £100, in the catch-as-catch-can style, the best two of three falls, fifteen minutes between each fall, the match to be contested to a finish.

Mme. Réjane paid a visit on Wednesday to Mr. Pett Ridge's Home for East End Babies at Hoxton. No actress has ever had a younger or more appreciative audience. Mme. Réjane ran from cot to cot, and sympathy shone in her eyes as Mrs. Bland Sutton, one of the organisers, briefly explained something of the sadness of each case. "I have an idea," said Mme. Réjane. "Why not have a Birthday Gift Day, as we do in France? On a birthday or a day of remembrance for some dear loved one, let the kind-hearted make a donation to pay the expenses of such a home as this for one day. It is a trifle for some—but how much for these brave little ones!"

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Mrs. Fiske began her annual engagement in this city on Easter Monday at the Lyceum Theatre, appearing in Pillars of Society, a play, in four acts, by Henrik Ibsen. This is the fourth play from the pen of the Norwegian dramatist in which Mrs. Fiske has appeared, and it may be remarked that such popularity as Ibsen enjoys in this country is largely due to her efforts. In 1902 her impersonation of Nora, in A Doll's House, at the Manhattan Theatre, aroused extraordinary interest. During the following year Mrs. Fiske appeared at Hedda Gabler at the same theatre, and during her engagement at the Lyric Theatre in December, 1907, she was seen for the first time as Rebecca West, in Rosmersholm. In Pillars of Society she enacts the rôle of Lona Hessel. The rest of the cast is as follows: Karsten Bernick, Mr. Holbrook Blinn; Mrs. Bernick, Mrs Virginia Kline; Johan Tonnesen, Mr. Edward Mackay; Hilmar Tonnesen, Mr. Cyril Chadwick; Dr. Rorlund, Mr. Henry Stephenson; Bummel, Mr. Fuller Mellish; Dina Dorf, Miss Merle Maddern; Aune, Mr. Sheldon Lewis; and Olaf, Master Gregory Kelly. Mr. Stephenson is remembered here as the Messenger, in A Message from Mars. Mr. Mellish came here with Mr Martin Harvey, and has quite an honourable record on the American stage. He played the part of Rector Kroll, in Mrs. Fiske's production of Rosmersholm, and last season did good work as Sir Oliver Holt, in The Dawn of a To-morrow.

At Maxine Elliott's Theatre last week the Equality League of Self-supporting Women had a benefit performance, three plays being presented. Miss Elliott lent the theatre and recited a poem, and the sum of $1,000 was raised for the cause. The first play, Before the Dawn, by Bessie Hatton, illustrated the horrors of the days when young ladies were expected to marry, whether they wanted to or not. The young woman in the play is an exceedingly proper young person of twenty-four, born and brought up long before the days of suffragettes, and without any "rights" to speak of. The mother and father are hopelessly old-fashioned in their ideas. The former is delighted that Caroline is "getting on so beautifully with the 'Maiden's Prayer,'" and the latter declares that it is a woman's place to bring children into the world and attend to her husband's comfort. Accordingly, he vetoes the suggestion that the girl be sent to a finishing school, although the son must go to Rugby to be prepared for his proper place in the world. A clash comes with the appearance of a friend of the girl, an emancipated creature who has the temerity to ride in a hansom alone, a proceeding that shocks Caroline's mother beyond expression. This awful person suggests that Caroline go with her to Paris, there to become self-supporting. But the idea of her daughter earning a living for herself is too much for the mother, and, in the end, Caroline has to accept an undesirable suitor rather than face the awful danger of becoming an old maid. The second play was called A Woman's Influence, and showed how a Mrs. Lawrence tried to interest her husband in factory reform, and failed, while a flighty young widow played on his vanity and succeeded. The principal parts in this play were cleverly acted by Miss Haidee Wright and Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson. In the third play, How the Vote was Won, by Cicely Hamilton and Christopher St. John, the vexed question was answered quite easily, the solution of the problem being set for the "near future." The dependent women of the piece accept the edict of man, that their place is the home, and instead of making a living for themselves, settle on their nearest male relative. Several of them settle on a clerk, who earns a very moderate salary, causing him to become an earnest advocate of the "rights of women." The latter piece was extremely amusing, the arguments being presented in a vein of delightful satire, and the principal parts were admirably acted by Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson, Miss Mollie Pearson, Mr. Ernest Glendinning, and Miss Kate Carlyon.

NEW YORK, April 13.—A Skylark, a musical comedy in two acts, by Wm. Harris, jun., with music by Frank G. Dossert, was produced by Mr. Henry B. Harris at the New York Theatre on the 4th inst. Miss May De Sousa had the principal singing part, and Mr. John Slavin was the chief comedian. The first act is laid on board the good ship Pegasus. A party of American tourists are on their way to Greece. In mid-ocean a storm arises and Neptune comes aboard and invites the travellers to accompany him to Mount Olympus. The second act is picturesque and quite different from the usual run of musical comedies. It shows the abode of Jupiter and the immortals, and is beautifully mounted. Jupiter welcomes the visitors, since it has long been his intention to introduce on Olympus the more modern ideas of earth. The gods and the mortals intermingle and fall in love with one another and the situations that arise are more or less amusing. Mr. Slavin, as Rubin Smith, a yokel, is comical. As Christine Parling Miss De Sousa sang "When love is there," a very pretty song that made a distinct hit, and her performance pleased the audience immensely. Miss Clarice Vance appeared as Juno, and her songs were very well received. She sang "And I believe him" in her effective conversational way, and her popularity was great. Mr. Eddie Garvey, who "doubled up" as Casey, a courier, and Cupid, was funny in both parts. Mr. John Dunsmure, too, who used to be with the Bostonians, first came on the scene as Captain Cook, and afterwards played Bacchus. Mr. Dunsmure sang well, and so did Mr. Harrison Brockbank as Neptune. Miss Hazel Cox was an attractive Venus, who rode in a chariot with illuminated wheels. Mr. Leslie Gage was good in a juvenile rôle. As Rosalie Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt was a charming flower-girl. Her song and dance with Mr. Slavin, "The chicken and the frog," was an entertaining item, and her impersonations of Puck and Diana were pleasing. The chorus and dancing girls were handsomely costumed, and the piece, as a whole, was well worth seeing.

Debussy's interesting opera Peleas und Melisande has been revived, after a long interval, at the Komische Oper, Berlin, meeting with the same appreciation as on its former production. Director Gregor is taking it in a few days on a lengthy provincial tour.

Mr. Edwards Davis, who used to be a minister in Oakland, Cal., is appearing at the New York vaudeville houses in a dramatisation of Oscar Wilde's "The Picture of Dorian Gray." He impersonates Cyril Vane, and the name-part is played by his wife, who is known on the stage as Adele Blood. According to the newspapers Mr. Davis is an "M.A." and a "D.D." He once preached in the glaring red garb of Mephistopheles because "people would always listen to the Devil," and also waltzed with a chair for a partner to show his congregation that dancing was no sin. The dramatic sketch in which he is now appearing contains speeches that are admittedly not Wilde's but his own, such as "No woman is too good to be true, but many a man thinks it's too bad he has to be good." "I never could believe a woman who would tell her age; a woman who would tell her age would tell anything." "Man can be happy with any delightful woman as long as he does not fall in love with her." Mr. Davis also introduces a song composed by himself, called "Drink for ever." To an interviewer he said: "If I returned to the ministry with the knowledge I have gained as an actor I think I could do more for Christianity than I did before."

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, March 15.—Her Majesty's.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Manager, Mr. G. L. Goodman.—Aladdin, the Melbourne pantomime of "the firm," was transplanted here on the 14th, when, in spite of torrential rain, the house was packed. Miss Lily Iris is the Aladdin—comely, tuneful, and vivacious, becoming a favourite at once. A hearty welcome home was given to Harry Phydora, whose Widow Twankey kept the laughter-pot simmering all the time. The Emperor gives Mr. J. M. Campbell lots of opportunities for joke and songs. Mr. Edwin Lester is a genuine Demon King; and Miss Stella Selbourne presents a statuesque Pekoe. A little part, Nicee, gives Miss Nana Maher some bright moments; and Price and Revost are the acrobatic relief. Scenery, fire effects, fine chorus and ballet, good rousing orchestra, led by Andrew McCunn, and splendid crowds all well dressed make this a welcome bill of fare.

Oscar Asche and Lily Brayton are still playing The Merchant of Venice at the Criterion; but on Easter Saturday, the 26th, As You Like It, with Miss Brayton as Rosalind and Mr. Asche as Jaques, will be staged.

"A Waltz Dream" is transferred to the Royal, but it leaves for an Easter season at Perth, West Australia. Then the Royal, on the 26th, will be occupied by the Grand Opera Company. Madame Butterfly is in full rehearsal under Signor Roberto Hazon.

"The Luck of Roaring Camp," very little like the story save in the title, is filling the Palace, and will do so until Saturday next.

The Tivoli fills to see the wonderful feats of the Wille Brothers. Next come Vasco, the mad musician; Lillie Langtry; Kelly and Pearce, in a new sketch, The Girl from Yonkers; Dolly Dormer; Olga Grey, and a host already mentioned, who give Mr. Harry Rickards' patrons a very fine show.

Miss Ruby Isabel Michael gave her first vocal recital at the Y.M.C.A. hall on the 12th. The new soprano has a clear-cut, brilliant style, distinct enunciation, and attractive appearance. For concert work she will be a valuable asset. Among those assisting was Miss Mab Fotheringhame, a charming balladist.

MELBOURNE, March 14.—Princess's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Rupert Clarke and Clyde Meynell; Business-Manager, Mr. J. B. Mouirie.—The laughter-provoking farcical comedy The Night of the Party continues to amuse large audiences. Messrs. Willoughby and James are well suited in their parts, and the company supports them very capably. Owing to the theatre being taken for Easter The Night of the Party can only be played for nine more nights.

Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. E. J. Tait.—The Lion and the Mouse, produced by Mr. Julius Knight and Miss Katherine Grey, is a play which fully justifies the interest taken in it by the full houses which witness it nightly. The acting of Mr. Knight and Miss Grey is forcible throughout the piece, and they are ably supported by a strong company. Judging from present appearances The Lion and the Mouse will run for some considerable time.

Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. Arthur Levy.—Sergeant Brue is now, after being made an inspector for two weeks, thinking of retiring from the stage. The last eight nights are announced. Full houses have attended this entertaining musical comedy since its opening night, and Melbourne playgoers will be sorry to say farewell to Messrs. Meynell and Clarke's popular opera company, who make their final appearance in Melbourne in this production.

King's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. William Anderson; Business-Manager, Mr. Julius Grant.—The Prince and the Beggar Maid pursue the tenor of their way at this theatre. Miss Duggan has many opportunities in her part of Monica; and Mr. George Cross makes a very satisfactory Prince Olaf; while the rest of the company fill their various rôles satisfactorily. The Prince and the Beggar Maid will run till Easter.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Frederic Aydon.—The reappearance of Mr. Harry Marte, comedian and dancer, took place on Saturday. The last week of Houdini is announced; and the Brothers Martine will remain on the bill for the same limited time. Tom Parker and the other members of the company contribute excellent items to the programme. On Saturday evening next Mlle. De Dio will make her reappearance for a short farewell season.

Miss Nellie Stewart will inaugurate a season, under the direction of Mr. J. C. Williamson, at the Princess's Theatre on Easter Saturday with the production, for the first time in Australia, of J. M. Barrie's comedy, What Every Woman Knows.

A GRAMOPHONE RECITAL.

At Æolian Hall on Monday afternoon a gramophone concert, given by Mr. Alfred Hays, attracted a large audience. The platform was prettily decorated with flowers and plants, and a number of very fine gramophones. Mme. Clara Butt was the prima donna on Monday afternoon, and the great contralto was first heard in Liddle's beautiful song "Abide with me." It was curious to note how the gramophone brought out the masculine tones, one of the distinctive features of Mme. Butt's powerful voice. Mme. Butt was also heard in Handel's recitative and air "He shall feed His flock"; but the vocalist's most telling record was "O rest in the Lord" (Mendelssohn), which was superbly delivered by the fine instrument. The audience also greatly enjoyed "Lolita," the Spanish serenade of Buzzi Pecci, delightfully sung by Signor Caruso. In this record the castanet accompaniment was very distinct and effective. Signor Caruso was also heard in the "Flower Song" from Carmen. In this case, however, the opera orchestra tended slightly to confuse the tenor's notes. The very best results were obtained when the vocalist was alone heard on the record, accompanied by the small but excellent orchestra, conducted by Mr. Clarence W. Green, that greatly added to the attraction of the recital on Monday. The famous tenor sang the "Romance" from Meyerbeer's Les Huguenots, and was associated with Mme. Alda in the miserere scene from Il Trovatore. This was a perfect triumph for the gramophone, for the tenor's splendid ringing notes filled the hall as if he stood on the platform, and made one wish the modest record would have given an encore. Mr. Eli Hudson's piccolo solo "Birds of the field," was much admired; and the comic song of Mr. George Grossmith, jun., "Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay," and "The sergeant of the line," sung by Mr. Harry Dearth, were loudly applauded. Quite a feature of the recital was the Court Orchestra, under Mr. Clarence Green, who admirably played the intermezzo "Topeka," march "Under the banner of victory," and a pretty waltz of Davson. The large Æolian pipe organ was heard during the afternoon in the William Tell overture, in which the wind effects of the composer were finely displayed.

Mr. Chas. T. Aldrich, the famous American artist, tops the bill at the Empire, Newport, this week, and has met with a warm reception, and has again proved his wonderful ability. The Three Van Dammes are a laughable trio of clever acrobats; the Empire Comedy Four combined fun and cleverness; Jewel St. Leger is the possessor of a beautiful soprano voice, which she uses to great effect; Cumminger and Colonna are an unique pair of sand-dancers; Larry Lewis, a really quaint comedian, finds much favour; and Violet Stockelle, the Lyric Quartette, and the Empire Bioscope complete an excellent programme.

Not "Good in Parts" but good all through and all the time.

Under the present management since 1869.
Office hours, 10 to 8. Interviews between 11 and 4. 'Phone 1785 Gerr. Wires, "Dramatique, London." All descriptions of Theatrical Business negotiated.
Also First-class Music Hall Business.

THE Lessing Theatre, Berlin, has just commenced one of its famous Ibsen cycles, consisting of thirteen plays in chronological order. The chief artists of this well-nigh faultless company are participating.

THE Prince and Princess of Wales, with Prince Edward and Prince George, witnessed the performance of Alias Jimmy Valentine at the Comedy Theatre on Wednesday. The Prince of Wales thus paid his second visit to the production.

"THE CHORUS LADY," is at the Lyceum, Newport, with Miss Annie Hughes and Mr. William Mollison in the principal rôles. Miss Hughes makes a palpable hit in the rôle of Patricia O'Brien, and combines quaint humour and a touch of the dramatic. Miss Elsie Vron-Neville's Nora is charming. A playlet, The Touch of the Child, preceded, the characters being ably portrayed by Misses Helen Oliver and Jeannie Fitzgerald and Messrs. Mollison and Dean.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR
ACTOR AND COMPOSER
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes" which is at present required. — St. James's Gazette.

CLUBS AND PLAYS.

The recent raid by the police on the Willesden Radical Club, consisting of nearly a thousand members, has drawn attention to the excessive privileges possessed by these associations, and also to the very lax and indulgent way in which they have been treated, both by the authorities and by dramatic authors. With the drunkenness at the club, to which the police swore, we have nothing to do; what struck our eye in reading the report of the hearing at Willesden Police Court was that Sir ARTHUR WING PINERO's fine play His House in Order was being performed to an audience of 300.

There have always been performances of plays by amateurs, but they did not seriously compete with those given at the regular theatres. The principal amateur dramatic clubs used once a year to give a performance at St. George's Hall, the profits of which were usually given to charity. So insignificant commercially were these entertainments that a very low rate of fees was charged by the authors and owners of the acting rights, and in the agreement between the author and the manager there was a clause excepting "club rights," which were left in the gift of the author as not worth considering. As it was, there were many attempts by a certain class of amateur societies in the provinces to avoid even these moderate fees and play the pieces for nothing; and vigilance had to be exercised to obtain information of these evasions.

But the clubs which are attracting the attention of the Theatres Alliance, and should attract the attention also of all managers and dramatic authors, are not amateur, but social. The Working Men's Club and Institute is a union of over 1,100 working-men's clubs and associations, spread over the country, with about 400,000 members. It issues to its clubs associate and pass cards, which give the holder the privilege of honorary membership of the other clubs of the Union in all parts of the country. It is the custom in a large number of these clubs to give variety entertainments and performances of plays. A subscription of half-a-crown a quarter carries with it the right of the member to introduce to the club, for performances, free of charge, two women and two children; and gives him also the right to introduce one man at the charge of one penny. All that the introducer has to do on entering the hall is to buy for each of the party a 2d. programme, having attached to it a voucher for a reserved seat, so that he is able to entertain himself and five other people at the cost of one shilling and a penny. A member of an affiliated club has the right to visit the club during these entertainments.

It is evident that the entertainments given at these clubs will seriously compete with those at the regular theatres. The fact that the pits and galleries of some of our theatres are less patronised than they used to be is partly due to the fact that the working-man will not pay to go to a regular theatre when he can see the same play at his club, and, if he chooses, get "helplessly" intoxicated, at a very much lower rate of payment.

Another point on which it is desirable to lay stress is that these places of amusement are quite beyond the control of the County Council as regards public safety. Precautions against fire practically do not exist; there are rarely any fire-extinguishing appliances or hydrants, and no safety curtain. When we think of the meticulous care with which the authorities watch over the safety of the public who assemble in licensed theatres, the almost harassing attention which they pay to the provision, at the managers' expense, of safety appliances and extra exits, the entire liberty to endanger the lives of His Majesty's lieges which is allowed to these clubs is astonishing. The theatre manager is, indeed, at a great disadvantage as regards their competition. He has to pay very much higher fees to perform the same plays as those presented at the clubs. He may not serve intoxicating drinks in the auditorium, or give performances on Sundays; and he must provide expensive safeguards against fire and any number of "extra exits," whereas the clubs may be, and generally are, absolute death-traps.

It is useless to expect any improvement in this state of things from the Government. No Cabinet dare run the risk of offending the masses and alienating from itself the "working-man's vote" by interfering with his pleasures. What is possible is for dramatic authors to awake to the importance of these clubs, to their vast number, and to their tremendous profits, and charge them considerably higher fees than they demand from the managers, who are the dramatists' best customers, and therefore should enjoy preferential treatment. In the evidence respecting the Willesden Radical Club it was stated that the drink bill for the past quarter was £936, and a balance-sheet showed that over £10 a day was taken in beer. The profits of these clubs, therefore, may easily be imagined; and they are quite able to pay high fees if their members desire to see the best modern plays. So profitable is the supply of entertainments to these clubs that a "Club Dramatic Managers' Association" exists, with a committee and secretary, and fifteen regularly-organised companies. Until a holocaust of men, women, and children takes place at one of these places nothing will be done to place them under proper control as regards safety from fire and panic. But the dramatic authors have the game in their own hands, and must throw in their lot with the managers. The ever-watchful Theatres Alliance and its vigilant honorary secretary, Mr. MOVERLEY SHARP, are working hard to awake the dramatists to a sense of the situation. Two committees have already been formed to go into the matter—one from the Alliance itself—consisting of Mr. F. FREDERICKS, Mr. J. B. MULHOLLAND, and Mr. WENTWORTH CROKE—and another from the Touring Managers' Association—including Mr. LESLIE MORTON, Mr. MUSKERRY-TILSON, and Mr. LEVEAUX—and on Tuesday next a deputation from the joint committee will meet the leading dramatists to discuss the question. We await the result of the meeting with sympathetic interest.

THE MATINEE HAT QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I beg, through your columns, to suggest a solution of the matinée hat problem. The decision given last Friday by Mr. Curtis Bennett at Bow-street, "that a manager has a right to insist on a lady leaving the theatre if she refuses to remove an obstructing hat," does not materially alter the situation.

Under present conditions it would be absurd for managers to insist on the removal of all hats at matinées, as the dressing-room accommodation is altogether inadequate. Take the case of the Prince of Wales's Theatre. At every matinée of The Balkan Princess there are over two hundred and fifty ladies present in the stalls and dress circle alone. A fashionable hat is a wonderful creation, costing from ten to twenty guineas, which from its construction cannot hang on a peg, and requires for its proper preservation a special compartment at least two feet square. Imagine two hundred and fifty ladies scrambling for their hats after a performance.

Another vital question is the coiffure. Ladies dress their hair to suit their hats, and consequently do not appear to advantage when these are removed. A vital question!

No. The solution of the knotty problem rests with Dame Fashion, who is infinitely more powerful than the laws made by "mere man"; consequently I must appeal to Dame Fashion to solve the question.

To be suitably dressed for the occasion has always been considered "good form," and as Fashion has decreed that no really well-dressed lady can wear a feathered hat on the river, why should she not make it "bad form" to wear a picture hat at the theatre?

I suggest to the leaders of Fashion that the wearing of small toques should be made de rigueur. They would not obstruct the view, the hair would be dressed to suit the toque, and should the wearer have to attend a lunch before the performance or a reception after, the position would be understood and the lady would be considered absolutely up-to-date.

In furtherance of this idea I have arranged with Messrs. Reville and Rossiter, of Hanover-square, to create a number of toques suitable for wear at theatres, concerts, and churches, which I propose to exhibit at a special reception on the stage at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, before a number of fashionable ladies on Monday afternoon, May 2.

The question is a most important one for "mere man," and, as most have suffered from—I will not say the nuisance—the "decrees of Fashion," I ask all editors to assist me in pleading our common cause. Experience teaches me to believe that ladies will yield to a humble suppliant what they cannot be coerced into doing; consequently I am sanguine enough to hope that Dame Fashion may smile on my scheme and remove a very heavy weight from the shoulders of all London managers.—Yours faithfully,

FRANK CURZON.

Prince of Wales's Theatre, April 20.

Made of Brass.

WHEN I was touring with The World company—writes Mr. Fred Dobell—we had a business-manager (Claude by name) who, owing to an accident in early life, was provided with an artificial leg. It was an ingenious affair, full of steel springs and made of boxwood, and save that he walked a little lame no one would suspect that one of his legs was false. One Saturday night at Burnley the house was packed as full as it could hold. Claude was standing at the pit pay-box when a miner, more than "half-seas over," came up and demanded admittance.

"You can't come in," said Claude.

"Whoy not?"

"Because the pit's full; and, besides, you're drunk."

"Drunk am I?" said the pitman, measuring Claude up and down. "I'll purr thee, thou blankety blank."

So saying, he retreated a step or two, and came forward with a running kick. Claude instinctively put forward his false leg and received the kick on it. The springs gave a loud "ping!" which so startled the man that he cleared off, saying: "Eh, thou's a funny 'un—made o' brass, by gum!"

MR. FRANK CURZON.

BY ONE WHO KNOWS HIM.

Love of work, thoroughness, complete self-control, and impenetrable urbanity, combined with extraordinary business astuteness, thorough knowledge of stagecraft, and the needs of his clientèle make up the ingredients which render Mr. Frank Curzon one of the most respected and successful managers of our day. To tell you in detail all about his career would but bring about my head the charge of plagiarism, for has he not since the first time he entered the managerial stakes, been as keen a manager, producer, and impresario as the late Sir Augustus Harris. Frank Curzon started his career in his father's offices, and possessing extraordinary business instincts, laid the foundation stone upon which he has undoubtedly built his present solid and honourable position. He was by way of being an exceedingly promising amateur performer, and subsequently discarded his clerical duties, and played all sorts and conditions of parts in Benson's and other "legitimate" migratory companies. He never told us he was clever—but he was—and, by Jove, he is. Gifted with a good presence, excellent speaking voice, and a plentiful supply of rare intelligence, he would assuredly have become an actor of no mean celebrity, but he knew a trick worth two of that. He made up his mind to "get there" as a business manager, and being in no way trammelled by that wretched interloper—conceit—he got there, he's there now, and, bar accidents, he'll remain there.

In 1896—only fourteen years ago, mark you—he was quite an ordinary touring manager. To those who couldn't see beneath the surface he was simply an unaffected peace-loving gentleman, managing and playing in a farcical comedy which nobody else before him had produced with conspicuous success. It was called, I think, Tom, Dick, and Harry. I had lost sight of him for many years until I saw him in this none too wonderful concoction. We chatted together for some time, and what struck me about the man was his placid optimism, his modest self-confidence, his quietly-expressed power to dominate those less "brainy" than himself, and in the doing of it maintain his own dignity, and yet not trespass on the feeling of others. In this respect let my pen glide into a siding. I have known Frank Curzon many years—"donkey's ears" as he puts it—and under the most tricky, critical, and tiresome circumstances he's as "cool as a cucumber." You can't ruffle him; no, not even the self-satisfied "principal boy" can "egg" him on to anything but squaring matters—putting things right, don't you know. He's got a way of making you think you've got your way, but suavely and quietly he's got his. His run of successes in all sorts and conditions of play has been nothing short of marvellous, and although he may have a swollen banking account the same adjective in no way applies to his well-shaped head—it's quite normal. A very little time ago he had under his capable control no less than six prominent West End theatres—the Strand, Avenue, Prince of Wales's, Comedy, Criterion, and Wyndham's—and heaven only knows how many travelling companies, and even then he was always accessible and unfailingly genial and encouraging to his old and less-gifted or successful friends. An actor in whom I was deeply interested called upon Curzon at his offices in Jermyn-street, with a view to getting "shopped" by our great managerial magnate. I met the suppliant later on in the day. "What luck with Curzon?" I asked. "Great!" he replied joyously. "He inferred I was no d——d good, but so politely that I'd rather have my services rejected by him than accepted by any other manager in the Three Kingdoms." Before Curzon became the Frank Curzon—before he had shown us all how to tackle ladies wearing matinée hats of the American roof garden order, and receive the highly complimentary congratulations of the presiding magistrate upon his "admirable conduct"—he most successfully produced a pantomime at a certain North London theatre. One snowy blizzardy night he sat in a box and followed with ever-watchful eye the progress of the "show." One of the alleged comedians lived at Brixton-hill, some miles from the theatre. Vehicles of every denomination were held up, and cabmen were declining fabulous fares. Our comedian bribed a stage-hand to induce a four-wheeler to get him to Brixton even at a walking pace. Frank Curzon, on leaving the theatre for the Hotel Cecil, found himself "cabless," but with his cute, far-sighted eyes he spotted the "comic's" solitary growler, and jumping into it told the cabby to drive him to his destination. "Sorry, sir," replied the man; "but this 'ere lot's engaged by Mr. ——." "Oh, I'll fix that up all Sir Garnet," answered Curzon. "You hop it, and I'll pay you double fare." The treacherous cabby accepted the liberal offer with alacrity, but just as he was 'er-movin' on the comic rushed from the stage-door gesticulating and shouting, "Hi, hi, hi! that's my cab!" "My dear boy, you're labouring under a mistake," said smiling, imperturbable Curzon; "it's my cab. But I can't see you landed in the snow like this. Jump in, and I'll drive you as far as the Hotel Cecil." It was all done so politely—so pleasantly—beamingly—that the comedian, after trudging through miles of snow from the Cecil to Water-lane (some five miles or so), awoke his wife up and told her how courteous Mr. Curzon had been in giving him a lift.

After the Tom, Dick, and Harry venture there was no looking back for our calm, collected, work-worshipping Curzon. I cannot give the history of his successes in chronological order, for I've a secondhand sort of memory, and I'm not going date-hunting, because you've heard all about it before; but I'll bet my bottom dollar that in my recollection no so young a man has backed the succession of winners selected and trained by Frank Curzon. I'll just name a few. You can fit in the missing ones by studying your "The Era Almanacks." Message from Mars, in conjunction with Mr. Chas. Hawtrey (his first West-End partner); When Knights Were Bold, in partnership with brilliant Jas. Welch; Chinese Honeymoon, a record-breaker as regards consecutive runs; Miss Hook of Holland; An Englishman's Home, The King of Cadonia, and date experts alone know how many more mascots. He was the first manager to lure Miss Marie Tempest—that unrivalled and delightful comedienne—from the varied notes of musical comedy to the top ones of high comedy, and at this present moment he is riding two histrionic horses which are already first favourites—The Balkan Princess and The Naked Truth, in which the delicious Charles Hawtrey, by the aid of a magic ring, is forced to tell the truth, the while Frank Curzon is compelled to display "house full" boards.

The subject of this all too inadequate appreciatory persiflage is as keen a sportsman as he is a manager. He can ride to hounds with the best of us, shoot, fish, golf; in fact, he's a good sort and a sportsman every time. "Jolly good luck to him," so say all of us. Go on soaring, my dear Mr. Frank Curzon. You'll never follow Mark Twain's advice: "Soar, soar, and the higher you soar the sorer you'll be"—not you.

MR. WILLIAM MOLLISON and Miss Annie Hughes are this week at the Lyceum Theatre, Newport, in The Chorus Lady. Miss Hughes is really charming in her portrayal of the heroine, her acting evoking much enthusiasm. Mr. Mollison, in the rôle of Dan Mallory, scored a triumph by sound acting, and shared the honours of the evening; Miss Elsie Vron-Neville as Nora O'Brien was also charming; and Mrs. O'Brien, acted by Miss Woodward, was a life-like impersonation.

T. P. O'CONNOR'S REMINISCENCES.

Mrs. Billington—writes Mr. T. P. O'Connor in "The Stage Then and Now" in M.A.P.—is one of the friends of the youth of the men of my epoch; I have seen her scores of times, and in more towns than one. She is now eighty-five years of age, and has behind her a career of sixty years. It is ten years since she last appeared. I am glad to hear that my friend, Herbert Tree, the most generous and sympathetic of men—especially to people of his own craft—is arranging a benefit for Mrs. Billington. I hope my readers will do their share towards making it a success. Old Henry Howe, who played beyond his eightieth year, and who was one of Irving's old associates and friends, used to be able to tell weirder stories than even those of Mrs. Billington—especially when the fortune of war brought these strolling players to the remoter parts of Scotland.

I suppose my readers know that the first theatre that was built in Scotland in modern times was promptly burned down by the shocked inhabitants. I believe that Howe could tell of times when he and the female, as well as male, members of his company were refused admission to any hotel or lodging, or even small inn, in these Scottish parts; and that sometimes, like gipsies or tramps, they had to spend their nights under the stars.

My own recollections of the stage when I was a boy are sufficiently weird. I can recall quite distinctly that little wooden caravan in the market square of my native town, wherein I was first introduced to those glorious realms which bring more real joy to childhood than all the materia. triumphs of a later epoch of life can ever bestow. It was the old story of the Mistletoe Bough—set dramatically; and the lady locked into the trunk not by accident, but by the designing villainy of the scoundrel of the play.

How well do I remember still the great scene of the play. The villain is charged by this person and that with the murder of the disappearing lady; and, with a look of Machiavellian triumph, he turns and asks "who accuses me?" And suddenly the lid of the chest opens, and the pale figure of a woman with very long hair, rises, and pointing her arm at the villain, says, "I accuse you, Edward"—or whatever the gentleman's Christian name was—and, thereupon, the villain collapses, and virtue is once more indicated in the usual way. What heroes these actors appeared to me, what divinities these actresses.

And, therefore, you will easily understand the shock of pained surprise that came over me, like a summer cloud, when the next day I saw the fascinating villain standing in the same market place listening to an itinerant Cheap Jack, who came to our provincial Irish town with Brummagem goods and Brummagem patter—and horror of horrors! the great artist wore trousers very frayed at the end.

There is in Dublin still, as there was in my boyhood, a good old theatre known as the Queen's Theatre. One of the legends gathered around it is, that it was on its boards Johnny Toole made his first appearance on the stage. I believe the legend is unfounded, but let it pass. The Queen's Theatre, in those days, played the same part in the theatrical life of Dublin that was enacted by the old Adelphi in London—that is to say, the plays were all full-blooded melodrama, wherein the virtue was more spotless than snow and the vice blacker than night.

I remember the name of one of the chief actors who was the god of all the boys of Dublin; it was Henry Vivals—gone to his rest, I have little doubt, many decades ago. Here, again, unkind destiny played me the trick of revealing to me in the public street the hero of my idolatry.

I can see him still, walking down the narrow and rather gloomy street wherein I was a visitor, and, somehow or other, that street and the poor actor seemed to me to have had a strange kinship.

For he also looked a dark, sombre, and squalid figure. He wore the then classic garments of the actor, that is to say, a soft, large sombrero-shaped hat—poor Bill Terriss affected, though in excellent tailoring, something of the same kind of histrionic costume up to the day of his tragic death—and Mr. Vivals also was caparisoned in a long black mantle—exactly like the cloak in which the villain dissembles and at the same time reveals himself, when bent on one of his dark deeds against at once suffering and innocent beauty. I also observed that he was unshaven, and that his cheeks were covered with a black-blue stubble. He looked rather a sombre and strange and squalid figure.

Shall I tell of that joyous and epoch-making moment in my life when first I was introduced into the world of Shakespeare? It was in a back-yard in a shed, and Othello was the play. I had been for years stupefying my poor young head and wasting my precious years in the hopeless attempt of learning two dead and entirely profitless languages, but I had never been even asked to look into that greatest marvel of literature—Shakespeare—and here, all at once, in these wretched surroundings, I came into that new world, and have ever since been a Shakespeare devotee.

I remember still the days when there were no stalls in theatres; that portion of the theatre now occupied by the stalls, or mainly by the stalls, was all pit.

And the real, the genuine, the frequent playgoer, always went to the pit by preference. It was there you found the wits and the dramatic students, the men about town; it was only gentlemen who brought their wives to the theatre and regarded a visit thereto as an unusual treat to be taken solemnly and ceremoniously—it was they only who took seats in the dress-circle and in the boxes. The men of real business went to the pit. In my young days there were two prices for the pit. The first for the whole performance, the second for the second half.

As the performance consisted in those days of at least three items, with probably a hornpipe thrown in, there was ample room for a man getting a good night's amusement, and therefore finding it worth his while to pay half price for getting half of it.

It is an old world, and a very remote one in thought, rather than in actual time. Has the stage improved? Has the actor or the actress improved with the change in their positions? I answer that question unhesitatingly in the affirmative. It is only the fool and the fanatic and the illiterate who will refuse to recognise the gigantic part which the Drama plays in life and in literature. With, perhaps, the exception of sculpture and of painting, the stage is, of all the reproductions of life which are called art, the most faithful and abiding.

It is the modern pulpit; and the pulpit to many thousands who will tolerate no other. Love, honour, patriotism, tenderness, the golden rule of doing unto others as you would they should do unto you—do you think these things cannot be taught as effectively by a good play as by the most eloquent sermon in the richest surroundings of ritual liturgy and architecture? And people who won't go to a church in this age of unrest and doubt will go to the play.

As to the position of the actor and the actress, it is only the due recognition of the high and useful part they play in the work, the teaching as well as the amusement of the world. They are the priests of culture and of art, and as such they are entitled to honour and respect. And they themselves have risen with the rise in their profession. To-day the respect given to the actor, the opulence, comparatively speaking, of those who succeed, the commingling with the most cultivated and the most intelligent men and women of society—all this has rested on them. The respect of others is of all agencies the best to produce self-respect, and all the virtues which self-respect brings.

PARIS, THURSDAY, April 21.—The Vaudeville has secured a genuine success in the new work by MM. Bernard and Athis. It is a singular and charming play, now and then verging on melodrama, yet, always remaining light comedy, picturesque and amusing. The story can be summed up in a few words. A political man has written some compromising letters to a young damsel, who refuses to return them, whereupon the political man promises ten thousand francs to a burglar if he can bring him that correspondence. But the two clever playwrights have dealt with that flimsy plot in a masterly manner, and have given us three acts full of life and observation.

The scene of the first act is laid in a café, frequented by members of the criminal classes, and kept by l'Oncle Tabac, a kind of philosopher, whom we find in conversation with Doizeau, a usurer, and receiver of stolen property, prepared to undertake any "job" for a consideration. Doizeau, who has been commissioned by a gentleman to regain possession of the letters written to Irma Lurette, a cocotte, has come to find a burglar suitable for the work, whereupon l'Oncle Tabac introduces to him two young men, one, a timid boy, afraid of anything that presents any risk, and Claude Brévin, a good-looking youth, who has just joined the "profession." Educated, accomplished, and rich, Claude once moved in the best society. But he lost his money, fell lower and lower, and now resorts to crime for his livelihood. Being a beginner, he still has scruples, but he cannot resist the offer made him by Doizeau to lay his hands on the compromising letters, against a remuneration of ten thousand francs. In his inexperience he does not yet know how to set to work, and, therefore, awaits the instructions of the experienced Doizeau, who, a connoisseur of mankind, is convinced that this handsome, elegant youth will be able in a few hours to fascinate a girl of the Irma class, especially as Doizeau has taken the precaution of giving him a stolen ring which he can present to the lady.

In the second act we are in the ante-room of the big hall where a theatrical manager offers a banquet in honour of a play that has attained its three-hundredth performance. And here the authors have given free scope to their wit, as they parade before us actors, actresses, pressmen, and grumpy shareholders, who never expect to receive a penny dividend from the before-mentioned manager. Claude Brévin is among the guests, escorted by Doizeau, his mentor. The latter knows that Irma is expected, and he wants Claude to meet her. Claude feels ill at ease. It is his first "job"; he does not like the business, and begins to regret that he has not become a cabman, or something of that kind. But it is too late, for Irma makes her appearance, and she and Claude soon become acquainted. At first she holds back. She, however, is not proof against his good looks, and, without waiting for the banquet, the two go off together to Irma's apartment.

The last act plays in Irma's drawing-room, and we see the girl enter, followed by Claude, who carries in the pockets of his evening dress the necessary implements for forcing locks. The scene between the courtesan, accustomed to dispense her favours with a liberal hand, and the young burglar, who has not the courage of becoming a criminal, is striking. Claude begins by abusing Irma so as to pick a quarrel, but the girl answers in a gentle tone. He then bluntly tells that he has deceived her, that he is not the rich man he pretended to be, and that, in fact, he does not possess a cent. This does not upset Irma, who, in the course of her career, has frequently heard these confessions. Enervated by so much resignation, Claude then resolves to act. Irma having left the room for a moment, Claude switches off the electric light and hides behind the curtains, ready to pounce upon her when she returns. To Claude's surprise somebody else glides into the room. It is the timid boy we saw in the first act, who has mustered up courage to do some work on his own account, even if he has to strangle the lady in the operation. He is caught, half strangled by Claude, and allowed to depart. Claude's pluck and apparent magnanimity have conquered Irma, and she does not conceal her admiration for him. This is more than the poor would-be burglar can stand. He shudders at the thought that she takes him for a hero, and he makes a clean breast of everything. When he has finished his tale, Irma shrugs her shoulders. Like in most women of her class, there is pity in her heart for the stray sheep of humanity. She and he have wandered far away from the right path, and, having met, an unconscious sympathy draws them together. The situation is no longer amusing, it has become downright pathetic. And, in order to raise their characters above the ordinary level, the authors cause them to behave handsomely in the end; for, Irma hands Claude the bundle of letters, whilst Claude promises to make Irma a present of the ten thousand francs this correspondence will bring him in—a somewhat fairy-like but pretty ending to a very entertaining play. For many months people will flock to the Vaudeville to applaud Le Costaud des Epinettes.

The acting was beyond praise. Mlle. Lantelme felt thoroughly at home in the rôle of the fallen beauty Irma, and played the difficult scene in the last act with consummate skill. M. Louis Gauthier was a sympathetic burglar. That clever actor, M. Lérand, supplied a clever sketch of the sinister Doizeau, and l'Oncle Tabac had a splendid exponent in M. Joffre. The management had entrusted the minor parts to artists like MM. Levesque, Dax, Baron fils, and Mlles. Caron, Ellen-Andrée, and Carèze, thus supplying such an ensemble as is rarely seen on any stage.

Irving's Satire.

IN his younger days Henry Irving was entertained at a supper given in his honour at Edinburgh. As usual, after the good things had been discussed, the speeches delivered, and the "wee sma' hours ayont the twal" had arrived, the company settled down to song and recital. At last a local favourite, who had achieved notoriety by his supposed imitations of Irving, was pressed to contribute his quota, but hesitated to do so. The matter was explained to Irving (who was in the chair), and he said "Certainly. I should like to hear and see myself mimicked. Come forward, Mr. Tamson." Whereupon Tamson, thus encouraged, commenced "The Dream of Eugene Aram," in vile burlesque of the Irving manner. Irving endured it patiently till the end of the sixth verse, when he stopped the reciter, and said very suavely: "Excuse me, Mr. Tamson, but do you propose to give us the whole of the poem?" The mimic responded modestly that he had that intention. "It's not at all necessary, dear boy, I assure you," said Henry the great; "your object is already achieved. I can quite understand now why some people say I'm a shocking bad actor."

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Miss Vesta Tilley has sent a cheque whereby her own contribution to the Music Hall Home have been brought up to the magnificent sum of £100. Mr. Walter De Frece, as president of the Fund, also weighed in with £20, and Mr. Gus Elen's happy idea of contributing 1s. to each card sent in up to March 31 has resulted in a total of about £10.

Last week we were able to announce in these columns that Mr. Will H. Boardman, manager of the Pavilion Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, had been offered the position of general-manager of Thomas Barrasford, Ltd., but had not declared his decision in the matter. We are now informed, in an intimation from Randvoll House, Charing Cross-road, that "Mr. Will Boardman, of Newcastle, has been appointed manager for the Variety Theatres Controlling Company, Ltd." This company has the direction of the Butt, Barrasford, De Frece, and Gibbons interests, reaching Paris, Brussels, and Berlin.

Mr. Boardman will commemorate on Wednesday next the sixth year of the opening of the house, which, however, came under the Barrasford régime late in December, 1903, when Mr. Boardman was transferred from the St. Helens Hippodrome to manage the new venture. The arrangements for Wednesday's matinée, which will take the form of a testimonial benefit to the departing manager, are in the hands of a most influential local committee, and everything points to a great success. Mr. Boardman's promotion will give much satisfaction to his numerous friends, though Novocastrians generally will regret his departure.

Mme. Réjane will be seen at the Hippodrome on Monday in Madame Sans-Gêne, the brilliant play in which she made the greatest of all her many successes. She will be supported by the members of her own company, who have expressly journeyed from Paris for this purpose. The production will be on an elaborate scale, special costumes and scenery having been prepared.

Of course we shall have the scene of the exalted Sans-Gêne's Reception, to which Queen Caroline of Naples and the Princess Bacciochi come, with the intention of creating a scene. They succeed, but not quite in the way intended. Addressing impertinent gibes to Sans-Gêne—whose failure to acquire stately manners irritates her exceedingly—they are more than taken aback by her unabashed retorts. Their impudence makes her lose patience to such a degree that she reminds them what they had been formerly themselves. It is quite true, she admits, that she used to wash chemises, but never theirs, for they had none!

In connection with Mme. Réjane's appearance in the character, it is interesting to learn that we are promised an English Sans-Gêne on the variety stage in the person of that consummate comedienne, Miss Annie Hughes, who will come to the Chelsea Palace on Monday, May 23, in a sketch entitled The Belle of the Washtub.

In this historiette of the kind-hearted blanchisseuse, who becomes the wife of a Marshal of France and a duchess, Miss Hughes will play the lowly Sans-Gêne in her humble surroundings and the "lady" who tries to realise the duties and the importance of her new station. In the rôle of Napoleon she will have the support of Mr. Henry Deas, an actor who made a great success as Dan Mallory in The Chorus Lady when this play was recently at the Coronet and Kennington Theatres. Fouché, Chief of Police, will be in the clever hands of Mr. Mayne Lynton, who is at present playing Nero in Mr. William Greet's Sign of the Cross company.

Mr. Martin Beck, on his return to the States, had nothing further to say regarding the completion of the arrangements for his world-wide vaudeville circuit—the Butt-De-Frece-Gibbons-Barrasford scheme—except that it was assured that he would be playing Orpheum vaudeville from San Francisco to Berlin within another year. His arrangements with Mr. Butt for the Barrasford tour in the United Kingdom are completed, so we are informed by Variety, and it is only a question of settling a few minor details before the agreement assumes an actual working basis.

Dr. Wilnar's "spirit paintings" are, it appears, a greater success than Mr. Lloyd George's "spirit pictures," which last year glowed with anticipations of a largely increased revenue—anticipations which have been falsified by results. The materialisation of a work of art without apparent human aid is, by the way, being presented at the London Pavilion by Mr. P. T. Selbit, who has secured the sole rights of Dr. Wilnar's clever invention.

The Government has its hands too full to give legislative effect to the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Stage Plays which sat in the summer and autumn of last year to consider the question of the Censorship as well as the anomalies of licensing; and with the immediate prospect of another General Election it may safely be assumed that any practicable measure for the establishment of the uniform licence will be postponed for at least two years.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee in their report say:—"As the Lord Chamberlain is the authority for granting stage-plays licences for the greater part of London, and the Council is the sole authority for granting music licences, it would be necessary that an understanding should be arrived at with the Lord Chamberlain that he would grant his licence to any premises that were licensed for music and were structurally fit to be licensed for stage plays, and that the Council should grant a music licence for any theatre that was licensed by the Lord Chamberlain.

"The division of jurisdiction that would result would probably give rise to considerable difficulty. The suggestion that a uniform licence should be granted which would enable either stage plays or variety entertainments to be performed was considered by the Joint Select Committee on Stage Plays (Censorship), 1909, and was supported by the Theatrical Managers' Association, but opposed by the Entertainments Protection Association and other proprietors of variety theatres." By the double licence which we have advocated in these columns the jurisdiction of both the Lord Chamberlain and the County Council would be undisturbed. The chief difficulty would be one of excise, which would also arise in any proposals for a uniform licence.

The question "Who is it that wears the shiniest topper in the profession?" may be settled as a dead heat between Mr. Fred McAvoy, manager of the Euston, and Mr. Whit Cunliffe. And, in connection with hats, it may be recorded that the "comedian in brown" once wore the glossy topper of no less a personage than His Majesty the King. It happened in this way. One night in hurrying from one hall to another Mr. Cunliffe, in a moment of forgetfulness, sat on his topper, placed on the seat of his brougham, and had immediately to send for another to the firm that also makes the King's headgear. The hat duly arrived, and was worn on the stage by the singer. On coming off he, however, learned that the topper he had been sporting belonged to the King, having been sent by mistake.

The Swiss Gardens, Shoreham, Sussex, are to be sold by order of the Public Trustee by Messrs. Jenner and Dell, who will offer them at auction at the Old Ship Hotel, Brighton, on Thursday, May 19.

This freehold property, comprising about 4½ acres, including the ornamental lakes, is situate within a few minutes' walk of Shoreham-by-Sea railway station, five miles of Brighton, and four miles of Worthing, and for many years has been widely known as pleasure and tea-gardens, and originally included a dancing pavilion, theatre, observatory, tea-rooms, Swiss cottage, glasshouses, and conservatories, some of which still remain.

The sale will include the fully-licensed freehold premises, known as the Cottage Inn, annexed to the gardens, with entrance from the Old Shoreham-road. Particulars and conditions of sale may be obtained of Messrs. Fitzhugh, Woolley, Baines, and Woolley, solicitors, 3, Pavilion-parade, Brighton, and of the auctioneers.

To the long list of Bristol amusement resorts is about to be added another in the shape of a hippodrome, or music hall, in the heart of Bedminster. This, it is true, is not an absolutely new proposal. A year ago plans were approved for a music hall to accommodate 1,700 persons, but the scheme remained in abeyance, and it has now assumed larger proportions, and the plans introduced by Mr. Bertie Crewe, on behalf of the Strand Syndicate, Ltd., were submitted on the 14th inst. to the Sanitary Committee and passed, the City Engineer informing the meeting that they were very well thought out.

The new place of amusement is to occupy the same site as that suggested a year ago. It will have a frontage of 74ft. to East-street, and in all will seat 2,156 persons. Seven hundred will find room in the gallery, a similar number in the pit, and the rest are accounted for by the accommodation of the circle, the stalls, and the private boxes. It may be pointed out that Bedminster is now far and away the most populous parish in Bristol.

On Wednesday all the woodwork and fittings of the F. C. Bostock Jungle and Arena, at Glasgow, were sold by auction, and next day the workmen were busily engaged in transforming the place into an enlarged and extended Scottish Zoo, which Councillor E. H. Bostock will re-open at the earliest possible moment.

The Tower, New Brighton, reopens on Saturday, May 14, and the season will continue to Oct. 1. A few excellent shops in the elevator hall and theatre corridor are to be let; also ground spaces and buildings for stalls and side shows, on share or rental. Mr. R. H. Davey, general-manager and secretary, will give all information.

Mr. A. H. Reid, residential manager of the New Empire, Aberdare, was joined in matrimony at St. John's Parish Church in that town on Sunday last to Miss Violet Lemmy, sister of Mr. Naylor, of Messrs. Watson and Naylor. The best man was Mr. Bert Richards, assistant-manager of Aberdare New Theatre. The bride was given away by Mr. George Upton, of the Cambrian Hotel.

During Mr. Alan D. Dunbar's régime, Sheffield's palatial and luxurious Empire Theatre has often been graced by representative audiences gathered together in the sacred names of Mercy and Charity. On Saturday last, the 16th inst., the latest of these special matinées took place, the entire proceeds of which will be devoted to the Queen Victoria Jubilee Nursing Institute.

The brilliant audience included the Earl and Countess Fitzwilliam (the Lord and Lady Mayoress) and children, the Master and Mistress Cutler, the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, and the Duchess of Portland, and the leading civic and county notabilities of the district were present or represented.

A good programme was gone through, the professional artists including Mlle. Liane D'Eve, who was enthusiastically recalled after singing two songs, the applause culminating when Mr. Alan Dunbar's pretty little daughter presented the fair Parisian artist with a bouquet. Mr. Jack Pleasants, Mr. Nelson Jackson, and the Kellinos were also heartily applauded, the aristocratic occupants of the stage boxes being convulsed with laughter at the quaint humour of Mr. Jack Pleasants. A fine selection by the orchestra, conducted by the talented chef, Mr. H. Renton-Gardner, was a delightful item.

At the Palace Theatre, Baldwin street, Bristol, on Saturday night, at the conclusion of her performance, Happy Fanny Fields, who had been delighting thousands during the week, called Mr. Horace Livermore on to the stage and made a very pretty little speech, asking Mr. Livermore to accept the little present she had for him in the shape of a magnificent gold-mounted walking-stick, and also a gold-mounted umbrella. One he could use for sunshine and the other for rain.

Mr. Livermore, who was taken by surprise, and had an enthusiastic greeting from the audience, said that he hardly knew how to thank Miss Fanny Fields for her kindness. She was a charming lady both on and off the stage, and he could not speak too highly of her. Miss Fields then took hold of Mr. Livermore's arm, and both retired amidst a round of applause, but the audience were not satisfied until they came before the footlights a second time. The immense crowd was delighted with the pleasing incident.

Mr. Julian Graham has been appointed the resident-manager of Mr. B. Pareezer's Hippodrome, Sheerness, where his ability and geniality will undoubtedly gain him many new friends. Mr. Graham starts with plenty of experience in theatrical management. For eight years he was with Mr. Chas. Macdona's various musical comedies, and for two years on his own with The Gay Goddess. He was also with Messrs. Jay and Mann's An Englishman's Home, and other first-class productions. His two previous engagements as resident-manager were with Mr. Edward Marris at Grantham, and with Mr. W. W. Kelly at the Theatre Royal, Birkenhead.

At the London Hippodrome are to be seen the smartest of West-End audiences, for Mme. Réjane apparently possesses a great fascination for the occupants of the stalls and boxes, as well as for the cheaper parts of that handsome house. Among the many fashionable and distinguished people to be seen there during the week may be mentioned Lord and Lady Helmsley, the Countess of Bective, Lady St. Helier, Mrs. Hwfa Williams, Sir Weetman and Lady Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Higgins, Lord and Lady Willoughby de Broke, Mrs. Patrick de Bathe, Lord Stafford, Lord Tweedmouth, Baron and Baroness de Mayer, Mr. Gordon Lennox, Lady Crossley, Captain Littledale, the Hon Mrs. Harry Lawson, Lord Caledon, Mr. and Mrs. John Gilliat, Sir George Lawrence, the Hon. Arthur Brodrick, Lady Gerard, Lady Carew, Sir Squire Bancroft, Lord and Lady Henry Bentinck, Mrs. Francis Lowther, Miss Toupie Lowther, Mr. George Alexander, the Hon. Alex. Hood, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Maude, and many members of the French, the Russian, and the Austrian Embassies.

Miss Daisy Jerome leaves this morning for Southampton en route to the Cape, sailing by the s.s. Norman. She is under contract with Mr. Sydney Hyman.

Miss Lottie Lennox made a very rapid recovery from her accident, reported in these columns last week, and on Monday was quite in her old form at the Tivoli, Barrow-in-Furness.

Miss Madge Temple joins the London Pavilion bill next week, where she makes her first appearance. Miss Temple's songs are mostly from the pen of her husband, Mr. Hermann E. Darewski, jun., whose many great successes are whistled and sung by everybody.

Horace Gibb and Nita Mayeu have purchased the business of the Artichoke, Newington Causeway, where they settle down on Monday next, and intend to make it their study to deserve the patronage of professional friends, whom they will especially endeavour to please. They will cater for a select luncheon trade.

Mr. Harry Lauder was struck down with influenza on Tuesday, and has been confined to his bed ever since. His place on the Tivoli programme has been filled by Miss Clarice Mayne and Mr. James W. Tate, a very lucky choice, if we may judge by the great receptions accorded each evening to this most popular turn.

Miss Beatrice Allen, who came to the Palace for a short engagement six weeks ago, is still a member of the fine company at that house, and has recently been rebooked for a month. This fact must be most gratifying to her friends, and as she has the privilege of being in her seventeenth year, her success would seem to be assured.

Mr. Charles S. Kitts and Miss Rhoda Windrum have just returned per R.M.S. Norman from a most successful tour in South Africa. After their opening night at the Empire, Johannesburg, with their Cuckoo sketch, they became fast favourites with the Colonials, and were personally complimented by Mr. Edgar Hyman.

At Wednesday's meeting of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund it was decided to arrange for the Music Hall Sports to be held at Stamford Bridge Grounds one day during the last fortnight of July. The opportunity was taken of presenting Mr. Albert Le Fre with an illuminated address in recognition of his valuable services in connection with last year's Sports.

A very cordial reception has been given to Miss Dolly Elsworthy at the Canterbury during the week, in the finely staged sketch, Right's Right. It is interesting to observe that Miss Dolly Elsworthy is a niece of that old Lyceum favourite, Miss Agnes Elsworthy. As a child actress Dolly was highly complimented upon her abilities by the late Sir Henry Irving. Her sketches, The Orange Girl and Nan, have gained considerable popularity with Miss Elsworthy in the title-rôles. In the recent pantomime, Babes in the Wood, at the King's Theatre, Edinburgh, Miss Dolly Elsworthy took the principal boy part, Robin Hood, and was responsible for much of the success.

Miss Rachel Lowe, who has not been seen for some time in the centre of London, made a welcome reappearance at the Euston on Monday. Miss Lowe proved her right to the title of "the singer of novelty songs" by presenting two very original numbers—the first a quaint conceit, entitled "I'd trust my husband anywhere, but I like to hang around," depicting the humorous side of the suburban jealous wife. The music of the song is by James Brockman, and the lyrics by C. H. Bovill, the writer of the present Empire revue, Hullo, London! The second song is a weird song-story, entitled "My Boy Bill," the music of which was written by Mr. John W. Bratton, the composer of "Cosy Corner Girl," "Teddy Bears' Picnic," and numerous other songs and instrumental numbers highly popular on both sides of the Atlantic. The warmth of Miss Lowe's reception at Euston proves that the bright exponent of "Any rags" and "The lucky duck" has not been forgotten, and her many admirers hope to see her nearer the Strand within a short time.

While playing for Mr. George Robey's Stage team against the Press at Brentford on Wednesday, Mr. J. A. Molloy fell in the early part of the game and sustained a nasty dislocation of the ankle. He was conveyed from the field, after medical treatment, to his home, and a substitute was allowed to take his place. The Stage won the game by 6 goals to 1.

The annual smoker—the second of its kind—organised by the Music Hall and Theatrical Football League at the Horseshoe Hotel on Sunday, was animated by sportiveness and jollity. Mr. Phil Ray presided over the assembled sockers and their friends until the arrival of Harry Tate, who was received with musical honours, Phil conducting with a beatific smile and a hammer.

The Harry Tate cup, won this year by the Tivoli team, was confided by that popular artist to the care of Mr. W. A. Belfry, the captain of the Tivolians, and spoke of the pleasure he derived in meeting so many good sportsmen, and congratulating the team on their dogged perseverance. Mr. Joe Wilson, the manager of the Tivoli, then presented medals—given by himself—to each member of the winning team, and in doing so referred to the excellent work of Mr. L. Groth as secretary. Without Mr. Groth's perseverance and tact, he asserted, there would have been no league.

Mr. Phil Ray, who had an amusing colloquy with "Tivoli Ted," a very popular member of the staff of that hall, was responsible for the medals given to the runners-up, the Empire, Edmonton. A third set of medals, the gift of Mrs. Rush, was presented to the Gaiety team, the runners-up in the West End Football League competition also won by the Tivoli. Mr. Wilkie Bard, who was prevailed upon to make a few remarks, promised a handsome silver cup for next season, an announcement that was received with much cheering.

Mr. J. L. Shine, in his recent passage across the Atlantic, gave a mid-Atlantic performance of his well-known sketch, Hogmanay, with complete success. The landing of the lower promenade deck was utilised as a stage, and the audience, consisting of eighty cabin passengers, sat on the wide companion-way steps between the upper and lower promenade decks. In the fact may be detected (says the Daily Telegraph) another proof of the alleged favouritism displayed towards the variety as against the regular stage. Even the winds and the waves combine to promote the interests of the former.

The news of the death of Mr. Alf. Ellerton, jr., which occurred on Sunday last of failure of the heart, came as a shock to the many who knew and respected the bright young man, who, though but twenty years of age, was known throughout the profession as a composer and arranger of ability, and one of whom great things were expected. He had but recently been appointed musical director of the Palace, Greenwich, and the gentlemen of the orchestra sent a lovely wreath, as did the band of another establishment. The flowers were many, and included wreaths from Miss Queenie Leighton, Mr and Mrs. T. E. Dunville, Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Mayne, Mr. Sam Aarons, the Leonards, and many others. He was buried at Tooting.

Mr. Fred Barnes is at the Empire, Portsmouth, this week. He has produced a new song from his own pen, entitled "Don't be an M. U. G.," which will shortly be published.

That great London favourite, Miss Gertie Gitana, has been deputising for Harry Lauder at the Empress, Brixton, since Wednesday, in addition to playing the Oxford, Shoreditch Empire and Clapham.

Among those present at the Palace on Monday night were Prince Francis of Teck, Lord Farquhar, Lord Boston, Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, Sir William Carrington, and the Hon. Mr. G. Keppel.

Mendel, the well-known blind pianist and composer, accompanied by his mother, sailed yesterday by the steamship Malwa for Australia for a six months' tour with Harry Rickards, and returns to the London Hippodrome in October.

Miss Daisy James, at the Hippodrome, Southend, last week, sang two exceptionally good songs, "Nice night to take a walk" and "Who's coming my way home?" She was recalled many times nightly, and the whole town is singing and whistling both numbers.

Miss Jessie Templeton was obliged to give up her engagement at the Hippodrome, Liverpool, last week owing to an attack of laryngitis, but was fortunately well enough on Monday to open at the Palace, Blackpool, where she is well known as the popular principal boy in last season's ballet.

Mr. William Robert Dunkley was initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers' Order on Sunday last. The ceremony was performed by Terrier Harry Gribben, W.T., assisted by Terrier H. Cee Mee, V.T. Terrier W. L. Murray officiated as organist.

Mr. Edward Payne (of Johnson and Devere) is a candidate for membership of the Association, and has successfully passed the ballot.

The "Welcome Home" banquet to Terrier Griff, the president of the Association, will be held upon Sunday, May 29, at the Hôtel Boulogne, Gerrard-street, W., at 6.30 p.m. Full particulars will be forwarded to all Terriers.

The river outing will take place upon Sunday, June 26. Terrier W. R. Dunkley has given a donation of £2 2s. to the River Outing Sports Prize Fund. The secretary will be pleased to receive further donations to this fund.

Terrier Griff offers a gold medal for the best suggestion on how to increase the attendance at the Sunday meetings. Terriers are requested to forward their suggestions to the secretary as soon as possible. Letters to be marked "Competition."

The next ladies' concert will be held at the Three Stags Hotel, Kennington, upon Sunday, May 1, at 8.30 p.m. Terrier Bert Marsden has been appointed musical-director.

Mr. Daley Cooper and Miss Mabel Lait, who are enjoying enthusiastic receptions at the Grand Theatre, Birmingham, this week, sail for Australia in November to fulfil important engagements with Mr. Harry Rickards. Miss Lait has been asked to play principal boy at Drury Lane this winter, but the Australian dates were booked before this offer was received.

Mr. Lewin-Mannering, who is at present touring with The Mummy and the Humming Bird, in which he has been specially engaged to play the very important part of Signor D'Orelli, is producing, under his own personal direction, a powerful dramatic sketch on Monday at the Peckham Hippodrome, entitled The Snake's Kiss, by Mr. Roland Bottomley. Mr. Mannering has engaged a very powerful cast for it.

Much is often made by the younger school of critics of the occasional singing by comedians of sentimental ballads, but it must not be forgotten that George Leybourne at his benefits in the eighties was wont to sing "The anchor's weighed," which invariably brought down the house; and we have heard Jack Rowley give a rendering of "The village blacksmith" that would have been quite acceptable to a Queen's Hall audience.

"Hullo, London!" the up-to-date and topical revue, which is attracting great audiences to the Empire Theatre, is in process of complete revision, the author, Mr. George Grossmith, jun., just returned after his pleasant experiences in Paris, and Mr. Fred Farren, the producer, being hard at work arranging new and effective material for Mr. J. F. McArdle, Miss Millie Legarde, and the remainder of the fine cast.

Mr. Blyth Pratt produced on Monday evening at the Oxford, "a wonderful, novel, sensational act," presented by Mr. Archie Goodall, the international football-player. The entertainment consists of walking round the interior of a gigantic hoop, the feat combining science, wonderful skill, immense strength, a nerve like iron, and great pluck. These are all found in Mr. Goodall, who has been applauded to the echo by packed houses.

Mr. T. Reed Pinaud has brought his unique experience of the stage in all its details, and particularly his genius for scenic effect, to bear upon the elaboration of what he describes as "an original operatic burlesque." This will employ several comedians of distinction and a large chorus. Negotiations are practically completed for its production at a first-class West-End variety theatre.

Mr. Benj. Woodger, secretary of the Music Hall Home, desires to thank, on behalf of the committee, the following:—Arthur H. Burdett (Hippodrome, Boscombe), £2 1s. 8d.; P. C. Rowe (Empire, Swansea), £1 17s.; R. W. Duce (Granville, Walham Green), £1; Harry Slingsby (Empire, Hull), 16s. 6d.; Lewis De Burgh (Hippodrome, Southend), 15s. 3d.; and Alex Galley (Empire, Leeds), Chas. M. Jones (Tivoli, Dublin), E. McCormick (Empire, Greenock) for their kind help to the fund.

The secretary would be pleased to receive any men's old clothes or boots for the inmates of the Home. There are still a number of Era Cards to be returned yet, and as April 30 is the end of the financial year, kindly send them along, and help to build up the Home Fund.

Mlle. Pavlova, the accomplished Russian dancer, cherishes among her many triumphs her performance of Giselle, the title-rôle in the famous ballet of that name, produced at Her Majesty's, Haymarket, in March, 1842, with Carlotta Grisi, her husband M. Perrot, and Louise Fleury in the principal parts. The plot of the ballet was adapted by Théophile Gautier from Heinrich Heine, and the music was by Adolphe Adam. The ballet might might be revived with advantage in Leicester-square.

In the crowded audiences at the London Hippodrome during the week have been the Marquis of Anglesey, Lord Ribblesdale, the Hon. Diana Lister, the Earl of Lytton, Mr. and Lady Rosemary Portal, Lady Augusta Fane, Lady Cheylesmore, the Countess of Rosslyn, Lord Lawrence, Sir Richard and Lady Levinge, Lady Mary Pepys, Lord Waleran, Lady Lettice Cholmondeley, Colonel Forestier-Walker, Countess Cowley, the Marchioness of Blandford, Lady Norah Spencer-Churchill, Mrs. Dick Cunyngham, Mme. Janotha, Mr. Stuart Ogilvy, Mr. Jerome K. Jerome, and the Consul-General for the Argentine.

Miss Hetty King has created a record at the Regent Theatre, Salford, this week. Special police have been requisitioned to keep the crowds back.

Miss Joan Derby, the popular boy-impersonator, will appear with Charles Collette all next week in H. C. Sargent's successful farce duologue, Pyjamas, at the King's Theatre, Southsea.

Mr. Wullie H. Frame appears this evening in the capital of the North, Inverness, the land of the "Frasers," where "The Man you Know" is a welcome Hielan' Man. Hooch, aye!

"The Great Raymond is breaking all records here this week. Largest number of paid admissions in the history of the house. Hundreds turned away nightly.—Robinson, Hippodrome, Huddersfield."

Madame Adah Payne, the well-known Australian soprano, late of Moody-Manners principal opera company, will complete her second Barrasford tour at the Brighton Hippodrome next week. Madame Payne contemplates visiting America shortly.

Mr. Cyril Twyford, whose sketch Kiddie was recently done by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ainley at the Hippodrome, has just completed a new one-act play entitled The Solicitor of the Crown. It is to be tried in the provinces, with the author and Miss Margaret Yarde in the principal parts, preparatory to being brought to London.

To the comedian in search of ideas and monologues, we may recommend a visit to Samuel French (Ltd.), of Southampton-street, Strand, W.C., who are issuing a series of monologues at the price of 6d. "The Cosmopolitan Elocutionist" is the latest to demand notice, and its variations of "The Charge of the Light Brigade," in various dialects, are as amusing as they are ingenious.

Mr. Walter Stockwell, proprietor of Thompson's Hotel, Bridge-street, Bristol, wishes again to thank the ladies and gentlemen who answered his appeal re Harry Jennings in our last issue, and would remind his brother and sister artists that he is giving Jennings a benefit on Monday next, the 25th, to enable him to go into a little business, as he is now an invalid. Walter will be pleased to receive any small donations, which will be duly acknowledged in these columns.

He has received the following sums: V.A.B.F., 20s.; Walter Stockwell, 5s.; G. H. Elliott, 5s.; J. E. Daveridge, 5s.; F. W., 2s.; T. W., 2s.; L. Barrett, 2s.; W. B. Webb, 2s.; Gus Elen, 1s.; E. W., 1s.; Sal Grogan, 1s.; J. Manning, 1s.; W., 1s.; Mr. Webley, 1s.; C. N. Harding, 1s.; A. J. T., 1s.; C. J. Mason, 1s.; W. E. Southcott, 1s.

Mr. Fred S. Jennings' new sketch, The Spirit of Music, which first saw light a fortnight ago at Willesden, starts next week on tour at the Kilburn Empire. It is a romantic sketch with a military setting, introducing Carl Junor, an exceedingly clever pianist. At Willesden it has met with an excellent reception nightly, and a large number of managers paid visits specially to see it. We understand that booking arrangements are in the clever hands of Fred Reeves and Son.

Mr. Arthur Helmore, the actor-entertainer, who will be at the London Hippodrome on Monday, is, like Mr. Charles Hawtrey, the son of a clergyman, and has always made fun in a very refined way of the elocutionary weaknesses of the "cloth." Those who had the good fortune to see his Rev. Robert Spalding in the first production of The Private Secretary will remember that his rendering of that character had many points of difference from both Sir Herbert Tree's and Mr. W. S. Penley's creations of the part. Of its immense quaintness, however, there was never the slightest doubt.

Of Mr. Helmore the Lord Bishop of Queensland once wrote:—"Mr. Helmore has the same capacity so fully possessed by the late Charles Dickens of seeing clearly tricks of voice and manner and reproducing them with almost photographic exactness. He has the good fortune to be humorous without being sarcastic; to provoke those who hear him to laugh with him rather than at those who are the models of his oratorical efforts. Many years ago Mr. Helmore cured me of one or two budding tricks of manner by showing me to myself as others saw me. For this I shall ever be grateful, and so should the good people who are fated to listen to me."

Mr. Oswald Stoll is to be congratulated on his recognition of home talent. He has engaged that clever young English dancer, Lola Lee, to appear at the London Hippodrome next Monday. Miss Lee will give imitations of a variety of famous dances. Her most notable item will be a Kate Vaughan waltz, given in the true Kate Vaughan manner. Miss Lee's professor is Mr. John D'Auban, who also taught Miss Kate Vaughan, though she had her earliest lessons in the art from Mrs. Conquest.

Owing to the enormous success of Mlle. Pavlova, Michael Mordkin, and company, who, by their natural gifts, trained in the best school in the world, can legitimately claim the title of classical dancers, Mr. Alfred Butt has arranged, in response to numerous inquiries, to give a special matinée at the Palace Theatre on Wednesday next at 3 p.m. On this occasion Mlle. Anna Pavlova and M. Michael Mordkin and company will present, in addition to the dances now being given by them, several other excerpts from popular ballets which it is impossible to include in the evening programme. Mr. Gwylym Wigley, the Welsh tenor of whom so much has been heard of recently in musical circles, will give selections from his répertoire.

Miss Melinda May (secretary), on behalf of the Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., begs most gratefully to thank the following:—Miss Irma Lorraine (donation), £1; Mr. Joe Elvin (generous-hearted Joe), contributed 2s. 6d. towards a collection of 8s. 3d. made by Mrs. Chas. Coborn; Miss Jessie Star (collection), 10s.; Miss Cissy Stebbing (Manchester), collecting, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Bob Welding (Glasgow), donation, 1s.; Miss Lottie Albert, lady's new clothing; Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Chirgwin, useful parcel of clothing.

Will friends in or out of the profession please note that a prize will be given to anyone collecting the most money for this deserving charity in twelve months, commencing from Nov. 4 last? Will anyone make an offer for the handsome model toy butcher's shop, fitted with joints, all made by Mr. Harry Vento, and given to us by Mrs. Harry Vento (Clacton-on-Sea)? Can be seen any day at the Guild rooms. Friends of the charity are heartily welcome to tea and reception held every Wednesday, four to five o'clock. Funds, boots, and clothing are urgently needed.

The 655th meeting of the executive committee of the M.H.A.B.A. was held at the offices on Wednesday afternoon, with Mr. Harry Blake in the chair. Others present included Messrs. Jeff Vendome, Tom J. Morton, T. C. Callaghan, J. Miller Northern, J. H. Milburn, Albert Le Fre, Chas. Coborn, Billy Brown, and Lieut. Albini. After the usual routine business, Mr. Callaghan reported on his visit to Glasgow in search of new offices, and the matter was discussed. Mr. Coborn then submitted his scheme for dealing with the branch offices, but, after a discussion, the committee decided to continue the present system. Mr. Hockley, of the Poplar Hotel, Ilkeston, was appointed agent.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MISS FLORRIE FORDE has at Balham, the Canterbury, and the Camden been greeted with heartiest applause nightly for her spendid rendering of that choice and tuneful song by Lester Barrett and Hermann E. Darewski, entitled "'Tis a faded picture," and also for "Rip Van Winkle," which is by Will E. Haines, Harry Staunton, and Hermann E. Darewski. Both are published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MR. DAVE CARTER writes enthusiastically of the receptions accorded that fine ballad, "If I had the world to give you," which he has been singing and receiving ovations for. He will sing it for the next twelve months. It is issued by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MR. DANIEL DAY'S firm has acquired a fine and characteristic piece of music, composed by Warwick Williams, and entitled "Dusky drummers patrol." It is certain to be in very great demand.

MISS OUIDA MACDERMOTT, at the London Pavilion, has been charming her audiences with that super-excellent march-song, "Betsy," and with "To welcome my Sadie to me," a ditty which will rank high among the songs of the year. Both are published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

AMONG other numbers in the Press and about to be issued are: "We won't talk of foreign invasion" (sung by Pat Rafferty), by F. W. Carter; "Nobody waiting to greet me" (Ryder Slone), by H. Castling and C. W. Murphy; "I'll be waiting by the milestone, Mary," by J. P. Harrington and John Neat; "Shall be seventeen on Sunday" (Walter Munroe), by F. Murray and C. Collins; "It may be true what you say, Mister Coon" (Miss Ella Retford), by Lester Barrett and Hermann E. Darewski; "Castles of sand," by Sidney Davis and Hermann E. Darewski; "On the silvery sands" (Miss Madge Temple), by A. C. Findon and Hermann E. Darewski; "Little girlie mine," by Penyston Mills; "I was standing on the quay," by Herbert Rule and Jas. McGee; "La-la-la-la, sing this chorus with me," sung by George D'Albert and Herbert Rule, written by Herbert Rule and Thomas McGee; and "You don't want a night-light," by Terry Sullivan and Harry Carlton.

MR. GEORGE LASHWOOD will, on May 9, produce at the London Coliseum his new song, "O blow the scenery on the railway!" which will have an elaborate setting. It is by F. W. Leigh and George Arthurs. Messrs. Francis and Day are the publishers of this noteworthy item.

MISS EDITH ST. CLARE has just purchased from John P. Harrington and Harry Marlow a new chorus song entitled "Along the prom-prom-promenade," of which she has great hopes, and intends producing immediately.

MR. HARRY MARLOW returns to town on Monday, appearing at the Olympia, Shoreditch, in the enormously successful song entitled "Come for a ride on the tramway car," written and composed by himself, and a new comedy number entitled "Don't forget the chorus," written and composed by Worton David and Fred W. Leigh, and published by Francis, Day, and Hunter.

TED SNYDER'S song, "My wife's gone to the country" is going stronger than ever in the revue Hullo! London, at the Empire, Leicester-square, and is earning showers of well-deserved applause for that incomparable comedian, J. F. McArdle. At Liverpool Empire this week Phil Parsons is getting four and five recalls for his rendering of this ear-haunting ditty.

"ROSES and memories" (also by Ted Snyder) is going stronger than ever this week at the Empire, Sunderland. And, after all, how could it fail to score when it is in the hands of that prince of violoncellists Mr. Auguste Van Biene? Mr. Van Biene will play this number at his recital on Sunday at Stanley (Durham).

MR. WILLY ROBERTSON, the celebrated Yorkshire violinist, played "Roses and memories" at a private concert in the West End one evening last week, and owing to the way it was received he had to repeat it entirely. Mr. Robertson's violin is a very fine specimen, the value of it approaching four figures.

"FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS."

Mumby Major ..... MASTER JACK COYLE
Kitty Wake ..... MISS JEAN GILMOUR

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This is an exceptionally bright and well-written sketch, full of cleanly fun and humour, and it is excellently interpreted by the Heriot Trio. The scene opens with the calling of Mumby Major upon Kitty Wake for the purpose of soliciting a signed photograph from her, in order to settle a boyish school bet. After some amusing by-play with Hutchins, in the course of which the boy learns that his father, Major Mumby, is in the habit of frequenting the flat, posing as a single man, consternation is caused by the announcement of the Major's arrival. Hastily concealing Master Mumby behind a screen, Kitty Wake, over the tea table, draws some amusing admissions from the amorous officer, much to his son's delight, who, when discovered at the finish, is "squared" by his father with the gift of a sovereign and sent back to school. In the dual rôle of Hutchins and Major Mumby Mr. Wilton Heriot was quite at his ease, playing the part of the footman with typical urbanity, and that of the Major with a fiery impetuosity quite in keeping with the character. Master Jack Coyle enacted the public schoolboy very naturally, and Miss Jean Gilmour portrayed Kitty Wake in a winning and appropriate way.

In the variety bill were Mr. Syd Walker, in his novel creation, "The Debt Collector"; Mr. Harry Pleon, in his burlesque shilling shocker, "The Bad Girl of the Family Journal"; Ralph and Nelly Howard in a comedy sketch, Military Mad; Michel Bros., agile acrobats; Miss Maud Esmond, the "Charlie Brown Girl"; Mr. Gus Garrick and Mr. Fred Lincoln, with their latest up-to-date ditties, and Mr. Walter Espinosa, with some wonderful dances, assisted by Mons. Stefan Halle, from the Châtelet Theatre, Paris. The band, under the skilful direction of Mr. Frank Thomas, performed admirably, and Mr. Robert W. Duce saw to everyone's comfort in front in his usual courteous way.

MLLE. PAVLOVA models herself on Taglioni—in her opinion the most perfect dancer that ever lived. The young Russian dancer practises two hours a day. Naturally, she likes "legitimate" dancing, and the bizarre forms so much in vogue recently do not appeal to her. A legitimate dancer must always object to "fakes" in the way of "steps."

THE many friends of Little Zola, the popular comedian, who last week appeared with such great success at the Empire, West Hartlepool, will be interested to learn that he intends shortly to introduce on the stage a new monologue scena, the subject of which will be Quilp. His little daughter has recently made her stage début as Willie Carlyle in East Lynne.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

We have this week Mr. Fred Karno's latest production, Wontdetainia, which has made an instantaneous success. The plot is good, the story is told in smart and clever dialogue, and the entire sketch is a worthy successor of the many winners that have gone before. The ocean liner is a marvel of mechanical skill, such as we rarely see equalled, and, with a company of Karno's comedians, no opportunity is lost for getting fun out of the many amusing situations. The sixty ladies and gentlemen appearing in the sketch each do their very utmost to ensure success, notably Mr. Shaun Glenville as Patsy O'Flynn, whose performance kept the audience convulsed with laughter, and Mr. Dean Tribune, whose impersonation of the dude, Percy Dart, was a clever and effective piece of work. Mr. Charles M. East made a burly and imposing Captain Nelsons, and played the part capitally; Mr. Fellows Bassett as the unscrupulous Desmond Marsh was very good indeed; his equally unscrupulous partner in villainy, Maud de Vere, was admirably represented by Miss Elsie Skillings; and Miss Kitty Benyon was a charming Sadie Vanderfelt.

Tate and Tate made a great hit with their bright and clever entertainment, which won golden opinions from all present; Orpheus gave the turn which has made him such a warm favourite with music lovers, and in which he had a very warm reception; the popular favourites, Brown and Le Clerq, had an ovation, and kept up their long and deservedly high reputation. Yamamoto and Koyoshi contribute a clever turn, which was well received; the Lancashire Lasses came in for a fair share of approbation for their well-arranged and Harry Brown, whose rendering of "Nobody" is like nothing else we can remember, and similar distinction attaches to his voluminous "patter," so quaintly delivered as to compel laughter. Miss Daisy Dormer adds to her admirers with her singing and dancing and her captivating appearance. "Clogs and shawl" secures the popular comedienne many recalls, when she gives by desire her entertaining lyric "Don't say good-bye," to which a well-executed dance is added. The illusions presented by Mr. Fred Wilkinson, assisted by Miss Ruby Mayo, begin with the production of a refreshment bar, graced by a comely waitress within a hitherto empty cabinet, and ends with the instantaneous substitution of the gentleman for the lady, who has been locked in a strong box. The tricks are smartly accomplished and win general approbation. Other items of a strong programme are Lyster and Cooke, who perform on a variety of curious instruments; Cora Corina, in character dances; and Cissie Thompson, comedienne, with the latest pictures on Ruffell's Bioscope. Mr. William Payne continues to administer affairs at the hall with ability and courtesy, and in Mr. William Lynch finds a trustworthy assistant.

KILBURN EMPIRE.

At the head of the programme for the current week is Mr. George Mozart, who is back again after only a short absence, but is nevertheless very welcome, as his performance is always diverting and well varied. On this occasion he introduces his skit of the drama as seen at a cinematograph show, and very comic it is, causing endless laughter. Mr. Mozart also gives his famous skit on musical conductors, which remains as laughable as of old. His assistant, Corporal Slippery, continues to lend him aid with the big drum. The Hyde and Cody Trio present a comic and clever acrobatic act, performing many neat tricks maker second to none. Mr. Albert Bruno appears as Perkins, and whether he be wooing the electors or demanding the vote for the women in the House itself he is equally amusing, and the whole show is one long laugh.

THE EUSTON.

Mr. Fred McAvoy produced at this house on Monday for one night only a new dramatic sketch by Lewis T. Dalrymple entitled

"THE WILL OF ALLAH."

Jack Marsden ..... MR. CLAUDE AGNEW
Billy Dickson ..... MR. R. FOSTER
Arthur Goode ..... MR. O. MANN
Benin ..... MR. ARTHUR ESTCOURT
Hassan ..... MR. R. ASHTON
Zaidee ..... MISS CYRETA ZALMARNI

The author is said to have invented the dance round which this "romance of the Sahara" is written. As far as we could gather from the opening speeches of the English characters, which were mostly given in conversational undertones, Zaidee, an Arabian girl, has promised to dance in front of the camera of Jack Marsden, a cinematograph operator, anxious to procure interesting films; and the promise is made notwithstanding the Arab superstition that the camera is the evil eye, and anyone on whom it is focused will surely die. After some parleying with an Arab guide, Benin, Zaidee arrives, with her lover, Hassan, a young gentleman with a sinister aspect, a darksome purpose, and a dagger. The girl dances in Oriental fashion, with occasional deviations into the quicker movements suggestive of the ballets of Europe. Towards the finish of her solo Zaidee is joined by Hassan, and scarcely has she concluded her exertions than he attacks her, stabbing her in the back. He then advances in a threatening attitude towards the operator, who promptly settles him with a six-shooter. Curtain! Miss hurricane of applause, which, needless to say, is repeated after each of his songs. He is giving "My heart is in the Highlands" and "Every laddie loves a lassie." The demands for an encore after the last are so great that in response he sings one verse of "Rocked in the cradle of the deep" without orchestral accompaniment.

Some clever sleight-of-hand is shown by Austin Temple, who has a charming assistant in Miss Irene Vincent. He performs a number of tricks most skilfully, and so easily are they done that audiences are completely mystified. A great local favourite, Percy Dalton, scores with a couple of numbers, entitled "I can't think of anything but girls" and "Let's go out with the boys," and brings his turn to a conclusion with a droll exhibition of the terpsichorean art. Miss Ethel Pierce is the possessor of a tuneful voice, and a clever acrobatic display is given by the Seven Wulfranas, who introduce, with effect, a considerable element of comedy.

An amusing little sketch, entitled Susan, is being presented by Miss Noble and Mr. Fixott. Although the plot is certainly not original, it is very cleverly and brightly acted, and audiences are not slow to show their appreciation in the usual way. Alix Lukos, in a series of impersonations of celebrities, is seen to special advantage as the late William Gladstone, and as the late Sir Redvers Buller bidding farewell to his troops on his recall to England. A couple of coon ditties are sung by Pop Dearly, viz., "Since I can't love you" and "She's a lump of love," the latter number especially appealing to the house, the music being rather catchy.

John Lawson and company are again scoring here in The Monkey's Paw, another strong feature of the programme. All the parts are capably filled, and from the rising of the curtain till its fall the piece is followed with breathless interest. Harry Claff, who derives much assistance from Miss Alice Tremaine, a dainty comedienne, seems to be fairly bubbling over with humour, and the Renowned Lannons easily demonstrate their right to be called champion pedestal dancers. Other items towards a most pleasant evening are Victoria Monks, Queenie Essex, Gilbert Girard, and the Melroses, and last, but not least, the Edwards pictures in a most interesting series of films.

THE METROPOLITAN.

The popularity of the sketch at the Metropolitan is proverbial, and in Mr. William Bailey's excellent programme this week there are no fewer than three. The Maid of Polaria is labelled a romantic musical idyll, and though the habitat of this charming demoiselle is a terra incognita to the Cook's tourist, it has no little resemblance to Venice. The Duke of Dainsbury has lost his heart to a Princess, and his passion is returned; but the course of true love is arrested for a time just for the sake of comedy, and to enable Mr. Walter Hast to sing pretty melody and to join in a duet with Miss Peggy Lennie, who disguises herself daintily as a gondolier, and acts with gaiety and piquancy. There should be a very prosperous future for this extremely pretty sketch, with its atmosphere of romance and its unfailing flow of melody.

Miss Ethel Arden and Mr. George Abel have found a capital successor to Three of a Kind in the serio-comic sketch Town Hall To-night, which we noticed fully on its original London production at the Euston. Mr. Abel now plays the manager of the theatre, who is property-master, orchestra, stage-manager—everything but scene-painter. The view of London by the local whitewasher, who has never been there, is a fine specimen of comic scenery, and the glimpses of life behind the scenes in fit-up theatres are cleverly dovetailed into a story that sounds a deep note of pathos at the conclusion. Fortunately Miss Arden, who appears as the star actress, "who has been with Frohman," is equally at home in humour and sentiment, and Mr. Abel has never done anything better than his Hip Flitters.

The programme winds up with The Flood Tide, a military and dramatic episode, taken from the Drury Lane drama of the same name, and played by Mr. Harry P. Selwyn's company. It was originally produced at the Surrey in January last. The story incidentally touches on the ragging question and the status of "rankers" with their brother officers. Captain Jack Champion, who has risen from the ranks, has a fierce and unscrupulous rival for the hand of Mabel, the heroine, in the aristocratic Lord Sutton, his superior officer, who, however, has not the slightest chance. The characters are effectively handled by Messrs. F. Derek-Powell, Fraser-Brunner, Charles Freeman, Norman H. Lee, Roy Jackson, and Miss Queenie Fraser-Brunner.

Miss Madge Temple, looking very smart indeed in a chic coat and skirt, has the house with her all the time she is singing "I'm looking for Mr. Wright," which has all the swing and the melodious rhythm of a genuinely popular number. Madge is quite a persona grata. Another lady whose verve, prettiness, and grace make the most favourable impression is Miss Gipsy Woolf, whose vocal and dancing scena, The Mermaids of Margate, is a happy combination of brightness, mirth, and melody. Mr. Dusty Rhodes, in his own irresponsible way, is always on the track of fun, and as a sentimental singer he is really not so "dusty," if we may be allowed to say so.

There's homage to "oor Rabbie" in the entertainment presented by Mr. John Donald, who rouses the house to enthusiasm by his heartful rendering of such gems of Scotch melody as "Bonnie Mary of Argyle," "The Macgregors' Gathering," and "Auld Lang Syne." Miss Daisy Mayer presents some clever character studies. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope projects interesting films, and Dan Conroy also entertains.

CAMBERWELL EMPIRE.

The remarkable ability which the management of this theatre possesses of picking out talent from obscurity has stood this theatre in good stead this week, for most of the seats are filled as soon as the doors are opened. No great star is on the bill, yet each lady or gentleman engaged is an artist to his or her finger-tips, and the programme is bright and entertaining from start to finish.

Albert Le Fre, styled a comedian, but really a very clever conjurer and juggler as well, has a great reception. He explains in song and action how things are done on the stage, fully deserving the roars of applause given him at the conclusion of his performance. Then, too, we have Lenton and Lane in a musical duologue, entitled Unconsidered Trifles, which is screamingly funny and very cleverly produced.

A touch of pathos is supplied by the sketch The Spy, written by Percy Ford, the genial manager of this comfortable hall, and depicted by actors of no mean ability. A novel turn is given by Pependra Bose, an Indian who imitates the animals of his native land as well as some of the more familiar animals of Old England. A humorous ten minutes is given us by Robert S. Williams, who styles himself the swell tramp, and who works his way into the hearts of all music lovers through the medium of a one-string violin. The Two Walonells on the trapeze are wonderful acrobats, and their daring tricks are most marvellous to witness. Charles Conway is always appreciated, but in Camberwell he seems, if possible, to be a greater favourite than elsewhere, and his character-sketches from Charles Dickens earn for him round upon round of handclaps.

An original act is introduced by Zimpa, entitled "A Holiday at a Farmhouse," in which he gives a description in mimicry of a concert and a stroll through a farmyard, and deserves the great applause he receives. Others who deserve mention are the Gascoignes, in their clever juggling act; Kit Keen, the coloured comedian; and Madeline cleverly-executed business; Mona Vivian was cordially received, as was Nelson Jackson; the remaining item in an excellent programme being some interesting pictures by the American Bioscope. Mr. Forbes Russell ably conducted the capital band; Mr. Walter Smith looks well after matters behind the curtain; while the comfort of patrons and the business management are in the capable hands of Mr. Fred Epitaux and his able lieutenant, Mr. H. Percy Parry.

THE SOUTH LONDON.

His Satanic Majesty figures among excellent company at the South London this week in a thrilling dramatic sketch, called Man and the Devil, wherein an artist is persuaded to barter his soul for wealth and fame, but after committing innumerable crimes at the instance of the Evil One, awakes to find that he has been dreaming. A glimpse of Hades is afforded in a tableau, and no opportunity is lost of indicating the sulphurous character usually associated with the doings of the arch-fiend. That rôle is undertaken with a mixture of grim humour and ferocity by Mr. W. J. Mackay, whose make-up is awe-inspiring. Good support is rendered by the members of Mr. Terence B. Macmanus's company.

South London favourites receive a hearty welcome, and the house revels once again in the drolleries of Mr. Dan Crawley, whose blithe steps between the verses of his song "We've all been doing a bit" are irresistible. His old woman impersonation, too, has lost nothing of its usual effect. Dale and O'Malley have embellished their "conversation" with fresh interpolations which cause many a hearty laugh, and the imperturbable air of dignity of the one "indifferent comedian" still remains undisturbed by the facetiousness of the other, to the great delight of the audience.

A unique specimen of the coloured comedian is with marvellous agility. Ina Lorrimer, a clever lady, is rapidly coming to the front by reason of her comedy powers. At Kilburn she gives her new Scotch song, which goes very well, and the dance with which she winds up earns for her a big round of applause.

Liane D'Eve, the famous French chanteuse, is presenting her novel turn and scoring heavily with it. The charming lady sings delightfully and gives a varied répertoire. Her dresses are very artistic, and her manner of changing them is certainly a new departure. Will McIvor has a fine tenor voice, which he uses to the best advantage, and his song introducing popular English, Irish, and Welsh airs was greatly appreciated. Jack and Evelyn are always amusing, and their present diverting interlude, The Tobacconists, is very laughable. Jack O'Connor keeps the fun going with his very up-to-date topical allusions; he is, indeed, a ready-witted comedian, who never misses anything that is moving in the everyday world. George French, the droll comedian, is causing merriment with his roller-skating song and also with his vivid account of his exploits at football.

A very acceptable turn is that given by the Garricks, two ladies and two gentlemen, who sing several taking songs, one of which is topical and very up-to-date. Their concerted numbers are artistically rendered, and the violin obbligato to a song by one of the ladies is most appropriate and well played. A bright number is that of the Three Aza Boys, who dance in most accomplished fashion, the three of them keeping step and time with wonderful precision.

Fred Karno's company is also highly successful with the doings of the famous Perkins—his latest exploit, Perkins, M.P., to wit. It is well up to all the other productions, and as a laughter-maker second to none. Mr. Albert Bruno appears as Perkins, and whether he be wooing the electors or demanding the vote for the women in the House itself he is equally amusing, and the whole show is one long laugh.

THE EUSTON.

Mr. Fred McAvoy produced at this house on Monday for one night only a new dramatic sketch by Lewis T. Dalrymple entitled

"THE WILL OF ALLAH."

Jack Marsden ..... MR. CLAUDE AGNEW
Billy Dickson ..... MR. R. FOSTER
Benin ..... MR. ARTHUR ESTCOURT
Hassan ..... MR. R. ASHTON
Zaidee ..... MISS CYRETA ZALMARNI

The author is said to have invented the dance round which this "romance of the Sahara" is written. As far as we could gather from the opening speeches of the English characters, which were mostly given in conversational undertones, Zaidee, an Arabian girl, has promised to dance in front of the camera of Jack Marsden, a cinematograph operator, anxious to procure interesting films; and the promise is made notwithstanding the Arab superstition that the camera is the evil eye, and anyone on whom it is focused will surely die. After some parleying with an Arab guide, Benin, Zaidee arrives, with her lover, Hassan, a young gentleman with a sinister aspect, a darksome purpose, and a dagger. The girl dances in Oriental fashion, with occasional deviations into the quicker movements suggestive of the ballets of Europe. Towards the finish of her solo Zaidee is joined by Hassan, and scarcely has she concluded her exertions than he attacks her, stabbing her in the back. He then advances in a threatening attitude towards the operator, who promptly settles him with a six-shooter. Curtain! Miss

CROUCH END HIPPODROME.

There is a good all-round bill at Mr. Lucas's pretty little theatre in this northern suburb this week. Last Monday night The Last Moment, by Mr. Wilson Barrett, the novelist, and son of the late Mr. Wilson Barrett, was produced here, with Mr. Derwent Hall Caine, the son of the author, in the principal part. It is curious to note how the sons have reversed the positions occupied by their fathers, as Mr. Hall Caine, sen., wrote a play in which the late Mr. Barrett appeared. Mr. Caine takes the part of a man who has struggled with misfortune for years, and at a time when his little girl is very ill is driven to desperation. He argues that the authorities must care for his little one, and is on the point of shooting himself when a man dashes into the room and confesses that he has inadvertently murdered another man occupying the ground floor rooms. He offers the despairing father £200 in notes to save him from the consequences of his crime. Taking the money, the poor fellow writes out a confession of the murder and places the notes beneath the child's pillow. Then, when he is about to shoot himself, the clerk to the murdered man, accompanied by a police inspector, arrives on the scene, and denounces the intruder as the murderer of his employer. The little girl's evidence as to who of the pair is her father settles the matter, and the real culprit is placed under arrest, and the poor man, left with money to get necessities of life and even luxuries for his sick child, utters a prayer of thankfulness.

Mr. Dan Weldon sings "Some day you'll come back to me" very well indeed; and Nelson's Newsboys combine high-class vocalism with clever comedy business. Their turn is most acceptable. The coloured member is greeted with storms of applause for his really clever sand dance with which their entertainment concludes. Player and Dupree are clever and entertaining comedy artists, and sing, dance, and patter with great success; the skilful dancing of Ernest Clifford is cordially received; and a popular turn is contributed by Ethel Donna, who sings "Au revoir, Mr. Moore." Claff and Tremaine are established favourites here, and the repetition of their pantomimical scena, The Demon and the Fairy, should tend to further enhance their popularity, as the patter is up to date and their vocal contributions rendered in the best style. May Fairclough introduces some excerpts from modern plays with a large measure of success, her Clare Foster from A Woman in the Case and Lady Frederick from the play of that name being exceptionally clever. Cliff Ryland receives an ovation for his irresponsible fund of patter, and for his humorous songs, "Somebody's mother" and "As long as you can." One of the most successful turns in the bill is Miss Rosie Lloyd, who has two melodious songs, "Meet me in rose time" and "Take me for a walk."

EAST HAM PALACE.

Miss Clarice Mayne, in new songs and selections, heads a very attractive bill here this week, and at each performance this dainty comedienne comes in for the warmest applause and hearty appreciation. Her two numbers, "Put on your ta-ta, little girlie," and "Georgie took me walking in the park," find full favour with the audience, whilst her impersonation of Miss Marie Lloyd in one of her coster songs is very clever. The Gothams, billed as "royal entertainers," provide the audience with a "royal" treat, and their sweet-toned harmonising is vociferously applauded and encored. Their other vocal imitations of church bells and banjoes are also very skilfully rendered, and send the audience into raptures of delight. The performance also teems with many eccentric, droll, and amusing items. Morris, Mick, and Maudie introduce a novel act, A Medical Muddle, creating roars of laughter throughout.

The queen of sand dancers, "My Fancy," further enhances her popularity with the Palace patrons by her exquisite dancing, and she can easily lay claim to being the premier step-dancer at present appearing. Two catchy songs, "Come under the table, Mabel," and "What a fuss to make about a man," are the popular numbers of Miss Maud Prenton, a bright and vivacious comedienne, with a swinging style of chorus that quite catches on.

Miss Edie Gray and Coons, in harmony and dance, are warmly received. The song "My Sweet Aroon" is sweetly rendered by Miss Edie Gray, and she also sings in capital style "The Soldiers' Chorus" (Faust). The step-dancing of two white coons is par excellence, and thoroughly enjoyed. Much mirthful business is introduced by Colley and Scott, comedy entertainers; and the boy comedian, Wallace Lupino, is well received with his clever singing and dancing. Viviana and company, in their original dancing act The Toy Shop, are full of rare ability. The imitations of dancing dolls is very unique, and endless amusement is caused by the funny antics and drolleries of the shopman in his attempts to sell some of the dolls to a lady customer. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope continues to be a very popular feature.

THE IMPERIAL, CANNING TOWN.

A magnificent palace for the dockers must be the verdict of the visitor to this artistic and sumptuous home of variety, and we may extend hearty congratulations to Mr. Pearce Lucas, managing-director; Mr. Harry Day, general-manager; and Mr. Harry Goodson, comptroller of the stage department. For this week the premier position is occupied by Mr. Adderley Howard and company in the nautical spectacle Black-eyed Susan. The scene depicting Portsmouth is most realistic, every detail being carefully studied, the court-martial being cleverly reproduced. Mr. Adderley Howard plays William with vigorous emphasis. An exceptionally smart turn is supplied by the Six Buster Browns, a set of bright young fellows who amuse with tuneful solo and glee singing, but their speciality is dancing, at which they are experts.

Mr. Luis Hardt, described as the Sandow Boy, is a fine specimen of humanity, and although but 8st. 7lb., is able to do feats of strength that men twice his weight would have difficulty in accomplishing. Mr. Hardt has a novel little scena, in which he impersonates a dude, and describes how remarkably strong were all his ancestors, while he thinks it so ridiculous that they should have boasted of lifting men fully dressed in armour. Having taken wine rather freely, he soon falls asleep and a quick change displays a gorgeous hall with a staff of footmen, knights in armour, &c, and here the various exhibitions of muscle and strength are displayed. The little act is tastefully arranged, and well thought out, the actor being vociferously applauded.

Harry Zetter, legmania artist, has a good song in "We've all been having a pop at it," and for his second item provokes roars of laughter in original striped fleshings while singing a master number, the dancing in this being worthy of great praise. The Three Gellans, Continental comedy artists, provide much good fun with their clever tumbling act, the many funny properties used causing much merriment. Miss Ida Kathrina, the dolly girl, has a bright little doll scene, the lady emerging from a toy house and singing a pretty little song, after which we are given an exhibition of tricky dancing. Fine effect is caused at the conclusion, when all the dolls dance to the strains of the orchestra. The item is decidedly novel.

Bros. Dean open with a whistling duet, the remaining part of their time on the stage being taken up by displaying their wonderful art in dancing, which is certainly extraordinary. Alec Keith's company of Amateur Actors in a modern ridicule of modern drama, cause a great deal of laughter, their many skits being certainly true. Baby Woolf, described as the phenomenal child artist, is certainly talented, and fully justifies the title given. Miss Bessie Callow has a tuneful chorus number in "Anywhere is all right"; other good turns being Chas. Leighton, tramp pianist, and Fred Costin, quaint comedian. A most capable orchestra is presided over by Mr. A. J. Stephenson. Mr. Frank Clarke is the resident-manager.

ISLINGTON EMPIRE.

The management have provided almost a record programme for the current week, containing no less than a trio of Star artists bracketed at the top of the bill. Harry Randall, whose name is a household word in the neighbourhood, is securing a big reception. His first song, sung in the guise of a "slavey," enables him to introduce a great deal of patter dealing with masters and mistresses, which causes any amount of laughter. His second song, which curiously enough also deals with an exceptional type of man-servant, is scarcely so good. His greeting was of that kind reserved for warm favourites. Ella Shields sings a couple of songs in her own charming style. The second enables her to appear as a military officer, the uniform suiting her admirably, and her reception is most cordial. Will Evans is introducing a song dealing with the complications with regard to his relations. It is very amusing and very much to the taste of the audience. For his second item he is presenting his new burlesque "Chantecler." This proves to be a happy-go-lucky skit on the French production of the same name. The costume he wears is very effective, and he receives good support from the three gentlemen who assist him. He had a very cordial reception. Esta Stella in a song and dance scored a success, her vivacity making her a favourite. Dan Crawley is appearing in a couple of songs; the first, "We've all been doing a bit," went well, and the second, a dance song, with some amusing patter, kept the house thoroughly amused. He gained several calls. Marshall and Parr in a drawing-room entertainment made a good impression, their vocal number at the end gaining for them great applause. George French is establishing himself as a firm favourite here. Both of his songs, the first on Roller Skating, and the second on Football, enable him to display his melancholy style to the best advantage, and his success was very emphatic. Powell and Visey in a musical comedy duologue A Perfect Woman, submit a capital show. The gentleman is a really good comedian, who caused some of the heartiest laughter during the evening, and the lady is a very dainty artist, and the dance with which they conclude is clever. The audience accorded them several well-earnt calls. Edna Latonne, who appears as a naval officer and looks very smart, has a taking song, which soon caught the ear of the house, and gained for the artist several calls.

The O'Gorman Bros. present one of the smartest dancing turns seen here, which secured immediate recognition from the house. They also introduced a couple of songs and some cross-talk, and altogether it is a very entertaining act. Gordon and St. Croix, who are at the bottom of the bill, are presenting a new romantic scena, entitled "The Romanys," written, composed, and produced by Jack Brownson, arranged by Henry May, the scenery being by Roberts and Co., and the costumes by H. and M. Rayne. The music is bright and melodious. Miss Beatrice Edwards plays the principal part, and is the possessor of a good voice, which is used to great advantage. Effective support is rendered by a number of ladies and gentlemen who are not billed, and a good chorus adds to the strength of the production. The audience followed the progress of the show with interest, and the fall of the curtain was the signal for great applause. Nash and Noel are also in the bill. The orchestra render invaluable services during the evening under the direction of Mr. T. Gray. Mr. B. Adams, the popular manager here, is very courteous and attentive in the front of the house. Business continues to be exceptionally good.

POPLAR HIPPODROME.

The chief item in this week's particularly interesting programme is Kate Carney and company in The Fun of the Fair. The sketch, which is in three scenes, is well produced, and is responsible for much laughter. The plot is a slight one, but what there is serves to bring out some sterling acting on the part of Mr. Geo. M. Marriott as Hager the Witch. His "make-up" was truly wonderful. Miss Kate Carney, as Carmen the Gipsy Queen, was in fine form and rendered her songs in quite her best style. The comic business was in the hands of Messrs. Willie Phillips and Albert Mason, who managed to extract much laughter by their clever fooling.

Esta Stella, the military maid, is an artist with a refreshing style. Quite a welcome feature of her performance was a clever eccentric dance. The Rawsons in a pot pourri drawing-room entertainment were successful. The lady's voice in "Thora" was certainly heard to advantage, whilst a very pretty number was the coon duet to banjo accompaniment. Carney and Armstrong are always good, and their jokes and quips never tire or bore. Their methods are certainly peculiar to themselves. Another item quite to the liking of the audience was George Gilbey with his predictions for every month of the year. His patter was very amusing. The bill also included Alf. Mendes in a novel scena, entitled "The Musical Burglar"; Frank Fort, the Johannesburg Jester; Renee, instrumentalist; Harry Rogerson, the tired comedian, and Alice Hollander, whose fine contralto voice was heard to decided advantage, both her songs being presented with artistic feeling.

Mr. Austin Anderson, busy as ever, manages to find time to welcome all visitors.

Mr. Will S. Pearce, comedian, author, composer, and tutor, has just made arrangements to train and bring out talented beginners for the music halls at the Royal Oak Assembly Rooms, Glenthorne-road, Hammersmith. They will have the advantage of appearances on a real stage at weekly concerts.

"LIANE" AT THE TIVOLI.

Reggie Petersen .....Mr. J. Valentine
Charles Hawthorn ....Mr. Charles D. Wright
Tom .....Mr. Julian Garden
Elsie Wood .....Miss May Hollom
Liane .....Miss Carlotta Maxime

The danger of philandering has been taught in many a stage play, and in the romantic lives of poets of both northern and southern nationalities are to be discovered affaires de cœur taken only too seriously by the woman. "Man's love is of man's life a thing apart; 'tis woman's whole existence," says Byron; but the tragic truth of these lines did not occur to Frank Rowland when he had a flirtation in Paris with the commère of a revue at the Folies-Bergère. The happy hours in her company have been forgotten in the society of Elsie Wood, his fiancée, whom he is expecting at his flat every minute. Liane has written to say that she is on her way to London, and there is a prospect of the two women meeting—a contretemps to be avoided if possible. Elsie arrives first, and brings with her a number of theatrical chums and some impressionable Johnnies, who adore the favourites of the footlights, and are on quite familiar terms with them. They make merry with wine, song, and jest, and the gaiety of the frivolous crowd reaches its height with drinking to the toast of Frank and Elsie. The moment is inopportune for the advent of Liane, but she comes, and a chill afflicts the crowd. The awkwardness of the meeting with Frank is smoothed over by her not claiming his acquaintance, and by her plea that she has come into the wrong room. With an affectation of light-hearted gaiety she sings a drinking song, and draining a glass of wine, into which she throws a powder, she dies.

Miss Andrée Corday was too indisposed to play the title-rôle on Monday evening, and her place was taken successfully by Mlle. Carlotta Maxime. Mr. Hardy-Jackson is well suited in a "Cigarette" song, which he renders with culture and charm, though he should avoid a tendency to vibrato. Miss May Hollom, whom one remembers in Hippodrome and Coliseum productions, is a fascinating Elsie, and would give much greater effect to an ear-haunting number, entitled "Love," if she was more distinct. Mr. J. Valentine as Reggie contributes to the smartness and the wit of the piece by his pointed delivery of some good dialogue. The music is good; the pretty dresses are worn by pretty women; and the ensemble is excellent.

Messrs. Bennett Scott and A. J. Mills have just fitted Mr. Fred Barnes with a song, entitled "Tell 'em that I'm your uncle." The comedian is quite delighted with it, and considers the number to be quite one of the happiest efforts of these versatile song-authors. Fred Barnes has the sole rights.

Mr. H. Curline Baldry wishes to thank the Great Lafayette for his offer of secretary's position, which he is very sorry to be unable to accept.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Mr. Mark Sheridan at the Euston Palace on Monday last produced for the first time Mr. Will Letters' comedy chorus-song "We're miles away from home," and scored a most unequivocal success, the crowded audience joining in the catchy chorus like "one man," as the saying goes. Mr. Sheridan will reserve this number for his West-End engagements after Whitsun, as his great success, "I do like to be beside the seaside," is going so big at the Oxford and Tivoli at present that no change of programme is advisable. Both songs are published by Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.

Early next week at the Putney Hippodrome Mr Mark Sheridan will tentatively produce John P. Harrington and John Neat's new satirical comedy number, "Hear what the crowd say as they come out," which the genial Mark himself pronounces to be the absolutely best song he has had for years.

"Beautiful Garden of Roses," by Dempsey and Schmid, is rapidly proving its claim to be considered the ballad success of the present season. It is a sheer delight to listen to this number at the Oxford, Standard, and Bedford, at each of which the song receives a perfect ovation. Messrs. Feldman and Co. are the publishers.

A phenomenally successful light comedy song of the present season is E. W. Rogers and John Neat's dainty and piquant number, "The pretty little girl from nowhere." Its successful reign during pantomime time has in no way militated against its success both on the halls of variety and in pierrot land. It may safely be predicted that this Feldman song will be one of the biggest seaside hits of the year.

Two other Feldman songs which are in enormous demand just now for music-hall and alfresco exploitation are Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," and Harrington and Godfrey's "Won't there ever be any wedding-bells for me?" while a third Arthur-street publication, which is a close "runner-up," is the pastoral romance "My sweet garden queen," by Harrington, Rogers, and Neat.

That favourite performer, Miss Ethel Ra Leslie, at York last week nightly sang no less than three Feldman songs, to wit: "I wonder who's kissing her now?" "Longing for one sight of you," and "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," all of which were received with tumultuous acclaim. Miss Ra Leslie is on the eve of producing a new Feldman number, from the pens of Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, entitled "I want to come home to Killarney," which gives every evidence of proving as popular as the same firm's (and writers') "Connemara."

At the Tivoli, Barrow-in-Furness, this week, popular Miss Lottie Lennox is cheered to the echo for her rendering of Feldman's popular chorus-song, "Put on your old plaid shawl," which is certainly one of the most successful songs in her present répertoire, and is joined in lustily by her delighted hearers.

The latest dainty exponent of Feldman and Co.'s big ballad winner, "Beautiful Garden of Roses," is Miss Violet Romaine, who nightly wins golden opinions from all and sundry among her auditors at the Peckham Hippodrome for her really exquisite rendering of this charming song. Miss Romaine will shortly feature several other publications issued by the same enterprising firm.

On Monday next Miss Gertie Gitana purposes producing at her London "turns" Feldman and Co.'s pretty pastoral song of the affections, "You were coming through the corn, Molly dear," by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, and expectation runs high that this song will prove one of the most successful ever yet sung by this talented young artist.

Messrs. Feldman and Co. have acquired the publishing rights of George Formby's latest comedy song, "I'm taking my father's tea," written and composed by William Hargreaves, author-composer of "I put on my coat and went home." Feldman's also publish the last-named, as well as two other successful Formby numbers, "Since I had a go at my dumb-bells," and the excruciatingly funny creation "Playing the game in the West."

Miss Ada Reeve, during her Hippodrome, London, engagement, produced two Feldman numbers, "Nobody knows—nobody cares," and "I wonder who's kissing her now?" and was delighted with the reception each song received. She is producing immediately Harrington and Neat's strong comedy chorus number, "Oh, boys, I've seen you there!" published by the same firm, which she is confident will be one of the greatest successes she has ever had in the popular song line.

EDMONTON EMPIRE.

A very heavy bill has been presented during the week at Mr. Harry Bawn's pretty house Edmonton way; but Mr. Fred Alexander, the energetic manager, makes light of the work entailed, and the succession of fine turns follow one another with a promptness that would be hard to equal.

Tom Lee, a genial comedian that one liked immediately he was seen, comes on very near the opening of the bill with a very fine song called "Seaside swank." Tom was neatly dressed from head to foot in white, and his number, being excellently rendered, got the audience into the best possible humour for what was to follow. Some very fine top-boot dancing was done by the Sisters Belmont, and Williams and Warden ("Dooley and his dear, dear friend") were responsible for a great deal of laughter. The Four Leons, well-dressed young fellows in purple suits, suggestive of Yankee tailoring, danced like clockwork. Their names were not on the programme, neither were those of Roy and Fenton or Lloyd and Maynard, two acts that did extremely well.

We have seen Reg. Beauchamp several times of late, and unless we are greatly mistaken, this comedian is going to be one of the big headliners on variety theatre bills before many years have passed. His dame make-up is excellent, his voice powerful and tuneful, and he gets thoroughly at home with his audience from the first moment. Edmonton wanted more—very much more—of him on the night of our visit. But time pressed, and already the waiting second house clamoured for admission, so Reginald had to bow off.

There are two very good sketches in this particular programme—one, The Burglar-Bungler, and the other The Midnight London Express. In the first Mr. Charles Levey very humorously takes the part of a criminal with virtuous instincts and a bad memory. He is a skilful pianist, and whilst anxious as to the whereabouts of the jewels, he is burgling a mansion for he cannot resist the temptation a Brinsmead offers to dash off a few popular melodies. So the jewels and the policeman have to wait, and there is much fun in the waiting process. That excellent Lyceum actress, Miss Mabel Mannering, takes the part of the kidnapped heroine of The Midnight London Express in fine style. There are three scenes, all of them excellent, but the last depicting a country station on a loop line, with signal-box, railway-bridge, and lines complete, is exceptionally well staged. Mr. Gerald Kennedy as Krymes, a procurer, has a semi-villainous humorous part, to which he does every justice. The old signalman has a good exponent, too, in Brien McCullough. The hero cavalryman, Captain Jack Hanlan, is well played by Sanderson Moffatt, and Miss Nellie Nelson's Betty Martin is very well acted indeed.

FELDMAN'S

SPECIAL SONGS AND SINGERS.

IT'S THE ALPINE DRESS YOU'RE WEARING.

MASONS AT WORK.

The last meeting previous to the installation of the new Master of the Chelsea Lodge was held at the Town Hall, Chelsea, on the 15th inst., and proved to be an exceptional one in various ways. First, the Worshipful Master, Mr. Walter H. Hitch, had the satisfaction of seeing all the offices filled by the regularly-appointed officers—viz., Messrs. H. Bawn, S.W., W. Walton, J.W., Geo. Dyball, S. D., L. G. Sharpe, J.D., Ernest Leicester, I.G., C. J. Doughty (Secretary), W. S. Lyon (Treasurer), Angelo Asher (Organist).

A ballot was taken, and proved unanimous in favour of admitting Messrs. A. G. Harman, W. J. Mackay, and Rameses into the Order, the ceremony being performed by Mr. Hitch, the Worshipful Master, who afterwards vacated the chair in favour of Mr. H. Coutts, Immediate Past Master. He advanced Messrs. O'Malley and Clifford, and retired in favour of Mr. J. W. Mathews, the first Master of the Lodge, who completed the final stage of the ceremony with regard to Messrs. Catlin, Dale, and Camp.

It was unanimously resolved to present Mr. W. H. Hitch with a Past Master's jewel and a silver-gilt loving-cup in recognition of his very valuable services as Master of the Lodge during the past twelve months. Mr. Harry Bawn was unanimously elected Worshipful Master for the coming year, and Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon re-elected Treasurer, as was Mr. J. H. McNaughton Tyler.

It having been reported that Mr. Keeton, a member of the Lodge, was sailing that day for Australia, a telegram wishing him a speedy voyage and safe return was despatched to him on board the s.s. Osterley. There was an exceptionally large attendance of the members, including Messrs. Walter H. Hitch, W.M., Harry Bawn, S.W., W. F. K. Walton, J.W., Wolfe S. Lyon (Treasurer), C. J. Doughty (Secretary), G. H. Dyball, S.D., L. G. Sharpe, J.D., E. T. R. Leicester, I.G., Angelo A. Asher (Organist), A. E. Nicklin and G. H. Hill (Stewards), Henry Coutts, I.P.M., J. H. McNaughton, Tyler, James W. Mathews, Pete Murray, Wm. Ward, Harold Finden, Harry Bancroft, Josh. Clifton, Monte Bayly, Albert Telino, Douglas White, Willie Berne, Frank Hardie, Fred Neiman, John Grant, Fred Camp, B. Freidkin, E. B. Seener, Chas. Levey, Bowker Andrews, Ernie Mayne, Albert Christian, C. H. Burton, Harry Clifford, Herbert La Martine, B. J. Whiteley, H. C. Lovell, Bertie Ralland, Augustus Dale, Dan Lipton, Ed. E. Ford, Andie Caine, Albert Marchinski, A. G. Harman, W. J. Mackay, Frank Fort, Herbert Chenery, Horace E. Arrondelle, Will Fox, and the following visitors: Sidney E. Rendle, St. John, 1,306; Sydney T. Russell, St. John, 1,305; Bernard Cohen, Skelmersdale, 1,658; C. Vincent Adams, Eyre, 2,742; Harry Ray, Liverpool Dramatic, 1,609; Harry Claff, Liverpool Dramatic, 1,609; John Worth, Earl's Court, 2,765, P.A.G.P.; J. J. Orr, Earl's Court, 2,765; W. Rees, Imperial, 1,694.

At the conclusion of the business the members and their friends adjourned to the Six Bells Hotel for refreshments, where the Master embraced the opportunity of thanking all the officers for the assistance they had rendered him during his year of office.

At a dinner to be held by the members of the Genesius Club of Instruction at Frascati's on Sunday next, opportunity will be taken to present Messrs. W. Lestocq and W. S. Lyon with the regalia appertaining to the respective offices they have been appointed to in Grand Lodge, and which have been subscribed for by the various lodges of which they are members.

MR. OSWALD STOLL'S PLANS.

Mr. Oswald Stoll has made the following statement to the Press generally:—"As no doubt you know, we have frequently been invited to operate in America, and I have as frequently refrained from succumbing to the temptation because I did not wish to provoke retaliation from American interests with which we might thereby come into collision. But Mr. Martin Beck has now removed the ground for any such consideration, and, he having done so, I must confess that I rather look forward to the freedom of action that is thus conferred upon us.

"It is clear that our opponents seek for these alliances because they have difficulty in filling their programmes with competent artists; for we, undoubtedly, have the pick of the variety profession on our books. But whether this is their reason or not, the Moss Empires can usefully operate an American tour for quite another reason. For example, we continue to engage very many excellent acts and artists because we cannot let our opponents have them; so that these acts and artists will prove all the more valuable to us later in consequence of an American season giving them a rest from our British tour. Besides, their absence in America will leave room on our books for many acts that we would gladly accommodate, but which we cannot arrange at present.

"For the purpose of working an Anglo-American exchange of artists negotiations are already afoot for the Moss Empires to join in a circuit of the John Cort Theatres, a circuit which will parallel the Orpheum circuit, extensive as that circuit is.

"We are also making provision for taking over other houses—theatrical and variety—so as to afford easy travelling stages to this splendid American field. Mr. A. L. Erlanger has been over to England to see me, but he is not financially interested in this scheme of ours. He is the executive head of the American Theatrical Syndicate, which controls nearly seven hundred theatres!

"The finances of this new Anglo-American combine—or merger—will be provided by a new American and British corporation, which will pool our money and the money of investors. I am assured that the capital required can be underwritten in twenty-four hours if necessary. Without necessarily opposing any Eastern interest in the States, we can, we find, arrange to have variety houses in New York, Buffalo, and Chicago, with another fine house between New York and Buffalo."

Questioned concerning the statement published as to his proposal to duplicate the London Coliseum in Broadway, New York, Mr. Oswald Stoll said:—"That is the great part of the scheme. No one thought it possible to acquire a site on the right spot and in every way adaptable to the erection of such a building. But I have found it, and I may safely say that towards the end of the year there will be very considerable developments. For the working of my scheme, and for running it when finished, I have decided to pay two visits a year to America, each visit to occupy about five weeks."

MR. FRED BARNES, at the Empire, Portsmouth, this week is attaining a phenomenal success with Messrs. Feldman's song "I'd rather be beside the fireside." The song is again the rage of the town, being sung and whistled by the man in the street with great gusto. The song is now leading for al fresco performers.

MR. ALFRED BUTT, in conjunction with Mr. Charles Urban, is now including in the "Kinemacolour" section of the Palace Theatre programme a second edition of Paris Herself Again—the present-day Paris of the boulevards and the Champs Elysees, of the Halles, and the picturesque surroundings of the Golden Dragon of the Pont d'Alexandre III., thrown upon the screen in perfect chromatic melody. The itinerant hawkers, dear to Parisians, are everywhere, from the flower-girls to the pavement pedlars of those wonderful mechanical toys which Mr. Louis Brennan confesses gave him the idea of applying the gyroscope to his mono-rail car, and the series concludes with some magnificent views of the Gardens of the Tuileries.

MUSIC HALL CELEBRITIES.

MLLE. GHITA CORRI.

Mlle. Ghita Corri, the remarkable dramatic soprano and character actress, who has won a great reputation on the halls during the last four or five years, comes of a very old dramatic and musical family, being the great-granddaughter of the composer Domenico Corri—the friend of Haydn, and founder of the Philharmonic Society—and the daughter of Henry Corri, who was for many years leading baritone at Drury Lane and Covent Garden, and who afterwards founded the grand opera company bearing his name.

It is not, therefore, to be wondered at that Mlle. Corri's experiences have been professional since her earliest childhood, and when still in her teens she was a frequent principal vocalist at the big Crystal Palace concerts, under the late August Manns, on one of these occasions having the distinguished services, as pianist, of M. Paderewski, who, in the absence of the usual accompanist, most kindly volunteered to play "Let the bright Seraphin" for her, and played it, as Mlle. Corri gratefully avers, "like a full orchestra."

At this time she also appeared on the leading concert tours with Foli, Joachim, Piatti, Hollman, Janotha, the Ravoglis, &c.—on one tour deputising for the late Sims Reeves!—and later on joined the Carl Rosa Opera Company in London as prima donna, making a triumphant début as Margherita in Faust. Her general répertoire consists of no less than forty operas, in French,

MLLE. GHITA CORRI IN "CALLER HERRIN'."

Italian, German, and English, besides over one hundred leading oratorios and cantatas, from the Messiah down to the latest modern works, the soprano rôles of which she has often been specially engaged to create. For five years she ran her own grand opera company, and is still an occasional giver of high-class concerts.

The late Charles Morton gave Mlle. Corri her first variety engagement, securing her for the Palace Theatre, and she then went on from one engagement to another, with the result that at the present time, with the exception of the Stoll tour, she has worked, with unvarying success, as vocalist and character actress, nearly every leading theatre in London and the provinces, not to mention Scotland, Ireland, France, and Spain. Her present successful song-scena, Character Types, introduces generally three or four well-marked popular characters from her huge gallery of impersonations—Georgian cavaliers and Italian peasant boys, Scotch fishwives (studied from the Broughty Ferry workers), Spanish cigarette-girls (from types noted at Barcelona during Mlle. Corri's professional engagement there), Eastern princesses (from the British Museum), old German musicians (from life), ragged beggar-girls, radiant English milkmaids, and scores of other minutely-studied impersonations, each with a character-song—viz., "If I had a thousand lives to live" for the Georgian cavalier, "Caller Herrin'" for the Scotch fishwife, "Cleopatra" for the Eastern princess, and so on.

Mlle. Corri, it is interesting to note, possesses the phenomenal range of three octaves and five notes—from the low bass G to E in alt.—entirely without a break; while her perfect Italian vocalisation enables her to sing the most exacting florid music, like Rosini's "Bel'Raggio," with the same consummate ease with which she declaims the sonorous and mighty recitatives of Handel. For the leading phonograph companies she has made numberless soprano and contralto records, and her physical strength is such that she has sung twelve grand operas in a week, and four concerts between 8.30 and 11. Above all, Mlle. Corri is immensely popular with the public, her breezy character acting, her inexhaustible vitality, her good humour, and her glorious voice winning her countless friends in every audience.

"LOOP-GOLF-HITS."

CHARLES FISHER'S GREAT INVENTION.

It is now seven years since Mr. Fisher first gave us his "Miniature Opera" productions on the variety stage. Everybody then wondered at his audacity in giving "opera in the halls." How well that venture of Mr. Fisher's succeeded is now ancient history. Mr. Fisher, in the past week, has sprung an even greater surprise on us, for he has presented the royal game of golf to the world in tabloid form. Briefly, Mr. Fisher has made it possible to indulge in a round with the clubs in one's drawing-room, spare room, or on board ship, without any danger whatever, and this was demonstrated a week ago at Anderton's Hotel, when Messrs. Taylor and Braid, the famous golf champions, brought all their wrist and fore-arm into play in putting the game to the test. One of the dailies remarked: "All present wondered that there was no accident."

After that demonstration, and the mutual congratulatory handshaking over, our representative managed to "bunker" Mr. Fisher for a few minutes' chat. Coming to the point at once our man lead off with the question: "What on earth made you think of this device?" Mr. Fisher's face positively beamed with delight, as he answered: "Why, my boy, hundreds of thousands of people, I feel sure, are anxious to learn golf. Thousands cannot get to the links after they have learnt. These people long for a round with the clubs. There are thousands who would like to learn how to handle a club before venturing on the links proper. What better opportunity can they have than at home, with no lynx-eyed caddy to giggle if they badly slice, pull, or top the ball, or perhaps, worse still, miss it altogether. Again, how many are there getting well into the forties or fifties who require some form of rejuvenating exercise. I contend that golf brings into play every muscle and nerve in the body. How many are there who could possibly negotiate an eighteen-hole course? It is all very well for some people with a superabundance of animal spirits to ramp about the green turf; but, unfortunately, we are not all made alike. Therefore, I thought of a something that would answer at least as a substitute, and at the same time be an adjunct to the great and royal game, golf.

"This arrangement for an outdoor or indoor practice game is entirely my own, and I hold all the patent rights. I have been working on it twelve months now. Never shall I forget my numerous visits to the great golf champions, Messrs. Taylor and Braid. I shall not forget either how, on one occasion, just when I thought I had it perfect, Mr. Braid put in one of his mighty strokes, and away went the ball. 'Now what's happened,' says he. 'What I wanted to happen,' I replied. 'That some of the conceit should be knocked out of me.' On another occasion I took him down a 12yds. length cord. He played with this in his workshop. I was truly astounded that only once out of fifty shots did the device turn over. On his last shot he very quietly made a remark: 'Well, if it will stand that, it will stand anything.'"

Our representative had to confess to Mr. Fisher that he unfortunately knew nothing whatever about golf when he inquired what the advantages of the game were to ordinary golfers or beginners.

"I claim," replied Mr. Fisher, "that 'Loop-Golf-Hits' is the alphabet to golf proper. By using it one can learn how to golf at home, or, rather, how to hit your ball the correct way before you venture on the links. Again, it teaches you how to pick up your ball with each club used, and at the same time loft it so that you can easily play out or over a bunker. The device will tell you if you play straight, for there are five loops. The centre one, if in playing a game, singles, foursomes, or single practice, counts three, next two, outer loop one. Therefore, if the cord gets in one of these loops, you may take it you have played a pretty straight shot, and at the same time a correct shot, for your ball must go over the device to score as you noticed during the play to-night.

To become a decent golfer one must play equally well with all clubs, so that you must use them in the same way as you would on the links proper. Then, after grasping an idea of the way to hit your ball, and you fancy you would like to try the links, do so, and try to remember your faulty shots when playing there.

"'Loop-Golf-Hits' gives you every chance to quietly practice by yourself until you gain some confidence. You know when one starts on the links one absolutely knows nothing of the game—it is all so bewildering. How many are there, before commencing a round of the links, execute imaginary 'drives,' just to give them a kind of 'Nerve Tonic.' To such golfers 'Loop-Golf-Hits' prove of immense value. The same argument applies after a round of the links. There are faulty shots we would like—whilst in our memory and eagerness—to try and rectify at once, for if one is inclined to be of a nervous disposition, one easily gets disgusted with oneself and the game as well. You can put in as many shots in ten minutes over the device as you would in an hour or so on the links proper. Consequently, to a business man a round with the clubs in the morning or evening will keep him absolutely fit. Taking our own profession, it should become popular for stage golf practice, and even in the dressing-rooms between the houses twice nightly. Then the Army and Navy should find it very useful. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has graciously honoured me by accepting a set for his trip to Africa. This should set a fashion for the game on the great ocean liners.

"The stage rights are thoroughly protected, and I have one of the biggest tops of the bills in preparation. You might mention that if anyone would like to read my specifications they can do so at the Patent Office, and the number is 16297.

"I should very much like to take this opportunity of publicly thanking Messrs. Taylor and Braid for their great and unselfish generosity in assisting me in every possible way to thoroughly and impartially test 'Loop-Golf-Hits.'"

A BUSY SONG AND SKETCH WRITER.

MR. CHARLES D. HICKMAN.

Born in 1862, Mr. Chas. D. Hickman started as a showman at school, in conjunction with the late Walter Sealby, giving weird ghost entertainments in the coal-cellar. As a youth he appeared as a reciter at various West End entertainments, in company with other youthful aspirants, among them Miss Annie Hughes, Mr. Fred Grove, Mr. Fred Eastman, Mr. J. P. Preston, and Mr. George Arliss. At the age of sixteen he started song and sketch-writing, and several of his sketches were at that time published by Messrs. Abel Heywood and Sons, of Manchester. About that time he wrote a nigger sketch for two young performers, now known to fame as Gus Elen and Tom Bassett.

[Photo by Nock.

Then followed his first monologue, Obliging His Landlady, which was performed by the late A. Melville and published by S. French, which firm has now several of Mr. Hickman's productions in their catalogue. Among Mr. Hickman's first song customers were the Sisters Williams, Alf. Chester, Harry Dowton, Teddy Mosedale, and G. H. Macdermott. Mr. Hickman was the first writer to supply Mr. George Robey with songs. This was when the now famous comedian was with Kennedy, the mesmerist, at the Royal Aquarium.

In the late 'eighties Mr. Hickman became stage-manager for Mr. Geo. E. Belmont, at the Sebright, where he was extensively advertised as "Druriolanus's Disciple." After three years with "Barnum's Beauty," he undertook the management of the Alhambra, Sandgate, for Mr. Tom Maltby, two years later succeeding the late Fred Law as manager of the Royal York Pavilion, Southampton, where one day there came a pleasant little lady with a letter of recommendation from the late Fred Gilbert. The applicant's demands were so moderate that Mr. Hickman booked her on top of the company already engaged, and an early success was thus made by Miss Connie Ediss.

After six years in Southampton, for part of which time he was licensee of the old Empire, in French-street, and a far from profitable experience in Colchester, Mr. Hickman again took up his pen, and during the Boer War wrote "A Clown's Appeal," with which Griff, by reciting it, gained a considerable sum for the fund raised by the Daily Telegraph. The same artist also did good work at the London Hippodrome with Mr. Hickman's lines written on behalf of the "Lifeboat Saturday" fund. Mr. Hickman wrote "The Costers' friendly lead" for Charles Coborn, and "Impudent Parney," which was a great sensation at the London Pavilion, for Herbert Campbell. His songs have also been sung by Arthur Roberts, R. G. Knowles, Dan Leno, Whit Cunliffe, Mark Sheridan, and many other stars of the past and present.

Mr. Hickman has also written for nearly every ventriloquist of note, including Arthur Prince, Tom Edwards, Prof. Dunning, Fred Russell, and Coram. His recent work includes sketches for the McConnells, Hillman and Russell, and Joe Elvin. With old clients still going to him, and with Mr. Chris Van Bern as a travelling representative, Mr. Hickman will doubtless continue a busy man.

"BOYS IN CAMP."

Scout Master ..... MISS SABLE FERN
Veteran ..... MR. J. C. RUSSELL

Miss Sable Fern has secured a well-written, bright, and catchy attraction, titled as above, and the reception accorded to it at the Shoreditch Olympia on Monday was indeed cordial. As the curtain ascends a camp scene is exposed to view, and the boy scouts are observed performing the various duties appertaining to their respective posts. In the midst of their different tasks a bugle is heard in the distance, and the Scout Master (Miss Sable Fern) enters and instructs the boys by means of song in their duties in future life. She sings with telling effect "Teach the rising generation," and also scores in another number, "Keep whistling." The old veteran, a part skilfully undertaken by Mr. J. C. Russell, has a good song in "When the camp fire is brightly burning," for which he earns well-deserved applause, and two of the boy scouts, who possess really fine voices, sing in capital style "Be prepared," and are assisted in the chorus by the whole troop. As a finale Miss Fern supplies a capital rendering of "Only a boy," which is illustrated by means of pictures on one of the tents which form a screen. Portraits of Nelson, the Duke of Wellington, Napoleon, Lord Kitchener, Lord Beresford, and Baden-Powell are shown, and their boyhood days explained in verse. The scena is certainly a decided success, and should prove an attraction wherever performed.

"UNCLE WILLIE."

WHY W. J. CHURCHILL IS SO CALLED.

Everyone in the business knows "Uncle Willie" Churchill, the merry minstrel of "Happy Valley," Llandudno, fame. But everyone does not know how he came by the title.

It is a story dating back eighteen years, when Mr. Churchill was engaged to appear at a Liverpool music hall. The Saturday before he opened there he was troubled with the reflection that he was paying a return visit to the town with old business. Laying in bed an idea suddenly came to him for a new song. In a very short time he had written the words of two verses and a refrain, and had also set them to music. That song was called, and afterwards became famous as, "If I were only single." On the Monday, in fear and trembling, Mr. Churchill attempted to render the song. Being fearful as to loss of memory, he pasted the words inside his hat, but despite this aid, he got mixed up in the business he intended to do. In sheer desperation he started to patter, and told the audience a story in which he mentioned the fact that as he was Uncle Willie, he was above suspicion, and they could one and all confide their troubles in him. Before Mr. Churchill left the stage he had gagged sufficiently to enable him to remember the rest of the song, which was an immediate success. The following week he opened with Mr. Hargreaves at Roscommon, and was surprised to find himself billed all over the town as "Uncle Willie." He has been "Uncle Willie" everywhere ever since, and thousands of happy youngsters—and grown-ups too for that matter—throughout the length and breadth of the land have delightful memories of "Uncle Willie's" quips and jokes and novel doings when they met him in the past "by the sad sea waves."

Mr. Churchill commences his twenty-second season in the "Happy Valley" on May 9. Naturally, he looks forward to a good season, but he confesses ruefully that prospects are not as golden as they were when he first started in the business. In his young days the "Happy Valley" could be had at a rental of 15s. a week. To-day Mr. Churchill pays £275 for his pitch for the season, and even for that tremendous rent is only permitted to give one two hours' show each day. In addition to that he has to find his own seats, build his own dressing-rooms, buys his own "props," and pay a troupe of twenty-two entertainers—the biggest of its kind on the coast.

It can be truthfully said that "Uncle Willie" has made the "Happy Valley" what it is to-day.

"Uncle Willie" was absolutely born in the business, at Wolverhampton, and made his first appearance on any stage in 1870, at the Blue Bell, Portsmouth, at the tender age of two-and-a-half years. Churchill père and Crabtree at that time were partners, and little Willie was billed as the Infant Mackney, and did a "walk round" the others to the best of his ability. When Crabtree dissolved partnership with his father, the two Churchills started in business together as Churchill and Son. A little later another joined the combine, which became known as Churchill, Leo, and Little Tiny. The Leo of those days is now Mr. Tom Callaghan.

Mr. Churchill recalls a good story of his youth, when Vesta Tilley appeared in the same cast as himself. His father had been engaged to open at St. George's Hall, Nottingham, in "a great novelty," as the proprietor put it, entitled The Collier's Dying Child. This was the cast:

The Doctor ..... MR. TOM WINTER
The Collier ..... MR. W. J. CHURCHILL, SEN.
Jim (the child) ..... MISS VESTA TILLEY
Angels ..... MISS MARION WINTER, MISS MARIE BALFOUR
MR. W. J. CHURCHILL, JUN.

Now, as the usual business of Winter was that of a comic singer, and of Churchill, senior, a negro comedian, and the ages of the rest of the members of the cast ranged from four to five years, comment would be superfluous. One night during the storm scene there was trouble. There being no electric light in the theatre, it was the duty of the property man to blow powdered resin through a paper tube on to a lighted candle to get the requisite flash to represent the lightning. On one occasion as Churchill, senior, made his entrance in the death-bed scene, the property man blew the resin all over his face. So the negro-comedian-collier promptly hit the man, and promised him some more punishment when he came off. The property man's blood, however, was up, and he followed the elder Churchill on to the stage, and the audience was there and then treated to an entirely unrehearsed and unexpected "up-and-downer," which, sad to relate, they enjoyed far more than the actual and pathetic scene they had paid to see.

Mr. Churchill has played in twenty pantomimes, and his favourite part is Man Friday in "Robinson Crusoe." He recalls how when he started in the beach show business the performers were regarded as, and treated like, so many rogues and vagabonds. All that has now been altered, and in the majority of cases the seaside entertainer is looked up to. But the future of this particular branch of the profession is very black indeed, for holiday folk are nowadays too liberally catered for if anything, and there is too much competition in the providing of entertainment of all kinds. Everywhere local councils are raising the prices for pitches and pavilions to such an extent that there is now no longer even a living to be got out of them.

It may not be generally known that Mr. Churchill was the first to open with a regular troupe of minstrels on Douglas Head, Isle of Man, in 1882.

In his 'teens Mr. Churchill entered into partnership with another fine comedian by the name of Osler. Now the pair had been out of a shop for some weeks when Mr. Dannie Grannel offered them "Monday next" at his Liverpool house, at £4. Consequently, the two were not overburdened with "the ready." After due deliberation it was decided that they should cross the water to Birkenhead on the Saturday night and endeavour, by playing their banjoes and singing at a public house there, to raise a few shillings. It was a bit risky, but it was agreed that as they would be blacking up for the stage nobody would recognise them with white faces. At eight o'clock that night, when they knew all good pros. were at work, and not likely to see them, they started busking, and with immediate success. They had collected something like 18s. when the landlady invited them to play in the smoke-room. They accepted the invitation, and, during a breathing space, an individual whom they learned was the bill inspector of Mr. Grannel's theatre came in and proceeded to change the bill in the bar. Quick as lightning the banjoes were hidden behind a handy sofa. When the new bill was put in the frame "the top" read, "Welcome Return of your old favourites, the famous black banjoists, comedians, and dancers, Churchill and Osler."

"Uncle Willie" intends to take out a big minstrel show next October. It will be made up of nineteen tried and well-known entertainers. The business will be on quite new lines. The show will be all animation, concerted numbers will be a great feature, and limelight and special effects will prevail. The title of the show will be "Churchill's Happy Valley Jolly 'Uns," and it is registered.

MR. EVELYN BAKER and Harry Soutar, a younger son of the lamented Nellie Farren, have been engaged by Mr. Edward Lauri as musical director and stage manager respectively for his new production, The Lady Bandits, at the Palace, Manchester, on May 9.

DENBY AND DENT were very busy last week playing the Gaiety, Birmingham, and deputising at the Aston Hippodrome for Messrs. Naughton and Gold. Their new act, "I never did," proved a big success.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD

Bedford Fair.

The principal amusements at this fair were Thurston and Son's cinematograph theatre and the same firm's electric- and steam-driven roundabouts and other fairground novelties; Harris' roundabouts; and shooting galleries, houp-las, coker wheels, and all the fun of the fair by Messrs. Shaw, T. Harris, A. Johnson, and others.

Woodbridge Fair.

For this week-end Mr. Charles Thurston is holding a fair at Woodbridge, the principal attractions being Thurston's cinema palace, with up-to-date pictures and variety turns; Thurston and Barker's machines and other amusements; the throwing games, shooters, and variety stalls by various caterers on the Suffolk and Norfolk circuit.

The Fair at Pontefract Races.

The fairground had a great variety of entertainments and novelties for the race week. Chief amongst these were Farrer's and Tyler's cinematograph theatre; Morley's scenic railway; and Harniess' switchback motors.

Sedgwick's Wild Beast Show.

During its recent tour of the Lancashire cotton towns this famous menagerie was warmly welcomed and well patronised. The Darwen Gazette, in a recent issue, speaks of the visit of the show in the following appreciative terms: "This popular menagerie visited Darwen on Thursday night, when it was thronged by a large and appreciative audience. The wild beasts encaged there remind one of boyhood days, when this popular institution visited Darwen more frequently. There are several cages of forest bred lions, one cage containing six of these beasts, which are considered to be the finest specimens of their kind in the country. Several lionesses are to be seen in cub, as is also a leopardess. There is an excellent specimen of the Russian bear, whilst there is also a fine emu. Some half-dozen camels and performing elephants are also to be seen. A baby lion cub is an interesting object, whilst the wolves, looking fierce and in the prime of condition, recall their savagery in their native wilds. The tamer enters one cage with several boarhounds and they perform with a group of lions. In another cage the daring of the tamer is put to the severest test as he subdues the ferociousness of the lions and puts them through some remarkable manœuvres. Probably Sedgwick's wild beast show is the finest beast show in the country, notwithstanding the glamour that surrounds the name of other popular shows, and certainly the cage performances are far superior to any other wild beast performances in the United Kingdom. Mr. Sedgwick is to be congratulated on the high state of excellence of his show."

Showman Enterprise.

The monarch of modern shows, Mr. P. Collins, has secured a large space of ground at the Crystal Palace, and will arrange an up-to-date British Empire Fair, as a special auxiliary attraction of the Festival of Empire and Pageant of London.

Mr. Collins has called attention in our advertisement column to this, his latest enterprise, and to similar up-to-date ventures at the coming Leicester Fair, the Birmingham Whitsun Fair, Lichfield Bower, and Wolverhampton Whitsun Fair.

The special features of these important fixtures have been fully set out in their separate advertisements. Our only purpose in calling the attention of our showmen readers to this latest evidence of Mr. P. Collins's up-to-date enterprise is that all showmen may know of the good things under Mr. Collins's able management.

In addition to the fair at the Crystal Palace for the whole of the season of the Festival of Empire and Pageant of London, we note that Leicester May Fair will have a tremendous attraction for the first time on record at pleasure fairs of an aviation display, and that Mr. Leo Merode will give daily demonstrations of aeroplane flying on a Blériot type machine.

On Friday, 15th inst., an enormous crowd was attracted to Frank C. Bostock's Jungle and Arena at Glasgow, the special attraction being a wedding which was to be celebrated in the lions' cage. A long queue was waiting at the doors at six p.m. and at nine the crowd was still pouring into the huge building. The wedding was timed for 9.15 and prompt to time Mr. Harry E Tudor, manager of the Jungle, entered the large steel-barred arena, and in a short speech impressed upon the huge audience the fact that the wedding was a genuine one, the bride and bridegroom being Glasgow people, and that the ceremony would be carried through with all due solemnity according to the laws of the Scottish Church. Mr. Tudor appealed for perfect silence during the wedding, and warned the public not to be startled by the flash-light which would be used by the representatives of two illustrated dailies in taking photos of the unique scene. Trainer Tallon, who was in evening dress to do honour to the occasion, then brought in a group of six lions, and, having placed them on their respective perches round the front of the cage, the wedding party filed in, and took up their positions at a respectful distance from the danger zone. The party consisted of the bride and bridegroom, the officiating clergyman, the trainer and two assistants, and Manager Tudor. The ceremony was short, but impressive, and was carried through by the Rev. Lloyd Morris, who conducts the P.S.A. in the Palace Theatre every Sunday afternoon. This gentleman very kindly stepped into the position at the last moment, as the minister who originally undertook to conduct the ceremony had been debarred by his Presbytery from appearing. After the wedding, the Rev. Mr. Morris stepped a little further into the centre of the cage, and gave a short address to the audience on the novelty of the occasion, and the wedding-party, having been photographed, retired from the Arena. The intense interest which had been aroused in Glasgow by the event reflects infinite credit on Mr. Harry Tudor's knowledge of the gentle art of booming! The bridal couple were presented with the complete furnishing of two rooms as a wedding present from Mr. Frank C. Bostock.

Lord John Sanger's Circus.

This permanent British institution, with its excellent programme of equestrian and hippodramatic novelties, paid a flying visit to Ilkeston on Friday in last week. The show received splendid patronage; crowded tent at both performances.

Pitt's pictures are going strong at Pontypool, and the houses are packed nightly. A good selection of films is shown, and also variety turns. Mr. Pitt, the popular lessee, is now running an Empire at Abersychan and Blaenavon, which are both doing excellent business. All the halls are cosy and comfortable, and go to prove that the picture hall has come to stay.

CINEMA OPERATORS' LUNCHEON.

The third annual luncheon arranged by the National Association of Cinematograph Operators was given on Tuesday last at 2 o'clock in the Sheraton Hall of the Popular Café. Field, Bow Palace; Mr. T. G. Weedon, Mr. A. Penny, Mr. Hughes (Sadler's Wells), Mr. C. Hale, Mr. J. Johnson, Mr. Frank Nail, Mr. Green, Mr. Bronson, Mr. C. H. Ralph, Mr. Donnisthorpe, Mr. Woodhead, Mr. Hiscock, Mr. H. Turner, Mr. S. Walker, Mr. B. Steers, Mr. McCarthy, Mr. J. Saw, Mr. J. Thompson, Mr. T. Bolsi, Mr. H. Booth (Lux Films), the Rev. Tyldesly, of Poplar, Mr. A. Parker, Mr. S. T. Harper, Mr. William Johnson (General Secretary, N.A.T.E.), Mr. H. F. Last, Mr. Hedberg, and others.

After the Chairman had given the loyal toast, he called on Mr. Bowerman to present the certificates which had been awarded to a number of members in a recent examination. The members were cordially cheered as they received one by one their certificates from Mr. Bowerman.

Mr. A. C. Bromhead proposed the toast "Success to the Association," and in doing so he said last year he had the pleasure of making a few remarks, and it struck him the present gathering was of a more representative and ambitious character. He saw many new faces, and was glad to know the Association had made much progress since the last luncheon. Their business was one of the most fascinating and rapidly growing ones, and changing in many respects. Further changes were bound to come, and he thought they ought to bear this in mind, and be prepared to take advantage of their opportunities. During the past year they had had many difficulties and troubles to get through, the Act of Parliament and the L.C.C. regulations among others. These gatherings gave them an opportunity of learning to know one another better. The trade was like a man-of-war. There was the man on the bridge and the man in the engine-room, and they all had to pull together to get the best out of the ship. An association such as theirs could do much to make friction or to make harmony, and he hoped in following any line of policy they would consider the interest of the trade as a whole. Mr. Bromhead touched upon many other interesting points.

Mr. H. L. Merritt, the hon. secretary, responded, and said the Association had now been in existence for three years. They had done their best to avoid friction with anybody, and their only desire was to protect the interests and promote the welfare of the operators, and to do so without causing strife; but it could not be maintained that to cause an operator to work forty to fifty hours in a fireproof box for the sum of 20s. a week was either good for the trade or the operator. Mr. Merritt concluded by giving particulars of the objects and benefits of the Association.

Mr. E. H. Mason, vice-president, proposed the toast "Our Guests," with which he coupled the names of Mr. C. W. Bowerman, Mr. W. A. Appleton, and Mr. C. F. Appleton. Mr. Mason referred in very cordial terms to the assistance given by Mr. Bowerman, whom they looked upon as their Member of Parliament. With regard to Mr. W. A. Appleton, he was the secretary of a Federation representing 700,000 workmen, and was constantly brought into touch with employers in many kinds of business and some of the largest in the country. Mr. C. F. Appleton, their solicitor, was in close touch with other societies, some of whom had what they, the operators, wished to have, and that was a licence from the L.C.C. and similar authorities. He felt sure all their members would heartily respond to the toast. (Cheers.)

Mr. C. W. Bowerman, in replying, said he admired the work of the Association, and he thought their employers should appreciate their efforts, by these examinations, to encourage the widest knowledge and efficiency among their members. In doing this the Association was rendering a practical service to the trade, and it must be to the advantage of employers to be able to secure men upon whose skill they could rely. Mr. Bowerman briefly referred to the Sunday question, saying that an American newspaper proprietor tried some years ago to start a Sunday paper, and the trade with which he was connected decided that while they would not forbid their members to work on a Sunday they would not permit them to work more than six days a week, and those employed on a Sunday must be paid a special rate.

Mr. W. A. Appleton also replied, as did Mr. C. F. Appleton, the latter saying that in seeking to obtain a licence the operator should bear in mind that in other businesses where a licence was necessary there were also regulations, and a breach of these regulations was endorsed on the licence, so that in some cases the licence carried with it as many disadvantages as benefits.

The Chairman then proposed the toast of "The Trade," saying that these gatherings, bringing as they did master and man together around the festive board, did much to promote that harmony among them all so necessary in the interests of the trade. He had much pleasure in coupling the name of Mr. Thomas Clegg, of Charles Urban Trading Co., with this toast.

Mr. Clegg, in responding, paid a tribute to the operators, whose services did much to make the success of the moving picture theatre.

Mr. John Hutchins proposed the toast of "The Examining Board," which was responded to by Mr. J. D. Walker and Mr. E. H. Bishop.

Mr. C. E. Ralph proposed the toast of "The Officers and Committee," which was responded to by Mr. A. Malcolm.

The toast of "The Press" was submitted by Mr. Wm. Johnson and responded to by Mr. E. T. Heron. Mr. T. G. Weedon proposed the toast of "The Chairman," which was heartily received. The very enjoyable proceedings then terminated.

FILM GOSSIP.

"Byeways of Byron."

Mr. Gilbart-Smith's Byeways of Byron have attracted crowds to the Electric Palace, Marble Arch. Among the distinguished people who have already seen this splendid series are the Japanese Ambassador, Lady Emily Dyke, Lord Lamington, Lady Ulrica Thynne, Sir Charles and Lady Rivers Wilson, the Countess of Romney, the Earl and Countess of Ranfurly, and the Dowager Lady Hastings. The picture play is given daily at 2.45, 3.45, and 4.45 p.m.

Roosevelt in Africa.

This is a Cosmopolitan film, and the length is 310ft. President Roosevelt's recent trip to Africa lends considerable additional interest to this series of scenes of the life of this vast country, many of the places visited being those which Mr. Roosevelt also saw during his tour. The redoubtable ex-President himself is seen leaving Mombassa Station, travelling in rather a novel style. The opening shows the platform of Mombassa Station, crowded with white clothed and white helmeted European residents, keen for a glimpse at the distinguished tourist, of whom a capital view is then given. Mr. Roosevelt, in his desire for novelty, elected to travel with two companions on seats securely lashed on the front of the engine, and thus seated is seen waving his helmet as the train steams out. Some good views of life in the jungle follow. Some extremely good views are also given of the novel methods adopted in transferring passengers to the liners. Rowed up to the sides of the vessel in small boats, they are then transferred to a chair on a platform supported by the chain of a powerful crane, which swings the whole load up to the deck.

Fred Griffiths's New Hall.

Mr. Fred Griffiths has taken over the Theatre Royal, Darwen, and reopened the place on Monday, the 18th inst. The programme consisted of drama and pictures, including Mr. Harry Calden and company, in their great military drama Love and Duty. The prices of admission range from twopence to sixpence, while for a slight extra charge seats in any part of the house may be booked in advance. Mr. Griffiths is presenting the same class of programme that has made his London halls so popular.

Incidents of the Venice Murder Trial.

A 440ft. Itala film, Tyler Film Co., Ltd., with the above title, has just been issued. This picture brings the personality of the chief actors in this drama of real life, and the surroundings amidst which they are being tried for their lives, with a remarkable vividness, both living and still portraits being included of the Countess and others. A view of the house where Kamarowsky lived opens the film, followed by another of that in which the assassin sought refuge, then, following a portrait of Kamarowsky, a good view is given of the actual room in which he was wounded, the bedroom also being shown. Following comes a view of the hotel frequented by Tarnowsky, and now the object of much interest to the passers-by. Some remarkable views have also been secured of the Countess and Perrier, going to the assizes for trial. A head and shoulder portrait of the lady is followed by a scene on the landing stage of their place of confinement, whence they walk between two lines of police to the gondola which is to convey them to the prison. The latter is fitted with small cabins with barred windows, and the canal is guarded by police boats up to the prison. A scene outside the Court of Justice concludes the subject.

Open-air Cinematograph Entertainments.

At a special meeting of Linlithgow Town Council—Provost Jamieson presiding—a discussion took place as to the letting of a piece of ground at the West Port known as "Katie Wearie's Green" for a cinematograph entertainment during the Marches week. A letter was read from the representative of a proprietor of property in the neighbourhood objecting to the Council letting the ground for this purpose because of the annoyance to people resident in the vicinity. The Provost moved and Councillor Dowie seconded a motion that the ground be let as desired at a rental of £7. On a division the motion was carried by 8 votes to 3.

A False Alarm.

We are requested by the New Film Hiring Company, Ltd., to state that the fire which broke out in St. Martin's-lane on Friday night in last week did not originate on their premises, and had nothing whatever to do with the cinematograph films of the company.

New Picture Palace Opened at Leicester.

Leicester is now possessed of another picture house, which was opened on Monday evening by the Empress Picture Palaces, Ltd., on the Mere-road, which is situated a considerable distance from the centre of the town, but lies in a thickly populated neighbourhood, close to the Spinney Hill Park. It is the intention of the proprietors to change the pictures twice a week, and to submit the best procurable. There are to be two houses a night, with matinées on Thursdays and Saturdays. The building, which was formerly a mission hall, has had many alterations made to it, and it now presents a most comfortable appearance, the large dome at the main entrance giving it an inviting look. The opening ceremony was performed by Councillor H. C. Snow, Mr. P. W. Willard (London), and Mr. W. F. Freeman (Leicester). Mr. H. V. Horton, who has been associated with Cooks' tours, has been appointed the local manager. The same company, in a fortnight's time will open another hall in Belvoir-stret, one of the main streets in the centre of the town.

The Buffalo Music and Picture Hall, Ashington, of which the proprietors are Messrs. J. and E. Lamb, the manager being Mr. W. P. Carr, was opened to the public on Monday. The building, which has just been completed, is well furnished and most comfortable. The Australian Bush Boys proved an excellent turn, and the pictures were of a good order. A splendid audience appreciated the first house, and everything points to its being a popular place of amusement in the district.

Of Interest to All.

Making Parisian Dolls is the subject of a very good Urban picture. The film takes us through the whole process of doll-making as practised in Paris, where the prettiest and most life-like dollies of the world come from. Dexterous operators are shown mixing the wax, moulding, dipping and wiring, fixing the arms and legs by means of elastic, moulding and finishing the heads, putting on the complexion, and not forgetting the eyebrows, &c., and then dressing the dolls in socks, boots, shirts, and dresses; and finally we see a bright little girl happy in the possession of a really lovely doll.

Punchestown Steeplechases.

Barker's are issuing a good film of the Punchestown Steeplechases. It is a topical film of two days' rain and racing, in which incidents of triumph and disaster, pluck and endurance are depicted. Possibly the stiffest steeplechase course in the world, Punchestown bristles with ugly walls, deep ditches, and steep banks. The film starts with the arrival of the Vice-regal party and shows Lord and Lady Aberdeen very prominently. This is followed by pictures of the Conyngham Cup; scenes in the paddock; the start; fast riding; Kilsallaghan's last jump; wonderful falls and recoveries; a remarkable flight over a ditch and wall; and two jockeys colliding in mid-air.

Pictures take the Place of Wheels.

The Matinée Hat.

Two excellent stories were told in this week's papers. One is apropos of the matinée hat. In Australian theatres the following notice is thrown on a kinematograph screen before the play begins:—"Ladies under fifty years of age are requested to remove their hats." A writer in the Westminster Gazette claims for a driver of the Great Western Railway coach from Minehead to Lynton the credit of the authorship of this happy idea. In order to persuade the lady passengers to give the horses a little relief during the pull up the steep hill at Porlock the ingenious coachman used to call out, "All ladies under forty please get down and walk a little way up the hill." It was an appeal few ladies could resist.

THE CINEMATOGRAPH OPERATORS' LUNCHEON AT THE POPULAR CAFE ON TUESDAY LAST, APRIL 19.

MITCHAM AND ITS FAIR RIGHTS.

The return of two Councillors at the recent Parish Council election, with the avowed purpose of vindicating the people's Charter Rights, was bound to have a practical result. The first meeting of the Parish Council, on Tuesday evening, April 19, was almost entirely devoted to necessary formal business attending a first meeting of a public body.

In order to focus attention upon the question of Mitcham Fair, and to make a serious effort towards the solution of the difficulty which the events of the last four years have created, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift handed in the following resolution to be placed on the business agenda for the next meeting of the Council:—

"'Mitcham Fair.' That this Council, desiring to bring about a peaceful settlement of the question, resolves to approach all parties concerned with a view to co-operative action for the removal of the Mitcham Fair from the Fairgreen to a more suitable site, if the same can be accomplished without prejudice to the continuance of the fair and the ancient rights pertaining thereto."

This extremely wise and moderate resolution will determine what are the forces at work making for peace upon a question of great local importance. It will also indicate, as no other action could better do, who are the enemies of the people's fair. We have repeatedly in these columns testified with warm approval to the zeal of the local champions of the people's fair rights. Those champions have been held up to public scorn as being the supporters of the showmen, the real truth being that these gentlemen had acted, not primarily to defend the showmen's rights, but essentially to conserve the rights of the people of Mitcham.

It is admittedly true that in saving the rights of the people, the rights of the showmen are preserved.

But there is no need for any confusion of thought, because these two things stand or fall together. A man may be a perfectly honest Mitchamite, and at the same time a friend of the people's fair.

What Has Been Already Attempted.

As early as the month of April, 1906, the Showmen's Guild attempted to arrive at a proper understanding with the group of gentlemen who had set their hearts upon abolishing the fair.

Immediately before the fair of that year confident hopes were expressed that an understanding might be arrived at, and the fair removed by agreement to another part of the people's common.

The Fair Rights had passed away from the Bailey family to the present owners of the franchise. But, in the meantime, a great outburst of public opinion had demonstrated, to all right-thinking men, that the great mass of the people of Mitcham were not prepared to surrender their ancient Fair Rights.

It is true that in 1906 and in the following year certain showmen were placed under injunction for daring to assert their right to attend and to trade at a fair which had not been abolished.

The policy of the Guild all through the controversy has been to support the public demand for the maintenance of the Fair Rights.

This policy has received the seal of public approval, in the fact that at the last election the only two candidates for the Parish Council who stood out boldly as the champions of the Fair Rights were returned.

It is also a known fact that candidates utterly opposed to the fair were rejected. Mr. Pedgrift's motion is therefore doubly justified, first, as a necessary step to bring about the adjustment of conflicting interests, and, then, in the second place, as affording an opportunity for the Parish Council to take the right position as the champion of the rights of the people of Mitcham.

It will be possible now for the Parish Council to help in the solution of a pressing difficulty, and to bring all the parties concerned into conference.

It is, indeed, high time that it was fully recognised that no solution of the problem will be acceptable to the people of Mitcham, which does not provide for the continuance of its ancient Fair Rights.

What are the Difficulties in the Way?

We have devoted a great deal of time and thought to the matter, and, given a real desire to settle the question on practical lines, we are convinced that the difficulties are more imaginary than real.

For example, if mention is made of the Three Kings Common, obviously the best possible site for the fair, we are told that the Three Kings part of the common belongs to another manor, and all sorts of difficulties called "manorial rights" are conjured up to prevent efforts to secure that desirable site.

The people who raise these objections conveniently forget the powers vested in the Board of Conservators. We are quoting from memory (but the Act of Parliament is readily available) when we say that the Mitcham Board of Conservators have full powers to assign a new site on any part of the lands they control, if they can show first to the Board of Agriculture that the transfer will effect a desirable public improvement, and that the Home Office is prepared to agree to the transfer of the franchise of the fair to the new fairground.

Our reading of the powers of the Board of Conservators has confirmed our opinion that if, in accordance with the terms of Mr. Pedgrift's motion, all the parties concerned will only come together, a settlement could be quite easily effected—a settlement that would secure all the ancient rights and privileges of the fair, and would perpetuate for Mitcham and for South London an institution at once popular and useful as providing open-air amusements for the people.

In securing these advantages, other advantages would follow. For example, by agreement amongst the parties concerned a considerable revenue, to the easement of public burdens or for the improvement of the commons, would be at the disposal of the local authorities.

At any rate, we are confident that Mr. Pedgrift's motion is in the right direction, and we trust that it will be fruitful in good results.

Pageant of Empire Pictures.

At the daylight pictures which are to be shown in the grounds of the Crystal Palace during the Pageant of Empire Festival, seats will be provided for 2,000 persons at each display, and a further 4,000 will be able to see them also.

Latest Fight Pictures.

A Fine Pathé Film.

The Smuggler's Hiding Places is a most exciting film, issued by Pathé, descriptive of the many adventures of a mountaineer in his endeavour to smuggle lace across the frontier. Suspicion falls upon him, but he eludes capture and takes refuge in a flour sack. His struggles to release himself from the sack after the pursuing party has passed are exceedingly amusing, but he has again to hide in a basket half full of potatoes. The officers are quite bewildered, and assist the owner of the basket to hoist it upon his back, and so the smuggler gets clean away under their very noses. He next slips into a wine barrel, and this time he is observed by his pursuers. Two of them approach the barrel and overturn it, but again they are foiled. The smuggler's next encounter is with the excisemen in a wood, and he is at length caught.

IN PRAISE OF BRITISH PLUCK.

It is well known that Fistiana or scientific boxing remains a popular show at British fairs. Amongst the best shows of this kind must be ranked the school of boxers and athletes under the direction of Wm. Le Neve and Norah Sullivan, known as "The Sandows of the Fairground." Visitors to Le Neve's show during recent years, whether located at the World's Fair, Islington, or the Fun City, Olympia, will recall the figure of the veteran boxer and ex-Champion of the World, Jem Mace. A contributor to the Manchester Guardian, writing under the signature "H. B.," gives a most interesting account of a visit to Le Neve's show and an interview with the aged hero of many fights. Knowing as we do the wide circle of Jem Mace's friends in showland, we give extracts from the Manchester writer's account of his experiences at the show. After various exciting turns in the ring, "the master of the athletic revels announced 'Jem Mace, Retired Champion of the World,' in a felicitous speech, during the course of which he briefly summed up the veteran's adventurous career, so that when Jem Mace himself stepped out of the caravan on to the stage the most blasé of local youths could not forbear to cheer.

"Could the handsome, placid old gentleman in evening dress, with a crimson silk handkerchief rakishly tucked into the bottom of his vest, and respectable silk hat crowning his venerable head, bowing his acknowledgments of our cheers, be the 'painful warrier famoused for fight'? Was this the conqueror of Travers the Black, of the seventeen-stone Hurst, of Tom Allen, America's formidable champion? It did not seem possible. And yet as one closely scrutinized the leonine face, whose complexion still retains something of that swarthiness which brought Mace the nickname of the 'Norwich Gipsy' (although his family were of good English stock, living at the little village of Beeston, Norfolk), one noticed that the smiling mouth betrayed no sign of slackness or irresolution, and there was a flash of the eye which spoke of not quite extinguished fires when the 'Panopticon' proprietor referred to his deeds in the old days.

"Jem Mace was born on April 8, 1831, and he is consequently nearly in his eightieth year. But his figure is still athletic, straight, alert, and well set up—almost youthful. The only outward marks of pact battles is a great hump on the back of each hand, the effect of years of hammering on the bones and muscles. In fighting without gloves the hands sometimes gave out before the man. His face shows no marks at all.

"'I took particular good care they got precious few chances of hitting my face,' he explained to me, as I chatted with him in the caravan at the back of the stage, on the conclusion of the first 'house.' Mr. Mace was good enough to receive me in his sanctum sanctorum, a handsome little chamber like a ship's cabin, with a miniature kitchen range on one side. A buxom lady athlete—she of the pink fleshings—was giving a pleasant demonstration of the fact that Græco-Roman wrestling need be no bar to the domestic virtues, for she attended to the roasting of a chicken—'Mr. Mace's supper, sir'—while the urbane and courteous ex-champion fought his battles over again.

"Do you remember the chance blow you got from Tom King in your second fight with him?' I asked.

"'Perfectly,' replied the old gentleman. 'I had King well beaten at the beginning of the nineteenth round, and I'd got the office to finish off the fight I tried several times to land a knock-out, but missed it three times. I'd opened myself out for a fourth try, when my foot slipped on the wet clay, and Tom gave me the most awful cross-counter I ever got. I spun round and fell in a heap, and, although I came up to scratch again, I was too dazed to be of any more use.'

"King's victory was acknowledged to be a fluky one, by the way, and he refused a third match with Mace, explaining that he wished to marry and settle down. Nevertheless two years later he met and defeated John Camel Heenan (the 'Benicia Boy'), the huge American pugilist with whom Tom Sayers fought his dramatic and never-to-be-forgotten draw.

"Did nobody ever think of matching you against Sayers?' I asked.

"'Yes, just after he'd fought Heenan. I tried to induce him to give me a turn. But he was then in receipt of an allowance, the interest on about £3,000 subscribed by his friends, and this was only paid on condition that he never entered a ring again.'

"'So you never met?'

"Not in the ring. But we nearly came to blows once, though. It was when I was living in Liverpool. Tom, who had given way to drink, was over there on a visit, and I had been asked to try and get him home. I found him in a 'pub,' in a particularly wicked mood. He abused me roundly. On the mantelpiece of the room we were in was a picture with portraits of Heenan, Sayers, and myself. Tom staggered to the picture, pointed at Heenan with his stick, and says: 'He's a good man.' Then he touches his own portrait. 'And he's a good man too,' he says. Then he points at me and adds: 'But this is a bloomin' duffer.' I was nearly hitting him, but I kept my temper, and glad I was. Poor old Tom died a few months after of bad gin; and only thirty-eight," Mr. Mace added, with a sigh.

"Do you think you'd have beaten Sayers if you'd met him in a match?"

"Yes, I think so," was the confident reply. "He was game and clever, and as hard as nails. But I think I should have been too quick for him," replied the veteran.

At my request, Mr. Mace was good enough to place me in an attitude of defence on approved and orthodox lines. The right arm he brought over the chest, with the clenched hand (or "jook") resting lightly on the region of the watch-pocket; it was there for defence or attack, or, as the old military strategists would have said, en potence. The retired champion then slightly crooked the elbow of my left arm, bidding me double my fist (or "mawley") and hold it, knuckles out, about a foot from the chest. Then, these manœuvres being performed (somewhat stiffly and clumsily, be it said), I was at liberty to suppose myself in the attitude which had successfully foiled the ferocious attacks of the adamantine Goss, the bulky "Stalybridge Infant," and that cunning fighter Bob Brettle.

"Which hand did you make the most use of in your fights, Mr. Mace?" I asked. The veteran smiled indulgently.

But experts differ. Mr. Mace's advice, it will be remembered, is in direct conflict with that of Isopel Berners, the fighting woman in "Lavengro." "It's no use flipping at the Flaming Tinman with your left hand. Why don't you use your right?" asked the tall girl of Lavengro, during the celebrated fight in the dingle.

Jem Mace is more or less forgotten by the sporting public of to-day. But he is not quite without honour in his old age, so the manager of the show tells me. When there is a glove fight at the National Sporting Club he is received as a guest in the best places. But he does not think much of glove fighting. "There is nothing like the raw hand," he says.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The first meeting of the London County Council since the Easter recess was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens.

CHAIRMAN AND VICE-CHAIRMAN.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that they had elected Mr. H. J. Greenwood to be their chairman and Colonel W. F. Cavaye to be their vice-chairman for the ensuing year. Mr. Greenwood had also been elected to act as their representative on the General Purposes Committee.

UNLICENSED CINEMATOGRAPH ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Committee reported that proceedings had been taken against the person responsible for holding cinematograph displays, for the purpose of which inflammable films were used, at the Rivers Hall, Rivers-street, Islington, without a licence under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, having been obtained. The summons was heard at the Clerkenwell Police Court on March 22, when the defendant was fined £5 and ordered to pay the Council £2 2s. for costs.

SKATING RINKS.

The Committee had considered drawings submitted by Mr. E. E. Bird, of the Camberwell Skating Rink, in course of erection in Coldharbour-lane and Lilford-road, Camberwell. It is intended to apply for a music and dancing licence for the premises, which will have accommodation for about 1,000 persons. Subject to certain conditions being complied with, the premises appear to be satisfactory for the purpose for which the licence is desired, and the Committee recommended the Council to grant a certificate to the owner on being satisfied that the premises have been completed in accordance with the five drawings submitted.

The Committee also recommended approval of a drawing submitted by Messrs. J. and P. J. Groom, showing a proposal to form a new exit-way to lead into Bishopsthorpe-road from the Sydenham and Forest Hill Skating Rink, Silverdale-road, Sydenham, and to abolish the existing exit corridor leading into Silverdale-road.

Both recommendations were approvad.

ELECTRIC PAVILION, HOLLOWAY.

The Council, on Nov. 2, 1909, approved, subject to certain conditions, plans submitted by Mr. I. Davis of a cinematograph hall proposed to be erected at 643, Holloway-road. Drawings have now been submitted by Mr. H. Harrington, showing an amendment in the scheme of construction. The width of the frontage to Holloway-road will be increased, and the hall will be enlarged so as to accommodate about 850 persons. Subject to certain conditions being complied with, the proposals appeared to be satisfactory, and the Committee recommended approval of the arrangements shown on the two plans submitted. Agreed to.

NEW CINEMATOGRAPH HALLS.

The Committee had considered drawings, submitted by Messrs. Saville and Martin, showing a cinematograph theatre proposed to be erected on the site of No. 560, Mile End-road, abutting upon Burdett-road. It is intended to apply for a music licence for the hall, which will accommodate about 760 persons, and subject to certain conditions being complied with the premises appear to be suitable for the purpose for which the licence is desired. The Committee recommended that a certificate be granted to the owner of the building on the usual conditions.

The Committee also recommended approval of a drawing, submitted by Messrs. Gilbert and Constanduros, showing a cinematograph hall proposed to be erected on the site of the Clapham Junction tramway depôt, St. John's-hill, Battersea. It is intended to apply for a music licence for the premises, which will have accommodation for about 830 persons, and, subject to certain conditions being complied with, the premises appeared to be suitable for the purpose for which the licence is desired.

The Committee had also considered drawings, submitted by Mr. F. W. Foster, of a cinematograph theatre proposed to be erected on the site of Nos. 34 and 36, Oxford-street. The hall and gallery at the premises will have accommodation for about 370 persons. It is intended to apply for a music licence, and subject to certain conditions being complied with the premises appeared to be suitable for the purpose for which the licence is desired. The Committee recommended that a certificate be granted.

These recommendations were agreed to.

HENGLER'S CIRCUS.

The Committee recommended approval of drawings, submitted by Messrs. F. Matcham and Co., showing a proposal to provide an additional means of escape from the dressing-rooms at Hengler's Circus, Argyll-street, in order to comply with the Council's requirements. Agreed to.

THEATRE AND MUSIC HALL LICENCES.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee submitted the following report:—

"The Council, on Dec. 21 and 22, 1909, resolved—"That, in the opinion of the Council, it is unnecessary to differentiate between the licences granted to theatres and to music halls"; and instructed us to consider and report what amendments should be made in the standing orders of the Council with the view to granting a general and uniform licence to all places of entertainment licensed by the Council, under which it would be optional for the licensee, subject to such restrictions as might be considered desirable, to give either dramatic or what are known as variety entertainments.

Licences for the public performance of stage plays are granted under the Theatres Act of 1843, and licences for the public performance of music, dancing, or other entertainment of the like kind under the Disorderly Houses Act of 1751. The grant of a stage-plays licence does not authorise a music hall entertainment to be given, and the performance of stage plays in a building which is licensed only for music and dancing is clearly illegal. It is not possible, therefore, in the present state of the law for any one licence to be granted which would enable a building to be used for either dramatic or variety entertainments at the option of the licensee. The object which the Council had in view might possibly be secured by licences for stage plays and for music and dancing being granted in respect of any building that was structurally fit for both licences. As the Lord Chamberlain is the authority for granting stage-plays licences for the greater part of London, and the Council is the sole authority for granting music licences, it would be necessary that an understanding should be arrived at with the Lord Chamberlain that he would grant his licence to any premises that were licensed for music and were structurally fit to be licensed for stage plays, and that the Council should grant a music licence for any theatre that was licensed by the Lord Chamberlain. The division of jurisdiction that would result would probably give rise to considerable difficulty. The suggestion that a uniform licence should be granted which would enable either stage plays or variety entertainments to be performed was considered by the Joint Select Committee on Stage Plays (Censorship), 1909, and was supported by the Theatrical Managers' Association, but opposed by the Entertainments Protection Association and other proprietors of variety theatres. On this subject the Joint Select Committee recommended—

(1) That a single licence should be granted for both theatres and music halls giving freedom to produce whatever entertainment may best conform to the public taste.

(2) That the Council should be the sole licensing authority for London.

(3) That the music and dancing licence should be retained for assembly rooms, hotels, restaurants, skating rinks, &c.

In connection with the above recommendations the Joint Select Committee also made recommendations for an alteration of the law with regard to the licensing of stage plays and for extending the altered provisions to all words sung or spoken in any licensed place of entertainment.

It does not appear to us that anything practicable can be done in the direction indicated by the resolution of Dec. 21 and 22, 1909, without fresh legislation on the subject, and, until it is known whether the Government contemplate taking any steps to give effect to the recommendations of the Joint Select Committee on the Stage Plays (Censorship), we do not think that any useful purpose would be served by the Council, at the present time, promoting legislation to give effect to some of the recommendations. We may remind the Council that it has now before Parliament a Bill to enable it to grant music licences at any period of the year, and to charge a fee for the licences. We recommend—

That the reference to the Theatres and Music Halls Committee on Dec. 21 and 22, 1909, to consider and report what amendments should be made in the standing orders of the Council with the view to granting a general and uniform licence to all places of entertainment licensed by the Council under which it would be optional for the licensee, subject to such restrictions as may be considered desirable, to give either dramatic or what are known as variety entertainments, be discharged.

The report was presented after 7.30, when, under the Council's standing order, only unopposed business is taken. As the recommendation was opposed, it will come up again at the next meeting.

CONDITIONS ATTACHED TO LICENCES.

The following report and recommendation were also opposed:—

On Feb. 1, 1910, we reported the conditions that had been attached to the licences granted under the Cinematograph Act, 1909. Except in one case the licences granted for premises which are not licensed for music, &c., have been granted for short periods pending the completion of the works considered necessary to the premises. Since the issue of the licences the regulations made by the Secretary of State under the Act which are endorsed on the back of the licence have been revised and very considerably altered, and we therefore propose, instead of further extending the existing licences, to issue, as soon as possible, fresh licences containing the amended regulations. We think that advantage should be taken of the opportunity to add to the conditions imposed by the Council the regulation relating to standing in gangways which is enforced in all premises licensed for music, or music and dancing, or stage plays. We recommend—

That licences granted under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, in respect of premises which are not licensed for music, music and dancing, or stage plays, be subject to a condition as follows—That persons be not permitted to stand or sit in any of the intersecting gangways, and, if standing be permitted in the gangways at the sides and rear of the seating, sufficient room be left for persons to pass easily to and fro.

EXPLOSIVES.

The Committee reported that during the quarter ended March 31, 1910, explosives and dangerous substances were found to be in use in licensed premises on sixty occasions. The arrangements were not, in any case, found to be unsatisfactory.

INSPECTION.

The expenditure incurred during the quarter ended March 31, 1910, in connection with visits to unlicensed premises to ascertain whether public music or dancing was given thereat, and in connection with reports upon the character of the performances at licensed premises, amounted to £7 5s. 4d.

LEWISHAM HIPPODROME.

The Council, on March 2, approved, subject to certain conditions, drawings of a music hall to be known as the Lewisham Hippodrome, and to be erected in Rushey Green and Brownhill-road, Catford. Further drawings have now been submitted by Messrs. F. Matcham and Co., showing how it is proposed to comply with certain of the conditions attached to the Council's approval. The Committee recommended approval of the arrangements shown on the four drawings submitted.

Agreed to.

SUNDAY CINEMATOGRAPH ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Committee reported that proceedings had been taken against the person responsible for holding cinematograph displays on Sunday at the premises known as Pleasureland, Station-road, Brixton, contrary to the condition inserted on the licence granted by the Council under the Cinematograph Act. The summons was heard at the Lambeth Police Court on April 6, 1910, when the defendant was fined £2 and ordered to pay £1 3s. for costs.

Topmost on the bill at the Empire, Newport, is Charles T. Aldrich; his efforts to entertain are heartily appreciated. Mirth is created by the Comedy Four; the oddities with which the Three Van Dammes embellish their acrobatic display are productive of amusement; Jewel St. Loger, a charming and artistic vocalist, sings with sweetness; the eccentric humour of Larry Lewis gains abundant favour; and Violet Stockelle, a dainty comedienne, obtains a capital reception. Cumminger and Colonna dance with much energy, and meet with excellent approbation. The Lyric Quartette of harmonising vocalists have a warm welcome; and the programme concludes with an amusing series of pictures on the Bioscope.

Davis's pictorial entertainment supply the attraction at the Tredegar Hall, Newport, and excellent business is being done. Amongst the most popular films are The Life of Moses, A Dog's Thanks, Gambling with Death, A Western Maid, The Burglar and Little Phyllis, Beneath the Gas, Life in the Next Century, The Terror and the Terrier, and Herring Fishing at Boulogne. In the variety portion of the programme Mr. Maurice Marks, Mr. George Edney, and Williams's Welsh Minstrels contribute entertaining items, which meet with approval.

Mme. Tetrazzini had a delightful time and great success in America. "I have sung forty-five times in opera and in sixteen concerts all over America," she says to a Morning Leader correspondent. "Everything there is done in a great hurry except the examination of an artist's trunks. The taste for old Italian opera is on the increase in America. Certainly Lucia di Lammermoor was enthusiastically received. The people in America like plenty of melody, fine voices, and good singers. The Daughter of the Regiment pleased them greatly. I sang that rôle also in Washington, where one gets the House of Representatives, the Senators, and the diplomatic corps for an audience in place of the magnates of commerce, the various kings of business, as in New York."

"As the Daughter of the Regiment I saluted President Taft in the American style, and he spoke a little Spanish to me and gave me his photograph with the inscription, 'In grateful remembrance of the Polonaise from Mignon,' which I had introduced in the opera." "And do you drum as well as you sing?" "Certainly," said the diva; "I could give lessons in drumming."

"I might easily have been killed one night in Lucia, when the curtain descended and struck me on my head and arm. The baritone came to my assistance, and the audience was struck dumb with fear. But I waved my hand and called out 'Nothing, nothing!' and they cheered me."

HOW ELEPHANTS ARE TRAINED.

"To the average spectator who sits comfortably watching the performance of a group of trained elephants, the most interesting feature in connection with the show never occurs," writes A. W. Rolker, in Cassell's Magazine. "He sees before him gigantic grey mountains of flesh rearing on hind-legs or waltzing at command of a puny human, obediently as if they were so many puppies. He sees them lower their gnarled, bony heads to the ground and clumsily lift hind-quarters till they stand upside down, fat stump legs in air, like so many frolicking schoolboys. He sees them as they stand on ends of oak planks and bob up and down, playing see-saw with every evidence of the delight of five-ton babies; as they gingerly balance themselves on the top of a series of huge wooden bottles, or carefully poise themselves as they walk an enormous wooden cylinder. He sees them perform tricks too difficult for most humans, and notices in the faces and attitudes of the beasts the almost human expression of pleasure or painful anxiety. Yet how the trainer managed to make these dumb brutes understand what he wanted, and how he took the leviathans, outweighing him sixty times over, and step by step taught them their acrobatic tricks, are questions that suggest themselves only to the more thoughtful.

"As a matter of fact, teaching an elephant to perform tricks is simply a matter of teaching a gigantic, seemingly awkward creature with the mind and the friendly instincts of a two-year-old child. The monstrous bumpy skull, covered with warty hide, may seem an unpromising dome of wisdom; yet within the four inches of bone, which not even a rifle bullet can pierce, there is a marvellously developed brain, which glimpses forth only through the tiny twinkling eyes. In dread feet, in four-foot tusks, in the trunk that squirms ever restless like a huge python are death and destruction; yet not even the deer is more naturally timid than this almighty Lord of the Wilderness. The ponderous, slow-moving body may appear hopelessly awkward; yet within those heavy joints is the nimbleness of an acrobat. To these advantages add steadiness of nerve, quick perception of the hope of reward and the fear of punishment, and a natural craving to be patted and petted, and you have an idea of the sort of pupil the elephant trainer has before him.

"Time was when elephant trainers went at these overgrown babies hammer and tongs, using the most primitive methods to try to make them understand what was wanted, wasting half the time frightening the sensitive creatures nearly to death, and then assuring them that it was all right.

"To teach an elephant to lie down at word of command, for instance, blocks and tackle were fastened to beams of the training-barn over the elephant's head and to slings connected with each of the beast's four feet, and, every time the trainer gave the cue an army of men manned ropes and pulled legs from under the unfortunate, until, with a thud that shook the building, he would crash to the ground. The stall was heavily littered to prevent injury, of course; but the startling experience of the mysterious overhead rigging, of the groan and creak of the blocks, and of the thirty or forty keepers that each time produced the terrifying results spoiled many a fine beast. Trumpeting with fright, the poor creature would throw his trunk in a wild, vain effort for support, staggering, swaying, showing the whites of his eyes, as his feet were drawn closer and closer together until he realised he must fall.

"Panting, he would land in a pitiful heap, unable to understand what had happened or what was going to happen to him; and then the trainer would come with sugar and carrots, and try to win back his favour and make him understand that no harm was intended—until next time, when he would throw him all over again. Most of the animals learned in time what was wanted when they received their cues to lie down; but many a one, stung to resentment, quietly bided his time, grabbed a tormentor about the waist, and when he saw an opening whipped forth his trunk and hurled him crashing thirty feet clear to the roof of the elephant barn.

"It was not until Peter Barlow, a former Barnum and Bailey elephant trainer, went to Ceylon, that the white man took a leaf from the book of the little brown men on the other side of the earth, and learned really how to train elephants. In that land, where the boast of man is that he is half-brother to the elephant, no blocks and tackle were necessary to train these animals. Rarely even the ankus or elephant hook was used. Throughout long watches of the night men slept between the fore-legs of their beasts, talked to them, and treated them almost as if they were human creatures, and the animals learned with astounding rapidity. The identical tricks our trainers took from eight to twelve months to teach our elephants, by means of block and tackle, the natives of Ceylon taught in as many weeks.

"Barlow watched and learned, and returned home with a herd of thirty elephants, so green that they had ropes of jungle grass still about their necks. Inside of two months fifteen of the elephants were finished performers; and the other fifteen also performed all that season. For three or four years men marvelled at Barlow and his secret methods. Then one of his assistants started out for himself as an elephant trainer, and since then the East Indian method of training elephants has been adopted universally.

"By this method the expert proceeds scientifically upon the principle that the elephant is a creature of intelligence second only to himself, and that this giant, which, at one stroke, could wipe him out of existence, has really the heart of a good-natured, simple-minded boy, and is willing and anxious to obey, once his instructor has succeeded in explaining himself. Exactly as a trainer proceeds to train a performing horse the simple trick of raising a fore-foot at command, so the trainer teaches the elephant this trick; for the sake of uniformity starting always with the left foot, for the foot first broken in is the one the elephant will spring from ever afterward, when subsequently taught to rear on his hind-legs.

"Grasping a fore-leg between two hands, the trainer strains upward. 'Up! Up, Judy!' he says, and just as a green horse will raise a fore-leg when a shoer grasps an ankle, so the huge, warty leg, big round as a beer-barrel, is raised obediently. For ten or twenty seconds the trainer may hold a hand against the uplifted foot, signifying that it is to remain suspended; then 'Down! Down, Judy!' he says, and releases his hold, and down comes the ponderous member, with its two-inch sole of solid horn, noiseless as the tread of a kitten.

"For that wonderful piece of work Judy must have a lump of sugar, and she raises her trunk and opens her mouth so that the trainer can toss it into the triangular shaped little maw and thus save her time and trouble. Again and again the expert lifts the foot, which comes up more and more promptly, until by degrees the mere touch of a hand or whipstock, a bare pointing with the whip, a bare word of command, or an almost imperceptible motion with a lash, is enough to bring up the foot and keep it raised until the cue is given to lower. Then, in the same manner as the left foot was educated, the right foot and then the two hind-feet are broken in."

The Theatre de Luxe, 65, Strand, W.C., has shown the following pictures during the week:—The Cowboy and the Squaw, Train Ride Through Houw Hoek Pass, Before and After, How to Make a Large Cask, The Honour of the Family, Foolshead Pays a Visit, Flossie's Theft, Uncle's Eyes are opened, City and Suburban, and the Bulbeck Case.

HARRY LAUDER'S TRAVELS.

Leaving personal success out of consideration altogether, the thing that struck Harry Lauder most while he was on tour in the States and Canada was the extraordinary enthusiasm shown everywhere he went by the folks from the old country, and by this, of course, he means natives not only of "dear auld Scotia," but of England, Ireland, and Wales. In every city he visited the exiles seemed to revel in the hour or two they spent with the "wee collier comedian," and the memory of many pleasant meetings and "cracks" with those of them who came behind the scenes will remain with him all his life.

He has written a little brochure on his experiences on "the other side," and the book, published by George Newnes (1s.), contains one or two real criticisms of the comedian and his methods. Here are a couple of extracts from the criticism of a Chicago paper; the writer evidently remembered Albert Chevalier:—

"Overrated, but fairly good—such is Harry Lauder. He is more an entertainer than an artist, though he infuses some skill into the depiction of homely detail in some of the things he does. In the delineation of broad, easy types of the poltroon, the imbecile, and the bucolic dandy he is exact and humorous; but as for all the hullabaloo about Lauder being an artist, that is a case of tut-tut."

"The songs he sings have very little to recommend them. 'She's Ma Daisy' is pure doggerel, and touches on the amorous adventures of a bibulous, lazy, lying oaf in a Scotch regiment. The stanzas of the song are interrupted with a torrent of gabble in which certain confidential relations existing between the singer and the several are set forth with much particularity and gravity. The confidences are of a drunken nature and the cheek of them is monumental."

The following example of the enthusiasm of one of his countrymen is well worth recording:—

"At a matinée in the Odéon Theatre, St. Louis, an incident of a somewhat unusual character took place," writes Lauder. "I had just gone on the stage, and was on the point of commencing my first song, when a voice like a fog-horn yelled out from the balcony, 'Dinna be feart, Harry, ma cock! I'm here. Just let the Yankees see what the wee collier laddie can dae! Hurrah for Scotland!'

"I instantly recognised the voice; in fact, I could not possibly have made a mistake, for Rab McBeth's vocal organ must be one of the most powerful Scotland ever produced. It was years since I had seen or heard Rab McBeth, and I had no idea to what part of the world he had gravitated; but there he was in the balcony of the theatre. The audience all realised that a dramatic 'meeting' had taken place, and they cheered vociferously what time Rab's stentorian tones rang out again above the din: 'I'm here, Harry! Dinna be feart!'

"I know it was a terribly unconventional thing for an artist to do, but I held up my hand and, pointing a finger in the direction of the spot where 'the voice' came from, remarked: 'That's you, Rab McBeth. I ken your voice. Come roon' an' see me after the show an' we'll hae a crack aboot auld times.'

"'Right, Harry, ma cock, I'll be there!' yelled Rab in reply, and subsided into silence.

"Two yarns about Rab McBeth are worth telling here. Once Rab went up to Glasgow to see a brother away to Australia. The big ship had eased away from the Broomielaw, and Rab, standing on the quay, continued to shout parting words of cheer and advice to his brother.

"'Good-bye, Wull!' 'Buck up, Wull!' 'See an' behave, Wull!' 'Mind an' write, Wull!' These were a few of the farewells yelled by Rab, and he kept increasing the volume of his voice as the steamer crept farther and farther out into the river. The spectators were paralysed by the tremendous power of McBeth's lungs, and when the ship was fully three hundred yards away Rab again let himself go with a final 'Mind an' write hame, Wull!'

"A humorist in the crowd then went up to Rab and remarked, 'If Wull doesn't write you can just roar down to him in Australia; he'll hear you quite easy!'

"Rab was a man of many parts in his day, and amongst other things he occasionally essayed the rôle of vocalist. Once he organised 'a grand competition for singers, comics, dancers, &c.,' in the old Harmonic Hall, Hamilton—now an auction mart—and meeting me in Cadzow-street the night before, he prevailed upon me to enter for the 'comic' section. 'If you like to come, Harry,' he whispered to me, winking expressively, 'the medal's as good as yours—I'll see to that!' Thus assured of success from 'the man in the know,' I readily agreed to compete.

"Davie Graham, a very fair baritone, was 'first turn,' and he got a half decent reception and was allowed to finish his song.

"'You're next, Harry!' then said Rab to me, adding that the other competitors had not yet arrived, but would be sure to do so by the time I had finished.

"I boldly walked on and struggled through two verses of a comic song called 'Jock Tamson's Wife.' But the audience was too much for me—their free and easy comments and the general uproar unnerved me, and after singing two lines of the third verse I beat a hasty and ignoble retreat.

"'I'll soon quieten them,' whispered Rab McBeth, mounting the steps of the platform and leaving Davie and myself to wonder what had come over all the other competitors. But our attention was soon attracted by a terrific uproar in the hall—Rab's appearance had been the signal for an outburst of derisive laughter, catcalls, groans, and all sorts of noises, natural and unnatural. But he held his ground bravely and began to sing 'Row me o'er the Clyde.' He had only got through one line when a miner in one of the front rows yelled out, 'Here's the police!' and another burst into an imitation fit of weeping.

"This was more than Rab could stand. He stopped singing, walked to the front of the platform, and shrieked out, 'I don't give a damn for ony o' ye!' Then he challenged any two persons in the hall to 'come outside' and fight with him, and finished up by hurling some rather pointed epithets at the audience collectively and individually. He also shouted above the tumult that the competitors hadn't got fair play, that the concert was finished, and that the gas would be turned off there and then. That finished 'the great amateur competition.'

"It was only a week or two afterwards that I learned the whole thing had been a 'put-up job.' You see, Rab McBeth was a very wily chap. He had arranged with several pals to interrupt him whenever he made his appearance on the platform, and thus give him a chance to abruptly terminate the proceedings. The 'other competitors' Rab told us about were non-existent, and Davie Graham and myself had been 'used' to further Rab's little scheme of money-making. He got £20 in drawings at the door of the hall, and Davie and I are waiting for our medals to this day."

At the Grand Theatre, Rawtenstall, the pictures are again remarkably good, and are well received by the audiences:—Foolshead Receives, a very comical turn; The Mad Woman of Ruin Castle, a fine dramatic film; Grandeur and Decadence, a most dramatic story in Dimitri Donskoj; Servants and Masters, a side-splitter; A Tour through Jersey, a charming series of lovely views; Poor, but Honest, another fine dramatic turn; and A Coat of Fortune finishes an interesting and entertaining programme.

RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

A Fine Racing Skate.

The new "Talmo" racing roller skate has been introduced to meet the rapidly-increasing demand for a featherweight skate to screw on the boot. It is essentially a skate for the expert, and for racing, hockey, or figure-skating. The "Talmo" is British-made throughout, and constructed on the most approved lines, with substantial circular cushions of best quality rubber, which are adjustable to any desired tension. The wheels run on steel balls in case hardened bearings, accurately machined and finished with the same exactitude as a bicycle hub. The wheel-base being shortened by bringing the rear wheels well under the heel enables the skater to turn corners or describe curves with greater ease. The footplate is securely riveted to the wheel carriages, which are themselves braced together by a tubular strut. Only the finest materials are employed in the construction of the "Talmo" racer, so that it is light enough for the most fastidious skater, yet sufficiently strong to stand rough usage. The weight is only 34oz. per skate.

An Improved Brampton.

The Brampton "King o' the Rink" skates will in future be supplied in dull nickel finish throughout instead of enamel, as experience has proved that the plated finish is more satisfactory, and at the same time handsomer in appearance. Apart from this, the skate will be exactly the same in design as the previous model. A very considerable improvement has, however, been effected in the adjustment of the rubber cushions for both King o' the Rink" and "Duplex Girder" skates.

As may be seen from the accompanying illustration, the principal of the axis on which the swiveling of the wheel takes place is such as to result in the swivelling always bringing the wheels nearer to the centre of gravity of the skater, thus minimising side slip, especially on sharp curves. As the rubbers can be adjusted at both ends, the amount of adjustment can always be kept equal. There is no possibility of the nuts working loose through vibration, &c., as this is completely prevented by the spanner plate, which is held securely in place by a split cotter. This spanner acts as a lock nut. The strength of the axle box is now increased, as both sides are bonded together and equally take up any severe strain or blow on the wheels or axle (thus preventing one side of the cushion box giving way as hitherto). The axle is secured by a bridge piece riveted to the axle box, which effectually prevents any rotation or side movement of the axles relatively to the axle box.

Birmingham Trades' Carnival.

There was an infinite variety of cleverly-conceived costumes, representing historical, topical, and grotesque personalities and objects, at the first skating carnival held at the Empire Palace Skating Rink, Sparkbrook, Birmingham, and the comptroller (Mr. Stuart M. Johnston) is to be congratulated upon a very successful function. The judges were Mrs. Philip Baker and Messrs. Chapman and Mills (Leicester). The most effective costumes were those of "The Duchess of Gainsborough," "Primrose Day," "The Lady of Athens," The Rink Tower," "April Showers," "The Heavenly Twins," "The Alarm Clock," and "The Sleepless Husband." Pretty features of the evening were a grand match with limelight effects, and a graceful skating competition. The awards were distributed by Mrs. Philip Baker. The attendance numbered nearly 200 skaters and 600 spectators. It was announced that a trades carnival would be held on May 20, the proceeds of which would be devoted to the funds of the Birmingham and Midland Hospital for Women.

A. E. Court's Benefit.

The large crowd which assembled at the Empress Rink last Monday evening testified to the popularity and esteem in which Mr. A. E. Court, manager, is held. An attractive programme of races had been provided, and in a one mile professional race, first prize a silver cup presented by Mr. Sam Strawson, and second a gold medal, there were four starters, T. P. Blakesley, sen., and T. P Blakesley, jun. (Boulevard Rink), Alfred Bear (Empress Rink, London), and E. Ball (Leicester). From the outset Bear took the lead and won a good race in 3min. 33sec. Blakesley, jun., was second, and Ball third. The racing was followed by a grand confetti battle, after which Mr. Court was presented with a beautiful diamond pin and ring, subscribed for by the staff.

Gymkhana at Earl's Court.

If only judged by the picturesqueness of its scenery there is no prettier roller-skating rink near London than that at Earl's Court, and in point of size there are few rinks to beat it. But the rink has never been seen to better advantage than was the case last Friday night, when a programme of special events was arranged to commemorate an evening set apart for the benefit of that most popular manager, Mr. Herbert W. Izod. The various events not only attracted a large number of competitors, but were also eagerly followed by a numerous company of spectators. The musical chairs' competition was productive of a great deal of merriment, and, after some scenes which led to something like hilarious merriment, was won by Mr. P. C. Pimply. Cycling v. skates produced an interesting race, which was won by a cyclist, Mr. H. Cook. The egg-and-spoon race, confined to ladies, resulted in a victory for Mrs. Hawthorne, and a half-mile partners race was won by Mr. and Mrs. Cook.

Lava Rink Dinner.

The Lava Skating Club held its first annual dinner at the Old Bell, Queen Victoria-street, last Friday evening. The chair was taken by Mr. B. E. Cadett (president). Mr. S. F. Casey, in toasting "The President," said he considered the great success the Lava Club had achieved was due in great measure to the encouragement given by the Lava Rink management to the club. Mr. Walter Stanton, who is a first-claim member to the Lava Club, spoke of a proposal to hold Olympic Games on rollers in about two years' time, and stated that although the Lava Club were in the premier position now, they must look to their laurels, as there were other clubs all improving, and walk-overs were now a thing of the past. A presentation, which took the form of an address and a silver cigarette case, and gold watch chain, was made to Mr. Chas. Knight in recognition of his hard work. An excellent musical programme was provided by the following:—Messrs. Ben Carpenter, S. J. Little, C. Wigginton, E. Adams, H. Y. Evans, Master F. Andrews, Miss Sadie Allen, and Mr. Clement Courtney at the piano.

Police Hero in Rink Band.

It is of interest to note that the Manningham-lane Rink, Bradford, band now includes ex-P.C. Whiteley, the heroic constable who, it will be remembered, lost his leg as the result of a gallant effort to stop a runaway horse.

Signor Guidi in Brussels.

Signor Guidi, the director-general of music for the many Empress Rink bands, goes to-day to Brussels for Mr. Frank Bostock to take charge of the musical arrangements in connection with the Jungle King's Exhibition enterprises.

Camberwell Rink Opened.

An excellent attendance marked the opening of the new Camberwell Skating Rink last Saturday. The building occupies a commanding site at the corner of Lilford-road, and has a frontage of 250ft. on Coldharbour-lane. The interior and exterior are extremely handsome, and the skating surface, which measures 200ft. by 100ft., justifies the special attention which the management has devoted to it. The rink will remain open until the end of June, and numerous attractions will be provided from time to time. The general-manager is Mr. A. F. Wilson, who has control of a number of rinks and electric theatres. Situated in the heart of a densely populated district, the Camberwell Rink is sure to prove popular, and with the moderate price of 6d. admission and 6d. for skates or use of floor, the rink should be a great success.

Palace Rink, Dublin.

Round the Glasgow Rinks.

Despite the delightful weather conditions prevailing since the month began, there has been little change in the attendances at the various skating establishments in and around Glasgow, and taking the average, everything points to the pastime being as popular during the early summer months as it was last year. The enterprise of the Ibrox management in providing nightly attractions for their patrons is one that has met with success. Active preparations are being made for the masquerade fancy dress carnival to be held on the 29th in aid of the Lifeboat Saturday Fund. At the West End Rink, large crowds of enthusiasts continue to patronise the three sessions daily. The American Roller Rink continues to draw large crowds at each of the three daily sessions, an indication that this establishment, which was the pioneer of rinking in Glasgow, has lost none of its popularity. Interest is being well sustained in the Govan district, the attendances at the Summerton-road building in no way diminishing. At the Dennistoun Rink large attendances are the general rule.

Leicester Items.

At the Boulevard Rink the last carnival is announced to take place next Thursday. A picture palace is to be built by the side of this rink. The Belgrave Rink hockey team, having defeated the Loughborough team, has secured the hand some challenge cup and gold medals offered for competition by the directors.

Rinking Benefits Hosiery Trade.

An interesting fact is that the popularity of rinking has considerably benefited the hosiery trade. Several firms at Leicester, the centre of the hosiery trade, have introduced some new patterns in ladies' hosiery, and these are having quite a boom.

Notable Visitors at Maida Vale.

The Maida Vale rink has been lately honoured by august patronage. The Duchess of Argyll, Prince Leopold of Battenberg, members of the Spanish Embassy, Lady Huntingdon, and Lady Alwyne Compton are but a few amongst many notable recent visitors. The magistracy has been represented by Mr. Plowden, and the stage by Mr. Arthur Collins and the Misses Dare.

At Maidenhead.

Notes from Neath.

A carnival took place at the Crown Rink on Thursday, when several prizes were offered for the best comic and original costumes. There was a record entrance. The hockey match, The Gnoll v. Crown II., takes place next Tuesday.

Geo. Holt's Benefit.

On the occasion of the last carnival of the season at the Empress Roller Skating Rink, Nottingham, over 3,000 people were present. The occasion was Mr. Geo. Holt's benefit.

Last Night at Paisley.

To mark the close of the Paisley Rink for the season a grand sports night took place on Tuesday. All the contests were keenly contested for the prizes offered by the management. The large establishment was filled with interested spectators as well as rinkers. Mr. Jack R. Bostock, the manager, had charge of affairs, and conducted them in a businesslike way. After a successful winter's season the rink closes to-night (Saturday) for the summer.

New Rinks in the North.

The new skating rink at Philadelphia, near Fence Houses, has now been completed, and it will be opened shortly. A large rink is also being built at Houghton-le-Spring on a site situated in Newbottle-street.

"THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN."

Robert Brierley	Mr. Edwin Bennett
James Dalton	Mr. Benson North
Hawkshaw	Mr. Edwin Fergusson
Melter Moss	Mr. Charles Daly
Mr. Gibson	Mr. Edmond Sydney
Maltby	Mr. Henry Rivers
May Edwards	Miss Lilian Clare
Mrs. Willoughby	Mrs. Charles Daly
Sam Willoughby	Miss Louisa Peach

"There may be some good in a ticket-of-leave man after all!" With a slight alteration the well-known "tag" might be made to apply with absolute truth to the play itself, and one finds oneself murmuring "There is some good in The Ticket-of-Leave Man after all." Exactly how many times Tom Taylor's famous play has been "presented" throughout the entire English-speaking quarters of the globe would probably puzzle the brain of the most determined and enthusiastic statistician that ever burned the midnight oil poring over figures and going into calculations. The Ticket-of-Leave Man has become an English classic since Henry Neville—still, happily, hale and hearty as ever—first took London by storm as the persecuted Lancashire lad, Bob Brierley, and Hawkshaw created a new type of character. In these days of "potted plays" and reduced dramas such a widely popular play was bound sooner or later to make its appearance on the variety stage, and it has been reserved for Miss Louisa Peach to produce The Ticket-of-Leave Man for some forty minutes' traffic of the stage. The result is eminently satisfactory. Divided into six scenes, the story is faithfully adhered to, and whoever is responsible for the sketch has done his work well. All the salient features of the play are essentially retained in condensed form, much of the original dialogue is used, and the general tone has been carefully kept up.

Miss Louisa Peach, a clever, experienced actress, has reserved to herself the good-hearted, cheeky, and irrepressible cockney urchin, Sam Willoughby, and a delightful impersonation it is from start to finish. Sam enlists the sympathies of the audience on the moment of his entrance, and retains them to the end. Trained in an excellent school, Miss Peach has all the best traditions at her fingers-ends. Her acting throughout is replete with the spirit of fun and good natured mischief, while her clear enunciation of her lines is a treat to hear in these days. Altogether, the Sam Willoughby of Miss Louisa Peach is not the least interesting of the long array of characters the talented actress has appeared in. Miss Lilian Clare is a very sweet and pretty May Edwards. Mrs. Charles Daly is altogether admirable as the amusing and loquacious Mrs. Willoughby. As Robert Brierley Mr. Edwin Bennett worthily follows in the footsteps of a long line of Lancashire lads, playing with earnestness, point, and feeling. Mr. Benson North is capital as Jim Dalton, the final struggle between these two in the churchyard is well worked up, and rouses the audience to enthusiasm. A very good account of Hawkshaw, the detective, is supplied by Mr. Edwin Fergusson, calm, incisive, and forcible as the character requires. Mr. Charles Daly is excellent as Melter Moss, not too aggressively Hebraic, but quite Hebraic enough. Mr. Edmond Sydney is quietly impressive as Mr. Gibson; and Henry Rivers makes the most of his opportunities as Maltby. The sketch is admirably staged, the scenery adequate, and the dressing irreproachable. Miss Peach has secured an attraction that should stand her in good stead for many a day to come.

Energy in Rhondda Valley.

The extraordinary success of rink hockey in the Rhondda Valley is undoubtedly due to Messrs. Rollinson, of the Porth Rink, who nearly every night at their place have a match between local talent. On Friday last Porth played Pontypridd. Result, 1 goal to nil. On Saturday, Porth v. Ton-y-Pandy. Porth, 2 goals; Ton-y-Pandy, 1. On Wednesday they met a local team of shop assistants, resulting in a drawn game. Another fancy dress carnival is promised in a few weeks' time.

Glaciarium Rink Reopened.

The Glaciarium Roller Skating Rink, Lord-street, Southport, was reopened last week. A delightful transformation has been brought about in the appearance of the rink. Several important additions have been made, and the improvement in the arrangement and furnishing of the café is one that is bound to be very greatly appreciated. Another important aspect of the work is the erection of a new band stand and large sounding board. The floor-manager is from the London Olympia, and the assistant-manager is from the Middlesbrough Rink—one of the largest rinks in the provinces.

Alec Payne at Tunstall.

Inter-Club Racing at Wandsworth.

On Wednesday last the Wandsworth R.S.C. entertained the Catford R.S.C. at the Central Hall Rink, Wandsworth. Two events took place, viz., a relay race (sixteen laps) and a one mile scratch race. Wandsworth won the relay race by a lap. Time, 4min. 20 2-5sec. The teams were: Catford, Messrs. W. J. Pace, H. A. Lock, C. Harrington, and G. Masters; Wandsworth, Messrs. J. F. Lunn (capt.), H. A. Sutton, H. L. Collins, and F. Speaight. The mile scratch race was very closely contested. Each club was represented by four men. J. F. Lunn, of the W.R.S.C., won by a quarter of a lap; inches separated second, third, and fourth. Time, 3min. 58 2-5sec.

Wyman at Yeovil.

A great attraction for roller skaters has been provided at the Yeovil Skating Rink this week, Wyman, the acrobatic and trick roller skater, appearing and giving excellent performances. Wyman performed many difficult evolutions whilst skating, such as undressing, passing a hoop over his body and skating through a number of bottles arranged in a square. His most daring feat, however, was turning a somersault over a couple of chairs, which drew forth loud applause.

Lava S.C. Guests of Wandsworth.

To-night (Saturday) the Wandsworth R.S.C. entertain the Lava Speed Club. Some good racing is anticipated.

TO THE COLLECTORS.

There are still a few cards which have not been sent in. As the financial year of the Music Hall Home ends on April 30, the hon. treasurer, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, will be glad if these cards can be sent in to be announced in the next issue of The Era.

Popular Potteries Manager.

Mr. Temperley, the manager of the Station-road rink, Tunstall, took up his appointment there in December last, coming from Sheffield, where he had been assistant manager of the Empire Rink Co., Ltd., who own one of the finest rinks in Sheffield. Mr. Temperley was accorded a very big benefit last week. This gentleman is keenly interested in rink hockey, and at one time was a member of the Ferns Park Club, Bolton, which had a very successful career. He was a vice-chairman of the club, and was instrumental in forming the Northern Union Hockey Association, and expresses a wish that such an association could be formed in North Staffordshire, much to the advantage of all clubs in arranging fixtures providing reliable referees, &c. One can only expect, therefore that Mr. Temperley would promote a hockey team at Tunstall. As a matter of fact, he has both a gentlemen's and a ladies' team. The ladies' club is the first of its kind in the Potteries. Under Mr. Temperley's careful and judicious management the Station-road rink has been doing good business.

Baby Swallowed a Threepenny Bit.

Kilburn's New Picture Theatre.

Princess Marie Louise of Bourbon (Duchess of Seville) opened the Kilburn Electric Empire, a cinematograph theatre, on Wednesday last. In a charming speech she said:—"It is not many years since the privilege of seeing the world was only possible to the extremely wealthy, but to-day, owing to this marvellous invention, the most beautiful scenery of the world can be admired for a few pence. The directors are to be congratulated on the pretty and comfortable theatre they have erected, and I feel sure that the residents of Kilburn will reward them for their enterprise by according their hearty support." The chief item in the afternoon's programme was the playing by Miss Jamotha of a piece called Humoresque Sevigliana, composed by herself, and dedicated to the Princess, and, as an encore, a Chopin nocturne. Before the close of the entertainment a collection was made on behalf of St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington.

SPECIAL NOTE.—NO DEPUTIES WILL BE ACCEPTED AT REHEARSALS.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our Districts Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

TOURS COMMITTEE.—LLEWELLYN JOHNS and DISTRICT MANAGERS.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists and Agents wishing to submit TRIALS for their Acts in the North, should apply to the Manager, as Matinées are held every Wednesday for that purpose.

N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill matter, blocks, pictorials, &c, for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—His Majesty's Theatre.—Proprietors, Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Mr. Courtice Pounds and a good all-round company, vocally and histrionically, occupy the local boards this week with the entertaining musical piece The Merry Peasant. Needless to say, Mr. Pounds is a host in himself, and is admirably backed up by, amongst others, Mr. Ernest Langford, Mr. Percy Carr, Mr. Sidney Johnstone, Mr. Frank Wilson, Miss Gwladys Gay, Miss Madge Vincent, Miss Tina Martini, and Little Mary Glynne.

Palace Theatre. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Percy H. Gallagher. —Lady Mansel and her clever little band of burlesquers and vocalists make a most attractive turn this week. The brightness, intelligence, and vivacity of the talented youngsters is really wonderful. Others who help to keep the ball a-rolling are Ferguson and Mack, diverting droils; Arthur Aiston, a most capable comedian; Arthur Kenny, a daring trick cyclist; the Haverleys, American picture entertainers; Lavelle Brothers, acrobatic comedians; Oliver Martyn, with a racing monologue; and a very funny sketch, The Barmaids, by Hodgson, Lowther, and company.

ACCRINGTON. — Prince's Theatre. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Messrs. F. Marriott Watson and James Ussher's company, in the sensational drama The Face at the Window, opened here on Monday. Mr. T. W. Dunscombe makes a good impression as Paul Gouffet; Mr. Arthur Chrisholm is a vigorous Lucian Cortier; Mr. Alfred Warner an excellent Henry De Brisson; Mr. W. Haughton Macaulay's assumption of the villainous Lucio Delgado is strong and effective; and Mr. Jas. W. Chippendale as the mad doctor, Le Blanc, plays with sound judgment; Mr. John A. Stimson is to be commended for a mirth-provoking portrayal of Peter Pottleberry; Miss Clare O'Sullivan is a charming Marie De Brisson; Miss Nita Imeson a winsome and captivating Babette; and Miss Constance Glenabyn is all that can be desired as La Pinau.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The Royal Tokio Troupe of Japanese equilibrists present an interesting turn; the Eight College Girls have a refined musical and dancing scena; the Ted Moxon Trio, acrobatic eccentrics, have a fine reception; and Kenneth and Kane, in their comedy skit, appear to advantage. Tony Black, Scottish comedian and dancer, gives an enjoyable turn; F. S. Howard proves himself a smart entertainer; and Lena Leslie, a dainty comedienne. George Lennard is an acceptable light comedian, and the Bio. projects the latest pictures.

ALDERSHOT.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—Musical comedy is forming a change, which is proving acceptable here this week, The Girls of Gottenberg as played by Messrs. Wray and Austin Hurgon's company being appreciated by full houses. Mr. Phil Smith is a comedian of a most versatile order, and as Max Moddelkoff makes the most of the opportunities afforded; Miss Hilda Vining gives a talented portrayal of the innkeeper's daughter, her acceptable dances and vivacious manner placing her among the chief favourites; Miss Nan Stuart has a charmingly chic style of acting, which causes her part of Elsa to stand out prominently; Miss Nellie Lauraine gives a capital conception of the Burgomaster's daughter in search of a husband, her comedy with Mr. Phil Smith being especially good; Mr. Murray Moore gives a clever impersonation of Prince Otto, his singing and acting being all that could be desired; Mr. Charles Berkeley gives a brisk and highly-acceptable enactment of Britti Botti; and Mr. Harry Clarke as Albrech also does well. Mr. Ralph Forster as the Burgomaster, Mr. Geo. Robertson (Adolph), Mr. James Cook (Policeman), Mr. Lionel Yaldwyn (General), and Mr. Albert Wallace (Waiter), who, with Miss Molly Cleary, contributes special dances, are well placed. A well-trained chorus is provided.

Wide-World Pictures.—Messrs. J. Golder and Bert Sloman.—A patriotic military picture, which tells of the heroism of English soldiers on active service, is named A Dash for Help. Other pictures of dramatic interest include The Coiners.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE. — Theatre Royal.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company is here presenting Arthur Shirley's moral play dealing with the white slave horror, Her Life in London. The leading male figure in the story is the Rev. Allen Gordon, a young clergyman, played with great force and fervour by Mr. Stanley Carlton; Mr. Claude Aymond finds in the character of Gratton Gale, a blind burglar, a personality which appeals to his dramatic instincts; the study of Collini, the keeper of a gambling den, by Mr. Jno. Croudace is a finished piece of delineative work; Miss Rubie Maude as Austra Bell, an orphan in London, excites sympathy and pity; a woman detective is an interesting personality in a play, and Miss Constance Medwyn as Madge Rendell shows her qualifications for the embodiment of such a strong-minded woman; Miss Evelyn M. Walton gives a well-studied conception of an evil-minded female; for humour we have to turn to Mr. W. Vernon as Plunker, and to Miss R. B. Douglas as Dolly, the lady typist, who gives some acceptable songs.

Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem. —This week's bill is the drama The Sin of Her Childhood, by Mr. J. Campbell. The author's company has been well chosen. Mr. Guy Hastings cleverly sustains the lead as the Rev. Alan Grey; an admirable impersonation is that of Captain John Thornton by Mr. Frank Liston; Mr. Cecil Mannering capably enacts the part of Stephen Haysel; Mr. Hugh Brady is a good-hearted Irishman; Miss Maud Warburton as Mary Haysel by her graceful manner commends herself as the sinner; she is earnest and capable; Miss Clara Santley as Maria Haysel is a victim to the drink habit, and Miss Santley's interpretation makes the character sufficiently detestable; Miss Polly Denville is amusing as Lizzie Muggins, a servant, and Miss Lissa Young is precocious as Hannah Spry, a reformatory child; and little Gladys Brittain is a favourite exponent of the child Eric.

Oddfellows' Hall.—Lessees, the Ashton Entertainments Syndicate; Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Marks.—The cinematograph portion of the week's programme at the Hall is comparable to the usual high standard Mr. Marks has set up. The vaudeville artist for the week is Mr. Jack E. Roscoe, a comic singing comedian, who takes well.

The Picturedrome.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Leckie.—There are pictures shown here this week which are really exciting to the ordinary visitor. For example, The Skipper's Yarn is thrilling in its details, and traces a murderer with unerring zeal, and finally brings him to justice. The new artist is Mr. Philip Ellis, a good baritone vocalist. "The Lifeboat" and "The Game of Life" are well sung.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manageress, Miss Ethel J. Hope.—The Cup-Tie Final is the principal film presented here this week. Other subjects include The Cardinal's Conspiracy, Redwing's Gratitude, In Little Italy, The Subterfuge, and The Two Artists. Comedy is represented by Baiting the Bobby, Escaping the Snapshotters, and Calino Goes Shopping. Mr. J. Cooper Price, in new songs, and Mr. Hal Berte, eccentric comedian, give appreciated turns.

Picture Palace.—Lessee, Mr. Matt Raymond; Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward King.—The spirited policy of the management here is responsible for excellent business results. The Cup Final at the Crystal Palace is the leading feature of this week's varied programme, and vaudeville items are supplied by Miss Flo Melville, comedienne, in chorus songs, and Warren and Granville, speciality entertainers.

AYR.—Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—The Tyrant is the attraction here, presented by Miss Marie Dagmar's company. The theatre will close for vacation on Saturday.

BACUP.—Court Theatre and Hippodrome.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Jno. Walters.—Morritt, the illusionist, tops the bill in his mystifying entertainment. He is supported by Mme. Beulah, blindfold phrenologist, who is clever, and the Blind Memory Man. A number of good pictures are shown.

BARNSTAPLE. — Albert Hall.—Proprietors, the Town Council; Manager, Mr. O. J. Nicklin.—Mr. Albert Chevalier appeared here for one night before a large and delighted audience. Mr. Chevalier was supported in an interesting programme by Miss Tresilian Davy and Mr. J. C. Holliday.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone. —Mr. Frank Curzon's company with The King of Cadonia is here. Mr. Johnny Osborne makes a humorous Duke of Alasia; Alexis is played with regal dignity by Mr. J Farren-Foster; Miss Alice Moffat looks charming and sings nicely as Princess Marie; and Militza has a vivacious and clever exponent in Miss Mabel Hirst. Miss Olga Marsden as Stephanie, Miss Florence Lelgarde as Duchess of Alasia, Mr. Edward Thirlby as Bran, Mr. Cecil Tresilian as Laborde, and Mr. Jack Martin as General Bonski are also conspicuously successful.

His Majesty's Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The Scarletcers, under the direction of Mr. Charles Hinchcliff, are still here, and give a complete change of programme.

Tivoli.—Lessee, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Wood.—The following are on the programme here: Minola Hurst and her miniature marvels; Torli, the tenor; Everhart and company, hoop experts; Al and Lal, in a capital sketch; Stuart and Evans, dance and patter artists; Alice Hughes and company, in a humorous sketch; Happy Attwood, Amy Bellwood, and Vernon's Bioscope.

BATH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—The Arcadians is creating a big stir with lovers of musical comedy in Bath. Mr. Gus Oxley, a chief member of Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company, scores a hit for his humorous impersonation of Simplicitas; Mr. Frank Collins is drollery itself as Peter Doody; Miss Marion Edwardes is heard to advantage in the pretty and florid ballads allotted to Sombra; a captivating Eileen Cavanagh is found in Miss Mysie Devine; and a better Mr. Smith than Miss Madge Haines can scarcely be imagined. Miss Katie Yates is a most pleasing Chrysea.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Lily Edwards, comedienne, opens the ball this week in a couple of well-rendered songs, and is followed by the Fitzroys in clever gymnastic feats; Tennis and Laune gain favour in their vocal duets; Crosby and Walker, the jocular Eton boys, live up to their title; and Tina Frank, soubrette, goes well. The two big turns are those of Will Douglas's troupe of Five Jolly Bakers, in their acknowledged comedy Risley act triumph The Bakers' Beano; and Mlle. Dalmere's table circus of performing rabbits, cats, dogs, doves, and rats, as queer a combination of small animals as one is likely to witness.

BATLEY.—Theatre.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Whitty; Manager, Mr. Alfred A. Taylor.—A variety bill is headed by the famous Consul, the almost man, and his performance has caused a sensation; Amandus, facial mimic, gives lifelike representations of Lord Beaconsfield, Mr. Gladstone and other famous men; Mr. Fred Neiman gives a pretty entertainment with his ventriloquial minstrels; and Mr. Dan Daly keeps the house laughing with his humorous parodies on several well-known songs; the Almas are wonderfully clever as equilibrists and balancers, whilst Mlle. Rosina gives a charming and novel instrumental act; Miss Ray Randall is a dainty comedienne and dancer; and a number of up-to-date films are shown on the Bioscope.

BEDFORD.—Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—The society comedy, The Best People, is this week being played by Mr. Frank Weathersby's company. Mr. H. Elliott Ball presents an admirable study of Lord Emsworth; the Hon. Gerald Bayle finds an able exponent in Mr. Pennington-Gush; and Mr. Arthur Dennis cleverly portrays Lord Wynlea. Miss Lillian Hallowes imparts grace and distinction to the part of the Hon. Mrs. Bayle, and Miss Irene Lavington gives an amusing rendering of the part of Lady Emsworth.

BELFAST.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. Ernest E. Norris and company opened here on Monday with The Education of Elizabeth. Mr. Norris was decidedly successful as Reggie Hankey; and honours were also achieved by Mr. Royce Milton, who furnished a very clever impersonation of Harry Fairfax. Miss May Norris in the difficult rôle of Elizabeth B'ack was almost unsurpassable; and the part of Blanche Macyntyre was vivaciously sustained by Miss Georgette Thierry, an accomplished actress. Miss Helene Forest played Lucy Middleton with much credit; and Mr. Haro'd Wagner was all that could be desired as Mr. Whitby. Miss Una Erle had little to do as Lily Kerr, but made the most of her opportunities. Other rôles were adequately sustained by Messrs. Wilton Leonard, Hugh Peel, and C. Holt. Prior to the presentation of the comedy, Mr. Harold Wagner appeared with success in character impersonations from Charles Dickens.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—The Outcast of the Family is produced by Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company. Mr. Wybert Clive furnishes a dignified impersonation of Sir Henry Thorne; and the rôle of his son Harry Thorne is done full justice to by Mr. S. Leigh-Courtney. Miss Elsie Shelton, a good emotional actress, wins the sympathies of the audience with her pathetic impersonation of Ruth; and Miss Maud Leslie Cudd furnishes a powerful impersonation of Grace Redburn. The iniquities of Richard Martin are luridly portrayed by Mr. Bert Oates; and it would be difficult to equal Mr. Herbert Bentone's fine impersonation of the blacksmith, Stephen Barry. Humour is infused into the piece by Miss Freda Beckett and Mr. Tom Armitage, very funny in their respective rôles of Nancy Bray and Joe Bushell; Mr. Edward W. Cudd appears to advantage in his original part of Abram Waster; and other rôles are sustained by Little Arthur and Messrs. H. Reed, M. Platting, N. Horton, T. Carruthers, and E. Melville.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs. —The leading attraction is the Banzai Troupe of Japanese entertainers, whose extraordinary performance has been enthusiastically received; Herbert Darnley and company appear with success in The Brigands of Tarragona, a most attractive musical comedy; and the Three Laurels, in their speciality act, gain universal favour. Mr. Fred Spencer is a really clever comedian; and Miss Dolly Golden is aptly described as a charming and refined dancer. Mr. Fred Lyndo is a funny comique; and Hammon and Wyatt, the original Australian Sandow Girls, furnish a novel performance. Also here are Benson and Rose, in their musical duologue, and the Hipposcope.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. C. Laidler.—The top of the bill is occupied by Frank and Jen Latona, whose comedy has been accorded a hearty reception. The Elite Harmony Boys in their vocal act are an acquisition to the bill; and Miss Adele Levey furnishes an enjoyable entertainment with her recitations. Mr. Billy Hobbs is a capital negro comedian; and Ryan and Hall are first-class acrobats, while their comic wrestling creates roars of laughter. Miss Lilian Trevellie is a capable ballad vocalist; and Miss Maudie Frances, juvenile comedienne, may be assured of a successful future. Also here are Mr. Sam Dalton, vocal comedian, and the Bioscope.

New Alhambra Theatre.—General Manager, Mr. Will White.—Interesting pictures exhibited here include The English Cup Final. The vaudeville element is sustained by Farrell and Dunn, clever Scotch comedians, and Friscary, hat manipulator, who is very popular.

St. George's Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Capital films include The Conspiracy, Cleopatra, The English Cup Final, and The Mad Chemist. Squire Ashcroft, an accomplished male soprano, appears with unqualified success.

BILSTON.—Royal and Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. Edwin G. Jazon; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. J. Tunstall.—Mlle. Hengleur, with her troupe of performing dogs, forms the chief attraction. The songs sung by Miss Eva Ward are well appreciated. Mr. Ryder Davis also proves a decided success. The Hippograph pictures include For the Flag, A Street Waif's Christmas, and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

BIRKENHEAD.—New Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Herbert M. King.—The Birkenhead Dramatic Society are appearing here for a week in Mr. Alfred Sutro's play, The Walls of Jericho. A commendable performance includes a clever rendering of Lady Alethea Frobisher, by Miss Therese Jackson.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Keating.—That popular artist Miss Kate Carney is on a welcome return visit and with the assistance of her capable company presents her humorous sketch, The Fun of the Fair with excellent results. Les Marsumas, in their comedy cycle entertainment, are a centre of attraction, and Miss Nellie Coleman, the lady comedian, is renewing previous triumphs. A liberal and enjoyable programme is also strengthened by the efforts of Mr. Edward E. Ford (the Australian Sundowner), Miss Ethel Newman, in a comedy monologue entitled Her Wedding Day, Pueblo and Cropp (American variety artists), Mr. Josh Dixon (comedian and dancer), Geeta and Hoe, in a pot-pourri act, and Brown's Royal Bio.

Hippodrome.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—Miss Hilda Beverley's company in A Destroyer of Men attracts crowded houses twice nightly.

BIRMINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davies; General-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Always a big favourite here, Mr. Martin Harvey is attracting crowded audiences. He has an interesting répertoire, including Richard III., which he played for the first time in Birmingham on Friday. In this and other plays he is ably supported by talented actors and actresses. In The Only Way Mr. Harvey represents the leading character admirably, and Miss N. de Silva is quite at home in her original part, that of Minsi. Other parts are splendidly taken by Mr. Leonard Craske, Mr. Fred Wright, sen., Mr. C. Glenney, Miss Brenda Gibson, and Mr. P. Hewland. On Wednesday and Thursday Mr. Harvey produced The World and His Wife, a convincing story, which was some months ago played here under the title of Scandal. The piece has been considerably strengthened, and should have a successful future.

Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston.—Amsterdam is the title of Mr. John Tiller's spectacular musical comedy, presented here this week by a crowd of pretty girls and exceedingly funny comedians. It is a good mixture of musical comedy and pantomime, and it contains elements which are highly amusing and pleasing. The scenery and dresses are arranged on a gorgeous scale, and the individual vocal numbers and choruses are well chosen. Miss Lulu Valli claims chief honours. She makes a charming Evelyn Ann, and sings her attractive songs with her usual vivacity. Mr. Arthur Stigant is very funny as Theodore; Frau Van Stoop is in the capable hands of Mr. T. W. Volt; Mr. Sydney Vincent makes an ideal dramatic landlord; Miss Enid Erroll contributes some delightful dances; and the Twelve Manchester Mites are warmly applauded.

Alexandra.—Proprietor, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—How Girls are Brought to Ruin is the title of a play of great human interest. Mrs. Morton Powell, the authoress, contributes greatly to the success of the piece by her clever acting as Winnie Waters; Miss Isla Garnet Vayne also provides a splendid study as Jessie Burton, a work-girl; Mr. Harry Scott is applauded for a bright impersonation of a sailor, Harry Hailing; and Mr. Edward H. Heanley scores a triumph in the dual role of Philip Edge and Philip Dare. The other members of the company lend able support.

Bordesley.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—A Sister's Sin is a domestic drama full of exciting incidents dealing with gipsy life, and the story appeals effectively to audiences. Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company is a great attraction in the piece. Miss M. Scudamore as Minnie Hastings gives a powerful portrayal; and Mr. Dobson Clyde wins hearty approval for a realistic representation of the exacting part of Harold Raymond; Miss Iza Lyndon plays the character of Redempta with the requisite vigour and pathos; and Miss Cissie St. Elmo is capable as Charzel. Other parts are cleverly sustained by Mr. Harry Lydon, Mr. Ernest Frere, Mr. Sidney Fiennes, Mr. Kingsley Roydan, Mr. J. Russell Bogne, &c.

Metropole.—Proprietor, Mr. Andrew Melville; Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—A strong emotional drama, A Life for a Life, is rousing audiences to a high pitch of interest. The production is in the hands of Mr. Charles H. Lester and company, and the points of the story are brought out in a striking manner. Mr. Lester has appeared successfully on several occasions before Birmingham audiences, and he is as popular as ever as Don Leon Fernandez, alias Josh Harker; Venetta, the baby detective, is an important character, cleverly portrayed by Wee Winnie Warden, a clever juvenile actress, who uses a sweet voice to advantage; Miss Lallah Davis is well chosen as Eulalie.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Manager, Mr. F. Martin Morris.—Shall We Forgive Her? is the title of an engrossing drama teeming with strong situations that are quite to the liking of Aston audiences. The principals have been well chosen, Mr. Ernest Rivarz carrying off honours as Oliver West. He is well partnered by Mrs. Gwendoline Verschoyle; Miss Doris Kelvey as Joanna Lightfoot plays a difficult part with excellent judgment; and other prominent members of the company are Miss Grace Emery, Miss Pollie Marshall, Mr. B. MAKING THE BEST OF MATTERS.

THE NATURAL AND THE ARTIFICIAL.

It may seem strange to assert it, but it is nevertheless true, that if people took as much care of their teeth as they do of other parts of their system they would rarely have to resort to artificial substitutes. Teeth would last sound to extreme old age. Now that we have Odol, however—science's supreme achievement in dentifrices—available for keeping the mouth and teeth healthy and sound, these matters will improve in time, for Odol is the sure preventive of dental decay.

But we have now to deal with things as they are, and it has to be admitted that, chiefly from lack of proper attention, a great many people are compelled to have their dental defects made good by artificial teeth. And this is right and natural. It is a duty. Apart from considerations of appearance, health requires the substitution.

But it should

with Mr. G. Roberts as the hero, David Kingsley. Miss Alice Defoe is pleasing as the heroine, Dora Vane; Miss Marie Rignold is a pathetic Lina Nelson; Mr. C. Mr. Charles Draycott gives a manly interpretation of Richard Burfield; Guy Lowther is forcibly portrayed by Mr. Frank Eaglesfield; Mr. Frank Etheridge makes the most of the part of Lionel Heathcote; and Mr. Theo Balfour (Markham Ferrers) and Mr. Chas. Reyne (Farmer Rayne) fill their rôles creditably. Mrs. Charles Draycott invests the character of Pauline Ferrers with infinite charm and grace; as Nellie Rayne Miss Fay Garnet-Vayne sustains a trying rôle with exceptional ability; Miss Nellie Freeland, as Mam'selle Lucille, Miss Daisy Carlton as Polly Green, and Mr. Will Hook as Tommy Onions acquit themselves well.

Mr. Leslie Holland is a capital Harry Q. Conder; as Earl of Quorn Mr. Sidney Lyndon is distinctly good; and Mr. W. H. Rawlinson is a most amusing Mr. Bulger. Miss Madeline Seymour makes a fine dashing Olga; and Miss Peggy Primrose as Daisy is a success.

Scanlon as Paul Bernstoff, the Russian adventurer, is a success; and the Sam Smiles of Mr. Willie Reid meets with general approval.

Maine as the dumb and blind victims of Steinberg's hate; Miss Blanche gives an emotional rendering of the part of Esther Howard, and Miss Florence Hunt puts the skill of an experienced actress into the part of Naomi Merrick. Miss Winifred Barton is fresh and engaging as Slithers, and Mr. J. R. Tyrrell is quaint and amusing as the little Cockney chauffeur. The scenery, dresses, and general effects are exceptionally good.

NEATH.—PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Brogdon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Noice.—Excellent pictures are presented to good houses. The Sheep with Six Legs shows many dramatic incidents. A pathetic subject is His last Burglary; an exciting love romance is much admired in The Squaw's Revenge. Among the amusing subjects Poorluck's Honeymoon is a very laughable film. A very interesting picture is Sports in the Voges Mountains. Variety turns include Little Doris, child vocalist and buck dancer; The Leonas, in their musical and fencing act; and the Three Behans, comedy and quick-change artists.

NELSON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. C. Horner; Manager, Mr. Parker.—The boards here are occupied by Mr. W. Graham Arthurs' company in the Mockery of Marriage. Mr. Arthurs ably presents Dick Kenyon in the prologue, and subsequently Sir Montague Jephson; Mr. Lowe McKenzie acts with power in the rôle of Seth Pearse; and Mr. S. Barker is an able exponent of Old Pete and Joseph Varham. The hero, Jack Stanley, is sustained by Mr. Fitzroy Wharton, and praise is due to Miss Mabel Liston for a very fine portrayal of Alva Kenyon; Miss C. Middleton makes a charming Rose Verham, and Mr. David Phillips as Toby Wright and Miss Kate Hughes as Mary Ann are good.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Benson.—The bill is headed by the great Pichel Troupe of risley acrobats, who accomplish a number of very clever feats. Mr. Howel Webb and company give an interesting sketch entitled The Galley Slave; and among other good turns are Tom Hayton's Six Manchester Lads, vocalists and dancers, and the Cecilias, instrumentalists. The programme is also contributed to by Little Claude, comedian, mimic, and dancer; Annie Martin, a young girl who possesses a beautiful voice; Violet Desmond, comedienne; and the Martinettes, in an amusing absurdity, introducing "Belivar," the elephant.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jones and Douglass.—The second week of the Moody-Manners Opera Co. has proved even more successful than the first. The operas performed this week include Samson and Delilah, Cavalleria Rusticana, Pagliacci, Il Trovatore, Tannhäuser, The Masked Ball, Faust, and The Bohemian Girl. The staging has been magnificent, and the company, including Mlle. Zelie de Lussan, have one and all scored a great success.

PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, The New Brighton Pier Co.; Secretary, Mr. Campion.—A good vaudeville programme is presented here. Mr. Charles Coverdale, the comedian, scores, and his quips are received with hearty laughter. The Four Scoreys are clever in all they do, and make a good impression. The Nonentities and the Vendetta Bros. complete the bill.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's production of The Arcadians is attracting crowded houses. In the dual rôle of James Smith and Simplicitas Mr. Walter Passmore is in his element, his spontaneous wit and inimitable drollery creating an immense amount of wholesome merriment. Mr. Oliver J. Round plays the part of Peter Doody, the jockey, in a manner which stamps him as one of our quaintest comedians; Mr. Harold E. Pearce as Jack Meadows and Mr. Louis Victor as Bobby put plenty of spirit into their respective rôles, their singing and dancing being especially noteworthy. A more delightful Sombra than Miss Ethel Erskine would be difficult to imagine, her sweet cultured voice being heard to great advantage; and a piquant personation of Eileen Cavanagh is presented by Miss Billie Sinclair. Miss Veronica Brady as Mrs. Smith is a source of merriment. The other characters are well sustained, and the efficient chorus and augmented orchestra is under the capable direction of Mr. Edwin Thornton.

TYNE THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—Much enjoyment was derived from the performance here on Monday of The Servant in the House, by Mr. Henry Miller's company. Manson was played with distinction by Mr. Matthew Boulton, and the Rev. William Smythe had an able exponent in Mr. Walter Gay; Mr. H. Parker's character acting as Robert Smith was responsible for most of the comedy of the piece, and another clever character study was that of Mr. Ernest H. Paterson as the Lord Bishop. Miss Nellie Hodson as the vicar's wife was responsible for some clever acting; Miss Laurie Flockton as Mary was vivacious and charming in her girlish confidences, and Mr. Forrester Harvey made the most of the part of a page-boy.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Rowe; Business-Manager, Mr. E. B. Clark.—Mr. Frank Adair and company, in The Heathen and the Christian, form the attraction. Mr. Frank Adair gives a remarkably powerful study of Li (the Avenger); Mr. Fred Withers plays Lung Hi in excellent style; Mr. G. Shirley enacts Lord Allendale with marked ability; the part of George Beresford (the Missionary) is done ample justice to by Mr. R. Payne, and Mr. G. Turner makes an excellent Admiral Freebold. Miss Louie Adair as Mira Sampson plays throughout with considerable force; and a deeply emotional rendering is given by Miss Stanley Burt of the ill-used May Berresford. Good fun is obtained at the hands of Miss Eva Reid as Becky Febbins.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. P. Wells; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. W. Kilgour.—At the head of a varied bill is Private Potts, in which Mr. Fred Kitchen is a never-ending source of amusement, and packed houses each evening testify to his popularity. As cross-talkers and patterers, Alexandre and Hughes are amongst the best, and their musical business proves most entertaining; the Avolos, in a new acrobatic performance, present marvellous tricks, and another acrobatic turn of more than average merit is that of Johnny Fuller, the "great little cat." A pleasing and interesting item is the song-scena of Sylvia Du Barry; and a clever coster sketch is given by Duncan and Godfrey, entitled Me and 'Er. Then Arthur Woodville, light comedian and dancer, and Bertha Winder, champion lady dancer, contribute turns of excellent character, the Cup Final on the Bioscope completing.

NORTHAMPTON. — TEMPERANCE HALL.—Secretary, Mr. G. Skempton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Lyndon.—The pictures here this week are brought directly up to date with some excellent films. Interesting dramatic subjects are found in A Siberian Tragedy and The Honour of His Family. The comics are also good, especially Weary Willie Finds a Job. Miss Margaret Payne furnishes some excellent vocal items.

NOTTINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—The enthusiastic reception accorded The Woman in the Case is well deserved by Mr. Herbert Sleath's company, and the numerous curtain calls are a tribute to magnificent acting. Miss Violet Vanbrugh graphically portrays the part of Claire Foster; Miss Ellis Jeffreys plays Margaret Rolfe with a tenderness and womanly affection that are truly delightful; Mr. Herbert Sleath invests Julian Rolfe with the true spirit of manliness; Mr. W. F. Grant again proves his great histrionic attainments by an admirably conceived embodiment of the cool and far-seeing lawyer, Thompson; Miss Mary Griffiths makes an amusing Mrs. Hughes; Miss Gwendoline Wren is effective as Louise Mane; Mr. Fred Benton submits a capital interpretation of Louis Klauffsky, and the Jimmy O'Neill of Mr. William Kershaw is also successful. A little piece entitled By Mutual Agreement precedes the play, in which Miss Wren and Messrs. W. F. Grant and W. Kershaw are seen to great advantage.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry J. Crane.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company presents Diana of Dobson's, preceded by a very dramatic curtain-raiser, Out West. Miss Emillie Polini as Diana is a complete success, humour and pathos being equally and adequately portrayed; Miss Eva Leonard Boyne as Kitty Brant and Miss Nannie Hume as Miss Smithers do good work; an excellent Miss Pringle is found in Miss Marie Ault; Miss Hilda Francks is a capable Mrs. Cantelupe; and Mr. A. A. Harris makes a very amusing Sir Jabez. The rôle of Captain Brethertón is carefully played by Mr. Leslie Rea, and the remaining rôles are in the effective hands of Misses Cicely Oates, Winifred Trevor Lowe, and Mary Crewe, and Messrs. R. F. Beach, Leslie Crowther, and T. Pauncefort.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—The dainty and incomparable Vesta Tiley is again charming huge audiences by her delightful rendering of new songs; the Jackley Trio present an expert acrobatic act; the Lyric Quartette make sweet music, and are deservedly rewarded; the vocal contributions of F. V. St. Clair are pleasing; the Royal Delomes dance spiritedly; while Frank and Free make for fun in no uncertain manner. An ingenious comedian is seen in Dion Wade, whose eccentric method calls forth unrestrained laughter. Bioscope pictures of the Cup Final are also shown.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—The Six Brothers Luck in their new sketch, H.M.S. Perhaps, cause considerable mirth; La Belle Nello is an expert acrobat; Rita and Roma are vaudeville artists of the first class; Miss Florence Smithers and company, in a humorous sketch, are delightfully funny; the Maie Trio as acrobats and wire walkers have very little to learn; Ralph and Nellie Howard, in Military Mad, are as attractive as ever; Charles Stevens, with new songs, elicits applause; as a Dame comedian Michael Madden does extremely well; Queenie King has a dainty appearance and is a good dancer, and a very enjoyable programme is completed by some amusing pictures on the bioscope.

The popular French Actress, Madame Réjane, when visiting the babies of all nations at the Virol Eastern Nursery, evinced the keenest interest in the splendid specimens of babyhood. She nursed a number of the children, and before leaving made the above inscription in the Visitors' Book.

VIROL works wonders on delicate, small, or backward children; it builds the tissues of the body and forms firm flesh and lusty limbs. Virol has been given to many babies who have failed to thrive on ordinary diet, and a marked improvement has been visible almost at once, whilst many a baby whose life has at one time been despaired of has grown strong and vigorous when given Virol.

Marchese d'Obigny ..... Signor Sandrini

The grand season of Royal opera opened on Saturday night at Covent Garden with a performance of Verdi's La Traviata, in the presence of a brilliant house. Although, no doubt, it was a great disappointment that, owing to a severe cold, the superb artist, Mme. Tetrazzini, was unable to sing, yet the welcome reappearance of Mme. Donalda, who at very short notice undertook the rôle of the consumptive heroine, did much to console opera-goers for the absence of the great prima donna. If in the first act Mme. Donalda seemed somewhat timid she quickly recovered, and sang throughout the second act in the scene with the elder Germont and Alfredo with all her wonted charm and purity of tone. "Ah! fors e lui" was given with marked expression and beautiful vocalisation; while her pathetic acting and singing in the death scene of the last act proved how welcome Mme. Donalda's name will be in the cast of distinguished artists at Covent Garden this season. Mr. John McCormack sang the music of Alfredo with more freedom than on any former occasion, and his voice seemed to have gained in power. As Giorgio Germont that fine artist, Signor Sammarco, sang the charming music of the part with splendid effect. The characters of Flora Bervoix and Annina were cleverly undertaken by Mlle. Egener and Mme. Bérat; while Signor Sampieri, M. Morin, Mr. D'Oisly, and Signor Sandrini ably filled the smaller parts of Barone Duphol, Dottore Grenvil, and Marchese d'Obigny. The National Anthem was played before the opera commenced, and Signor Campanini, the conductor, who had a most hearty reception, secured a satisfactory performance of the familiar old opera.

Loge ..... Herr Sembach
Alberich ..... Herr Zador
Mime ..... Herr Bechstein
Fasolt ..... Herr Schlembach
Fafner ..... Herr Fonss

Das Rheingold, the first performance of the two cycles of the Ring in German, was given at Covent Garden on Monday night under Dr. Hans Richter, and attracted a large audience. With the exception of some English performances which aroused considerable interest, and were directed by the same eminent conductor, Der Ring des Nebelungen has not been heard in German since the summer season of 1908. Great hopes were entertained during the English representations; but, in spite of some admirable singing by native artists, and the utmost pains taken by Dr. Richter, the project failed somehow to attract the musical public. One excellent result of the English version has been to give more knowledge of the great music drama to many who witnessed the fine performance of Das Rheingold on Monday night. Herr Van Rooy, as on many former occasions, made a most dignified Wotan, and the music of the part was powerfully sung. Herr Rooy's great experience gave conviction and importance to his acting, particularly noticeable in the scene where Wotan demands the gold from Alberich. Mme. Kirkby Lunn again sang the music of Fricka with delightful purity of tone and expression, for Mme. Lunn's impersonation of this character has never been surpassed. Mme. Edna Thornton also repeated her former successes, and sang charmingly as Erda. Other native artists—Mr. Russell, Miss Edith Evans, and Miss Elizabeth Amsden—greatly distinguished themselves in the parts of Froh, Freia, and Woglinde. Herr Zador was again excellent as the ungainly Alberich, who steals the gold; and a newcomer, Herr Sembach, created a most favourable impression by his capital acting as Loge. Herr Bechstein's quaint performance of Mime has always been admired; while Mme. Knupfer-Egli was very successful as Wellgunde. The two giants, Fasolt and Fafner, were undertaken by Herr Schlembach and Herr Fonss, the latter being vocally by far the more effective; and the part of Donner was ably filled by Herr Schutzendorf. The rich tone and fine performance of the orchestral portions under Dr. Richter were, of course, one of the chief features, and the distinguished conductor had a most enthusiastic greeting.

Tuesday, April 26, at 5, in Three Acts (in German), by Richard Wagner.

"DIE WALKURE.

Siegmund ..... Herr Sembach
Wotan ..... Herr Van Rooy
Hunding ..... Herr Fonss
Brünnhilde ..... Mme. Saltzmann-Stevens
Sieglinde ..... Mme. Kurt
Fricka ..... Mme. Kirkby Lunn
Gerhilde ..... Miss Baxter

Conductor ..... Dr. Hans Richter

Die Walküre, the popular and by many considered the most dramatic and powerful of all sections of the Ring, was performed before a large house at Covent Garden on Tuesday evening. Our trying climate in early spring plays havoc with operatic vocalists, and Herr Sembach, who achieved such success as Loge in Das Rheingold on Monday night, was evidently suffering from a cold. Apart from this Herr Sembach increased the good impression he has already made by his clever acting and the buoyant youthful spirit in which he played the young hero Siegmund. Another victim to the weather was Mme. Saltzmann-Stevens, who, it will be remembered, gave so excellent a performance of Brünnhilde in the English version of the Ring. Fortunately, Herr Van Rooy's fine voice was in even better conditon than on Monday, and his noble impersonation of Wotan was a tower of strength to the representation; indeed, it may be a question if Herr Rooy has ever given us anything finer than his majestic acting and singing in the scene with Brünnhilde in the second act. A new Sieglinde was forthcoming on Tuesday night in the person of Mme. Kurt, who greatly pleased the audience by her graceful bearing, good voice, and artistic singing, although the great duet in the first act missed some of its charm by Herr Sembach's loss of voice. The influence of our English artists was plainly shown by the fact that on Tuesday night the music of Die Walküre was sung and not declaimed. Mme. Kirkby Lunn as Fricka sang admirably, and Mme. Saltzmann-Stevens, in spite of being out of voice, made a handsome Brünnhilde and acted with distinction. The Hunding of Herr Fönss, although not particularly fierce or uncouth, was in many respects excellent. Among several talented native artists in the cast Miss Baxter and Miss Edith Evans rendered good service in the parts of Gerhilde and Ortlinde, while there was much to admire in Mme. Edna Thornton's Waltraute. The scenic effects were well up to the Covent Garden high standard, and it was a great musical joy to hear the splendid orchestra, so perfectly conducted by Dr. Richter.

His Majesty the King and their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Edward and Prince Albert of Wales, and Prince Arthur of Connaught, and a large and fashionable audience were present at Covent Garden on Wednesday night, when Mme. Tetrazzini made her first appearance this season in Verdi's opera Rigoletto. A tenor new to Covent Garden, Signor Rostowsky, a Russian artist, sang the Duke's music with distinct success, and created a most favourable impression. Signor Rostowsky's voice is pure and very pleasing in quality, and his method so Italian in style that his Russian origin seemed strange. The new tenor's best efforts were in the love duet with Gilda and the fine solo of the third act. Signor Rostowsky acted with grace, and if he occasionally took some liberties with the time, as in the popular solo of the last scene, he will be a very welcome addition to the list of tenors this season. Signor Sammarco's Jester has always been greatly esteemed, and he sang and acted most artistically on Wednesday night, and was attired in one of the handsomest and most picturesque costumes ever seen in the part. Gilda is one of Mme. Tetrazzini's finest impersonations, and she sang superbly. Of course, "Caro Nome," with the wonderful high E, was received with a storm of applause, but it was a pity some of the great singer's admirers could not restrain their enthusiasm until the conclusion of the famous air. In the third act, from the first entrance of Gilda until the curtain fell, the audience seemed spellbound by Mme. Tetrazzini's dramatic power; every note in her beautiful voice was instinct with human feeling and pathos. The portrayal also of Gilda's evident confusion at being discovered in such a costume—or rather lack of costume—before the courtiers, was a happy touch of realism. Mme. Tetrazzini in this scene has never been equalled, and when she was called before the curtain with Signor Sammarco the house rang with cheers and applause. Mme. Edna Thornton was an excellent Maddalena, and the quartet in the last act went finely. For the rest of the cast, Mr. Murray Davey sang admirably as Sparafucile, and Signors Zucchi and Sandrini acted well in the parts of Borsa and Conte di Ceprano. Mme. Bérat appeared as Giovanna, and Mlle. Egener as the Contessa di Ceprano. The male chorus sang capitally, while Signor Campanini conducted with care and attention.

LITTLE CONSTANCE MONTAGUE.

One of the delightful items of the programme presented at the Playhouse last Sunday, on the occasion of the Playgoers' Club Ladies' Concert, was the marvellous dancing of a little girl, by name Constance Montague.

This little lady, we are informed, made her first appearance before the public on that occasion, and received an ovation that many an adult artist might be proud of as her reward for dancing the solo from Coppelia. Miss Constance's movements were perfect in detail, and in so young a child—she celebrated her sixth birthday on Nov. 15 last—showed an intuitive love for the beautiful art so representative of Genée.

Miss Montague was recalled time after time, and then danced a minuet with another little girl, Miss Dora Grover. Both these very young ladies are pupils of Mme. Cora Katti Lanner. Miss Constance, it is interesting to learn, is the niece of Edward Draper, well known within the portals of the Savage Club, and she is being thoroughly trained for the stage. She has done little more than six months' serious work as yet, but if the next six years are as productive as the same number of months have been, then a very great star will shed its lustre on the next generation of theatre frequenters.

PLAYGOERS' CLUB CONCERT.

Mr. Cyril Maude kindly lent the Playhouse to the Playgoers' Club for their ladies' concert last Sunday, and a very enjoyable entertainment was given. That always delightful artist Miss Decima Moore contributed her clever musical monologue "The Waltz Quadrille" with complete success, and was warmly applauded; Mr. Harrison Latimer sang the prologue to I Pagliacci in excellent style; Miss Elsie Southgate's violin solo was decidedly well rendered; and Mr. J. H. Barnes's fine voice and grand delivery secured the success of his recitation of "Over the Hill to the Poor-house," and of a very odd and quaint piece by himself entitled "The Mission of Judas." Mr. George Mozart's comicalities and electric picture history, "The Thief," proved excessively diverting; and Little Miss Constance Montague, a surprisingly clever juvenile, and a pupil of Miss Cora Lanner, danced a pretty pas seul, and won warm plaudits. Miss Ada Colley showed her surprising range of voice in "The Song of the Skylark"; Miss Florence Venning pleased greatly by her rendering of "Just You and I"; Miss Ruby Wilson won an encore for "Over the Garden Wall"; Mr. E. Thornley Dodge sketched cleverly in black and white; and others who also contributed to the very agreeable and interesting programme were Miss Viva Birkett, Miss Bessie Bowness, Miss Ruby Wilson, Mr. Mervyn Dene, Mr. H. Scott Russell, Mr. J. W. Tate, and Mr. Harry Thornton, acceptable items being also supplied by Mr. C. Ibbotson, Mr. Alfred Lester, and Mr. Hubert Connorton. Miss Dora Grover, another pupil of Miss Cora Lanner's, danced well, and the London Pavilion Orchestra, ably conducted by Mr. A. Bond Sayers, performed some very pleasing selections.

THEATRE CLUB ENTERTAINMENT

The Theatre Club of 221, Knightsbridge, gave its first dramatic performance on Sunday night. Three one-act plays had been announced, but the translation from the German was omitted, and its place taken by two recitations, "The Patriot" (Robert Browning) and "The Portrait" (Owen Meredith), which were given with excellent effect by Mr. Charles Bruce-Winston. A most agreeable item of the evening's entertainment was the piece, in one act, founded by Ella Erskine on a French play, entitled

"THE WHITE HAIR."

Sir Frank Chettle, Bart. ..... Mr. Philip Knox
Cecily ..... Miss Ella Erskine
Louison ..... Mrs. Moyle O'Connor

The White Hair, which was favourably noticed by us on its production at the Hyde Park Hotel some two years since, is a pretty trifle, founded on a French play, dealing with much originality with the old story of connubial misunderstanding and eventual reconciliation. The misunderstanding has been of eight years' duration, and the wife has determined to "have it out" with her husband on the day that she sees his first white hair. They are both such charming people that it really seems a great pity that she should have waited so long, and one can only hope that there will be less obstinacy and a little more mutual forbearance in the future. The husband with the one white hair—as he is in his forty-first year he should consider himself lucky that there is only one—was played at the beginning with gay insouciance, and later with deep but restrained feeling by Mr. Philip Knox. The wife, Cecily, was acted with much charm by the talented authoress of the play, Miss Ella Erskine, who was flippant and serious, angry and tender, a very "April's lady" of tears and smiles, each in its turn. She made an excellent impression by her bright and clever acting.

The second play presented on Sunday night was by Mr. Alfred Fahey, entitled

"A POET IN PURGATORY."

Oliver Goldsmith ..... Mr. Arthur Curtis
Samuel Johnson ..... Mr. Arthur Machen
Squeeze ..... Mr. Arthur Chesney
Slang ..... Mr. Patrick Curwen
Mrs. Elizabeth Fleming ..... Mrs. Calhaem
Miss Mary Horneck ..... Miss Ella Erskine

The piece dealt with an episode in the life of Oliver Goldsmith in the dark days of the poet, when he was living in squalid poverty, deep in his landlady's debt. To him comes the woman who loved him, Mary Horneck, the "Jessamy Bride," and finds him drinking and hob-nobbing with a couple of bailiff's men. Her chief desire is to be of help to him; and that she may have the right to do so, she tells him of her love for him. But he turns from her in shame; and it needs the timely arrival of the great Dr. Johnson to set matters right. Oliver Goldsmith is at first roundly scolded by the "Big Man," who then makes him an offer to get his new book, "The Vicar of Wakefield," published for him, and finds a publisher in the "Jessamy Bride." Oliver is deeply touched, and assures her of his heartfelt esteem.

Miss Ella Erskine again distinguished herself as Mary Horneck, a part which she played with great charm and simplicity, clad in a delightfully pretty gown of the period. Mr. Arthur Machen made Dr. Johnson an impressive and dignified figure; Mr. Arthur Curtis brought out the "artistic temperament" of the poet to the full; and Mr. Arthur Chesney and Mr. Patrick Curwen played the two bailiff's men on the good old rollicking lines. Mrs. Calhaem gave a finished and characteristic performance as a frowsy landlady.

"THE HOUSE DIVIDED."

Play, in Four Acts, by Mrs. C. Campbell Wardrop, Produced at the Balfour Institute, Liverpool, on Saturday, April 23.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Last year this authoress gave us The Indiscretion of Elizabeth, which found much favour, and her latest attempt at playwriting possesses even greater merits. The House Divided certainly has the common fault of over-abundance of episodes and side issues, which somewhat blur the central line of thought, but with some of these removed there should remain all the elements of a good sound play. Briefly, the story is that of Robert Tranmer, a young politician, believing his first wife to be dead, marrying the aristocratic Lady Beatrice. Soon afterwards, however, he is disturbed by the intelligence that the former spouse is alive, and an actress, using the name of Helen Varrincourt, and she, learning of his well-to-do position, commences a system of blackmail, he foolishly giving her, as a first instalment, £1,000. The brother-in-law of Tranmer, Herbert Challoner, who is Duke of Burlington, has become infatuated with the actress, and, after spending on her all the money he has, forges a cheque, which is held by Sir Digby. In order to save her brother Lady Beatrice visits Sir Digby and pleads for the return of the document, when she is discovered by her husband, he in turn being surprised by his first wife, who discloses their relationship. This entanglement is unravelled in a following act by the accidental death of Helen, and satisfactory explanations.

The amateurs engaged are to be complimented upon their work. Mr. Henry Harding showed talent as the awkwardly-placed Tranmer; Miss Kinson afforded satisfaction with her Lady Beatrice; Mr. Harry Astley was excellent in the rôle of the Yankee rich man, his voice and style suiting the character; Mr. Robert E. Evans thoroughly grasped the part of the spendthrift Challoner; Sir Digby was carefully undertaken by Mr. Hugh Wills; and Miss M. A. Ford proved particularly effective as the unrelenting first wife, Helen Varrincourt. The smaller parts were carefully handled.

MRS. J. W. BRAITHWAITE.

Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite, who has been achieving success as Anna in Mr. George D. Day's company The Prodigal Son, commenced her stage career by portraying Tommy Cranberry in Fun on the Bristol at a moment's notice, and was retained in the rôle till the end of the tour. She next played Bella (the black girl) in the same production, and after that came Chambermaids in a round of stock. Her remarkable likeness to the late Queen Victoria brought her into prominence in the Diamond Jubilee year, 1897, when she appeared as Her Majesty in the pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne. "The opening night of the pantomime," says Mrs. Braithwaite, "is one that will live in my memory for ever, for when I appeared seated on the throne, there was dead silence for a moment, then, when the audience had recovered their breath, cheer after cheer filled the house, and they arose en masse to sing the National Anthem." Mr. Robert Arthur, under whose management Mrs. Braithwaite was playing, re-engaged her for Nottingham the following year. After that she went to Drury Lane to play in the production of Hearts Are Trumps, and gave her speciality of the Queen in the pantomime at the same house. Spring and autumn tours of Hearts Are Trumps, in which she enacted Mrs. Angerstein, were followed by pantomime at the Grand Theatre, Fulham, and it was during that time that the death of her Majesty occurred. Among some of Mrs. Braithwaite's recent successes are Mrs. Porter in Mr. Cyril Maude's company of Beauty and the Barge, Mrs. Pembury in A Sailor's Sweetheart, Sarah Rigg in Walker, London, Mrs. Pexton in Jane, Mrs. Birket in Betsy, Hannah in Dandy Dick, Aunt Clarissa in Our Boys, Miss Ashford in The Private Secretary, Madam Rouge in Drink with the late Chas. Warner's company, Biddy Mullins in Two Little Vagabonds, Biddy Farren in Shadows of a Great City, Biddy Donohan in The Old Home, Mammy Diable and Mrs. McMahon in Mr. Tom Murray's Our Irish Visitors.

MR. HOWARD L. TRACY.

Originally intended for a medical career, Mr. Howard L. Tracy became a prominent member of an amateur society, which led to his introduction to the theatrical profession some nine years ago. Before many months had elapsed, Mr. Tracy was engaged for a stock season at Edinburgh, playing a varied round of parts in some of the old pieces. Leaving Edinburgh, Mr. Tracy joined the late F. A. Scudamore's company with Because I Love You, for Professor Predate, a part he played for over 400 nights. Two tours with Mr. James Willard, in The Shadow of Night and A Woman of Pleasure, followed, and from this Mr. Tracy was engaged by Mr. Chas. Macdona for the part of Frank Perry in Are You a Mason? which he played for six tours. At the end of this engagement he was secured by Mr. Lionel Rignold for

Engagements with Mr. Neville Graham's sketch The Man in the Street and Mr. Sidney Cotterell's sketch The Substitute, playing the juvenile parts, followed, and then Mr. Lionel Rignold and Miss Ada Blanche re-engaged him for Sidney Clifford in What the Butler Saw. From this he went to Mr. Oswald Brooks for the title-rôle in his revival of The New Housemaid. At the end of the tour Mr. Tracy was engaged by Mr. Harold Smith to play the lead in the new farcical comedy The March Hare. He is repeating former successes in Are You a Mason?

Mr. Editor,—Sir,—You say in Saturday's issue that Sexton Blake is played by Mr. Murray Yorke's company. Kindly correct this statement, as the production belongs to the Syndicate mentioned below, Mr. Yorke being a salaried artist.—Yours faithfully, The Melodrama Production Syndicate, Ltd., 21, John-street, Adelphi, W.C., April 23.

BERLIN, Thursday, April 28.—This is unquestionably the most interesting work the Royal Opera has put upon its boards for a number of years. Its lack of appreciation on the part of the German portion of the audience was due principally to ignorance of the intrinsic character of the work. They judged it as American music alone, and overlooked the fact that the composer has—in the main—merely reproduced in skilful arrangement the ancient melodies of the North American Indians, and that the music was written round genuine Indian legends. Mr. Nevin has, like Mr. McClintock—the collector of the legends from which Randolph Hartley has drawn the text—passed several years among the Blackfoot Indians, in order to study them and their music, even, it is said, perpetuating the melodies by means of a gramophone. The music is very original, in most parts pleasing, and calculated to interest the student and average theatre-goer alike. The book is, as has been said, legendary, and has been translated into German by Fräulein von Hahn, who appears to have done the work commendably. Poia is a prophet who has no honour in his own country; his idealisms are ridiculed by the people, but he loves the pretty Natoya, and that consoles him. She, nevertheless, is wooed by Sumatsi, a warrior bold but wicked, and she has the bad taste to prefer him to Poia, who is marked by a terrible scar across the face. She tells poor Poia that if he returns to her without the disfiguring mark she will listen to him. In despair he goes off to find Natosi, the Sun-God, to beg his help, but the god will have none of him. Poia's bad luck, however, turns when least expected. News comes that Episna, Natosi's son, has been carried away by eagles and is in great danger. In vain the Sun-God tries to call the elements to his aid, and Poia finds his opportunity; he saves the boy and brings him back to his father, who as a reward eliminates the dreadful scar. Full of joy, Poia returns home; he has also a message from the Sun-God to his people—that they shall enjoy in future full protection and forgiveness if they turn from their backsliding to the god again. Natoya receives her lover with open arms, and Sumatsi, who creeps forward to stab Poia in the back, is slain on the spot by a ray of light from the Sun-God, whom we see enthroned in the clouds. The happy lovers, after Poia has delivered his message of peace to the people, go off together to dwell for ever in the brightness of the celestial realms. The mounting of the opera was a difficult task, but the result was very fine. The cast was exemplary. Miss Florence Easton (Mrs. Francis Maclennan) gave an admirable account of Natoya, in which rôle her beautiful voice was heard to full advantage; Fräulein Artôt de Padilla (Episna) was a charming Indian boy, and Herren Kirchhof (Poia), Bischoff, and Griswold were—as were the remaining artists—thoroughly satisfactory. An effective dance of the Four Seasons, by Indian girls, was introduced. The reception of the work was what is known as a mixed one, and the result was the reverse of edifying. The greater portion of the crowded audience consisted of Americans, who were naturally enthusiastic—perhaps a trifle too much so; the Germans, led by wrong impressions, as has been stated, objected to the loud applause and started to hiss, so that a regrettable show of personal feeling ensued, which lasted until the falling of the iron curtain. The composer and author were called times innumerable before the curtain in response to unending applause, and the artists had a well-merited share in the triumph.

"THE SILVER BUTTERFLY."

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Nottingham "Scarecrow" Society has done excellent work the last four years, and their latest production, The Silver Butterfly, bids fair to eclipse all previous efforts. Mr. Bradshaw's plot is simple, but effective. Pedro, a native of Granada, has been outlawed for an offence of which he was innocent. He becomes the head of a band of desperados, and revenges himself by making captures of natives and tourists alike. Act I. finds him at Granada, on the fête day of the Patron Saint, accompanied by his band, disguised as monks. He desecrates the Saint's statue, and in the confusion escapes, only to return and make captors of some of the leading townsmen and a party of English tourists, among whom is a noted entomologist in search of a specimen of the silver butterfly.

Act II. takes place at the brigands' lair. Juanita, who is betrothed to Pedro, makes friends with the daughter of the entomologist, whose fiancée is also among the prisoners, and in procuring their release she also secures a pardon for Pedro. Mr. Page is to be congratulated on his pretty and melodious music, some of the numbers being of exceptional merit.

The rôle of Juanita was undertaken by Miss Edyth Comery, whose vivacious style, both in singing and dancing, was worthy of all praise. The cultured voice of Miss Maud Cooper gave full expression to the music of Betty. Mr. A. C. P. Coggan vocalised pleasantly as Geoffrey; Miss Edith Robey made an engaging Conchita; Mr. Harry Stiebel's assumption of the Professor proved an excellent mirth-provoker; Mr. F. W. Ford gave a spirited portrayal of the bandit chief Pedro, and was ably seconded by Mr. A. T. Dugard as Carlos. The dancing of the Misses Vowles was executed with neatness and finish.

Visitors to the Crystal Palace will see evidence of the enterprise of Mr. Geo. O. Starr, the ever-resourceful manager, for not only has the building been repainted, but the whole of the centre transept has been artistically rearranged, and the many statues of historical and artistic interest renovated and placed to advantage. The whole effect is unique, and should prove of great interest to foreign visitors, for nowhere can such fine statuary be seen.

THE REHEARSAL THEATRE.

On Thursday, at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, were produced, under the direction of Mr. Frank Jackson, three new plays by Beatrice Haden Tebb. Each of them met with a good reception, the author being called at the conclusion of the afternoon's performance. It may be presumed that the productions were first attempts in dramatic authorship, and as such they were not devoid of merit, but none of them showed any special excellence. The weakest of the three plays was the first, which was entitled

"BETTY."

Mr. Varney ..... MR. A. B. TAPPING
George ..... MR. J. COOKE BERESFORD
Betty ..... MISS MAY TAVENER

Mr. Varney is a widower with an only daughter. Although a very humble member of society, he has managed to give her a good education, and, as he puts it, "made a lady of her." But she has, it seems, only been able to obtain an engagement as a dancer at one of the theatres. However, brilliant marriages by pretty young girls who have only held very subordinate positions on the stage are not unknown, and Betty has made a conquest of Sir Arthur Clees, who has promised her marriage. But the girl meets with a frigid reception from the haughty aristocratic mother of the young man, who it appears has just been appointed to a diplomatic post at a foreign Court. Betty decides that the time has come for her to make a choice between her own happiness and the future advancement in his profession of the man she loves. It will never do for him to marry a mere stage girl, the daughter of obscure people, and so on the day that was to have been her wedding-day she breaks off the engagement. Her father believes she is about to be married, and does his best to prepare a wedding breakfast, with the ready assistance of a young fellow named George, who is employed at a neighbouring restaurant. Betty returns home very miserable, and tells her father what has happened. George recognises in her the girl he has met, not knowing she was the daughter of his old friend, and secretly fallen in love with. From words that she lets fall, he guesses that she contemplates suicide, and he not only expresses his sympathy, but gives the unhappy girl some sound advice, at the same time hinting that he, too, is the victim of an unhappy love affair. Betty is evidently touched by his kindness, and diverted from her suicidal purpose, and probably in due course the humble admirer will receive his reward. Mr. A. B. Tapping gave a quietly effective embodiment of Mr. Varney; and Mr. J. Cooke Beresford was natural and earnest in his portrayal of George. Miss May Tavener did her best with the part of the lachrymose Betty.

The second play on the list was entitled

"THE MACHINATIONS OF MARIA."

Dick Heathcote ..... MR. LAWRENCE LEYTON
Muriel Heathcote ..... MISS SCOTT-LAUDER
Sybil Ormrodd ..... MISS NELLIE MORGAN
Maria ..... MISS LOUIE EMERY

The young married couple, Dick Heathcote and his wife Muriel, have fallen upon evil days, and are living in shabby apartments in a working-class neighbourhood. It is only by means of frequent visits to the pawnshop that they are able to pay their way, and having lived for some time on the proceeds of these compulsory transactions with "uncle," they are at last reduced to five shillings. The couple are waited upon by a slavey of the Belinda type. Though dreadfully untidy and grimy of face, Maria has the redeeming quality of a warm, sympathetic heart. But she is certainly rather rude to Sybil Ormrodd who, in the absence of Dick, calls to invite her friend Muriel to accompany her on a drive. At the same time she imparts the good news that her father is in a position to offer Dick a vacant post worth £200 a year. Maria objects to the visitor, believing her to be "stuck up" and slow to assist a friend in need. Sybil accidentally leaves behind her muff, containing her purse in which are £50 in notes and gold. This is found by Maria, who, foolishly acting on the impulse of the moment, places half of the notes and gold in the pocket of a coat belonging to Dick, believing she is doing him a good turn. Muriel on returning home meets her husband, who, having found the money, is under the impression that his wife has borrowed it from her friend. After he has quitted the house Sybil returns and discovers that she has been robbed. Muriel, thinking that Dick must have appropriated the money, takes the blame upon herself. Eventually, however, Maria owns up, and as she acted with the best of motives she is forgiven. Miss Louie Emery played the part of Maria in a broadly humorous style that proved highly effective. Mr. Lawrence Leyton was good as Dick Heathcote, Miss Scott-Lauder did very well as Muriel, and Miss Nellie Morgan was a satisfactory Sybil Ormrodd.

The third and last play was entitled

"MAN'S HERITAGE."

Hal ..... MR. J. COOKE BERESFORD
Jim ..... MISS DELPHINE GIBBS
Warder ..... MR. E. J. CARLIN
Ferguson ..... MR. A. B. TAPPING
Mrs. Ferguson ..... MISS ALICE FARLEIGH

The scene is Mrs. Ferguson's sitting-room, and the time Christmas Eve. The young man visitor, Hal, believes that the lady is a widow living alone with her little boy Jim, for whom he has brought toys as Christmas presents. Mrs. Ferguson receives a message. It is from her husband, a convict, who has escaped from prison. He had been sentenced for life, and she believed that she had seen the last of the man who had brought disgrace and shame upon her. Hal inquires the cause of her agitation, and she tells him her sad story. Her purpose had been to regard her husband as one dead and to save her boy the pain of knowing that his father was a convict. Hal declares that it had been his intention to ask her to marry him. As it is, he endeavours to persuade her to join him. As they are talking she sees a face at the window, but her companion believes she is mistaken. It is no mere fancy, for the convict husband enters and confronts the pair. He attempts to fire a revolver, but is seized by Hal. The convict, however, manages to pull the trigger, and fatally wounds his own son Jim, who, on hearing the disturbance, has rushed in. The convict is horrified on discovering that he has killed his child; but, warned that the prison warders are after him, he disappears. A shot is heard without, and the warder who enters will doubtless find that the man he is pursuing is dead by his own hand. Mr. J. Cooke Beresford deserves praise for his careful embodiment of Hal, and Miss Alice Farleigh was admirable as the supposed widow. Miss Delphine Gibbs was a pleasing representative of the boy Jim; Mr. A. B. Tapping deserves a word of praise for his capital embodiment of the escaped convict; and Mr. E. J. Carlin as the warder completed the cast.

M. GUITRY, who plays the name-part in Chantecler, is guaranteed by contract a minimum of £60,000, and 10 per cent. of the gross receipts. The play has reached its hundredth performance in Paris. For the first few weeks the average evening's receipts at the Porte St. Martin were between £450 and £500. They now average only £320.

PRINCE ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT was in the royal box at Covent Garden on Tuesday night to hear Die Walküre. Prince Francis of Teck was in the stalls, and the Earl and Countess of Portsmouth, the Countess of Plymouth, Lady Phyllis Clive, the Marquis of Ripon, Lady Maude Warrender, Lady Diana Manners, Lady Cory, Lady Carew, Lord Cecil Manners, Lady Marion Wilson, and Countess Fritz Hochberg were also present.

"AN OLD REPROBATE."

Play, in Three Acts, by John Knowles Lund, Produced, for the First Time on any Stage, by the Stretford Amateur Operatic Society, at the Saos Hall, Stretford, on Saturday, April 23.

"Colonel" Harrington .. MR. HENRY WORRALL
Rev. John Truelove ..... MR. F. FOLLOWS
Nathaniel Nelson, Esq. .... MR. R. H. BRANDER
Mr. Grainger ..... MR. L. WILKINSON
Mr. Roberts ..... MR. J. B. DAVIES
Mr. Spedding ..... MR. T. L. LUND
Mr. Fussingham ..... MR. A. B. LUCAS

Miss Esther Nelson ..... MISS H. HOLLANDER
Mrs. Dalby ..... MISS BENT
Mary Burton ..... MISS G. COOPER

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Lund's play, An Old Reprobate, is devoted chiefly to the exploitation of a rather heroic character, who has one besetting weakness—drink. We have seen a similar character, treated on different lines, in Sweet Lavender, and in this case also there is at the end the saving grace of redemption; but there the relationship between Colonel Harrington and Dick Phenyl ends. Harrington never loses dignity nor self-conceit; he is upright and talkative upon his own merits, with a knowledge of subjects on which to write articles that do not particularly come within the range of a soldier's experience. Truth to tell, there is a doubt about the "Colonel's" credentials as a military man, though he looks one, every inch of him; and how he comes to be a derelict contributor to the Willinghampton Weekly Spectator is a further point for consideration. The fact that he is so, however, provides an interesting opening scene in the editorial office of the paper. There we see him "declined" with something less than thanks, for the office wants no more of his work. Pride, anger, dignity, despair serve in their turn to bring out the circumstances and something of the story of the man whom the editor openly scorns. What we eventually know of him is this: for years he has eked out an alcoholic livelihood by means of his pen; he has an adopted son, whom he put out to education for the Church at the cost of great privation, and who now is making his way as the Rev. John Truelove; he has also adopted the daughter, Mary, of his dead friend, Burton, who, in a quiet way, is doing well, after the manner of women; he is particularly abhorred by Nathaniel Nelson, Esq., proprietor of the Weekly Spectator and deacon of a chapel; and the editor, who, for the sake of charity, might publish some of Harrington's work under another name, would have us believe also that the old reprobate is wanted by the police for some crime or other, on the strength of a curious advertisement in a paper which he thrusts under the Colonel's nose. This hint of crime, however, is not altogether unjustified, for Harrington makes a sort of admission; only its nature is not revealed at any point of the play. Presently we are made aware that the Rev. John Truelove is the person selected by old Nelson to fill the place of minister to his chapel, subject to the approval of the deacons; also that there is every possibility, so far as Nelson's desire is concerned, of John marrying the old fellow's daughter, who is also of a rather tractish frame of mind. But Nelson is a self-righteous old tyrant, and will not lend his countenance to the preferment of the young parson unless the latter consents to give up the acquaintanceship of Harrington. Truelove responds as a parson should; besides, he cannot forget the days he and the Colonel spent together in earlier years, playing Crusoe and Co. in their modest room; furthermore, for the audience at least, there is the bond of blood between the two—John Truelove is the son of Harrington. The latter, in despair and guessing further trouble in this contact with the homecoming of his son, sees a way out of it all; and in the next scene he makes a long but pathetic attempt to poison himself. Mary Burton intervenes in the nick of time. Mary is a nice girl, with plenty of affection for the Colonel. She is full of grief and horror; but the coming of John, whom she has long secretly loved, puts a different complexion on affairs. The love-making of the young people, unexpected by Mary, but welcome, is deferred by the appearance of a man who has at last traced the subject of the advertisement referred to by the editor of the Weekly Spectator. Harrington leaves the room with him; while he is out, John and Mary come to an understanding; and when he returns it is to say that the object of the search for him is to acquaint him with the death of a relative who has left him a fortune. A remark of the Colonel's for a moment recalls the similar circumstance of Dorrit in the Marshalsea, but the mood is not developed. The happy party is interrupted by the advent of Esther Nelson with the news that her father has suddenly died. The sequel to all this is, briefly, the reformation of the Colonel, the marriage of John and Mary, John's knowledge of the truth of his parentage, the buying-up by Harrington of the Spectator, and the contrite servility of its editor, and, finally, the recognition by the Colonel of a portrait of himself as—one takes it—he wishes to be remembered, a spruce and temperate gentleman. As a whole, the piece is rather a story than a play, but it is cleverly done in point of dialogue and characterisation, in which real ability is shown. The part of the Old Reprobate was undertaken by Mr. Henry Worrall, who has made some mark on the legitimate stage, and who invested the character with all the essential depth and changes of mood. Especially the Poison scene was well done, the words ringing true, and the actions in keeping with the words. In Nathaniel Nelson the author has provided a very effective character-part, which was quite cleverly handled by Mr. R. H. Brander. As the Editor and Assistant-Editor of the Spectator Messrs. L. Wilkinson and J. B. Davies were efficient and at ease; Miss Bent gave a clever and humorous delineation of Mrs. Dalby, a talkative neighbour of the Colonel's; and as Esther Nelson Miss H. Hollander contributed a sufficiently effective impersonation. The Mary Burton of Miss G. Cooper was a very pleasant and sympathetic piece of work, which added to the human interest of the situation in the second and third acts; and an admirably natural rendering of the Rev. John Truelove was added by Mr. F. Follows, whose style and movement are much above the average, and who was certainly one of the most prominent successes of the evening. The play proved greatly interesting to a large audience, and might prove valuable to the stage if sharpened to a more dramatic point. It shows plenty of ability, and the author was deservedly called at the close. Mr. Henry Worrall was the producer.

"OTTO I., OTTO II., OTTO III." is the unusual title of a new burlesque-farce to be produced at the Thalia Theatre, Berlin, this evening. Jean Kren is the author, assisted by Herr Schoenfeld, the other manager and clever couplet writer. The incidental music is also by Herr Kren.

HERR SIEGFRIED LUTZ, the translator into German of When Knights were Bold, is contemplating the acquisition of another successful English farce, The Naked Truth. In the meantime Die Goldene Ritterzeit is filling the bill at the Neues Theatre nightly, and is to go on tour in Germany when it has run in Berlin a little longer.

A PLEASING innovation has been introduced in connection with the performances of The Islander, the successful musical play at the Apollo, scent or incense being used to perfume the theatre during the second act in order to suggest an Oriental atmosphere.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

DEATH OF BJORNSON.

Pathos and dignity, says the Standard correspondent, alike attended the last hours of Björnstjerne Björnson, who died in Paris on Tuesday. The famous author had been gradually growing weaker ever since last October, and the fleeting improvement of the last few days was one of the frequent precursors of the end. Up till almost the last, however, he continued to work on a "Cantata" in verse which has been set to music by Sinding, and on the language question in Norway, which was a point on which he felt and wrote strongly. Björnson's last article was on this subject; and a few hours before his death he said: "I have written something which ought to be a clou. Quick! Send it to a newspaper! It is in that drawer." When he felt death to be approaching he remarked: "I understand that there is a deep gulf between the thoughts of life and the thoughts of death. I have the impression that the thoughts of death hold fast to religion."

Twice in the course of Monday afternoon the doctors visited him, and Dr. Dubois stated that there was no longer any hope. Björnson's wife and daughter and son-in-law, M. and Mme. Ibsen, were with him when he died.

At Wednesday sitting of the Storthing at Christiania, at which the Ministers were present, the President delivered a speech in which he alluded in eloquent terms to the late M. Björnstjerne Björnson, to whom the House decided to accord a State funeral. The sitting was then adjourned as a sign of mourning. All the theatres were closed in the evening.

King Haakon was the guest on Tuesday evening of the Foreign Minister, but on the arrival of the news of the death of M. Björnson the party immediately broke up. His Majesty has sent the following telegram to Mme. Björnstjerne Björnson:—

"Accept the cordial sympathy of myself and the Queen in the irreparable loss which you, Norway, and we all have suffered."

The Government have telegraphed to Mme. Björnson in Paris an expression of their sympathy, which, they state, is shared by the whole Norwegian nation. The Presidents of both Houses of the Storthing have also expressed their condolences to Mme. Björnson on behalf of the members.

Born in the valley of the Dovrefjeld, at Kvikne, where his father was pastor, in 1832, the first six years of Björnson's life," so we learn from a prefactory note to his play Laboremus, published by Chapman and Hall, "were spent in a district, bleak, bare, surrounded by barren mountains, scarcely populated, and inhabited by a people who could count on but one harvest in five years. When Björnson was six years old his father was moved to Naes, in the valley of the Romsdal, a land of rich variety, full of beautiful scenery and the stir of life, and supporting a people frank, vivacious and capricious. Thus in boyhood was he able to learn and compare. His first essays in literature were songs, which the peasants sang, and by the time that he had devoured the sagas and fairy-tales amidst the scenes of his youth, he 'saw the peasant in the light of the sagas, and the sagas in the light of the peasant.' He revivified the saga style, and in Synnöve Solbakken, A Father, The Eagle's Nest, elevated by its grandeur the idyllic theme of the loves of Norwegian peasants. Popular song and legend were the fountains from which he drew the material for his art. It was because he glorified peasant life that Björnson's literary fame was quickly established, in spite of his new and strange style to a literary class who formed their ideal on the philosophic culture of Heiberg and the refinement and charm of Henrik Hertz. The national Liberals in Denmark and the Scandinavians in Norway were still in literature the friends of the peasant, and they took Björnson under their protection. In the peasant they looked to find the sound core of the nation, and works which delicately, poetically, and artistically glorified peasant life and love were welcomed in Denmark, and for the same reason were partially recognised in Norway.

"Björnson, nevertheless, early became 'a sign to be spoken against.' He desired to elevate and raise his people and to be one with them. He wanted to be a reformer in every domain. Dramas and poems followed his peasant romances, and as Director of the Christiania Theatre (1857-1858), he did his best to found a national theatre, and gained valuable experience for his own dramatic writing. Two plays of his first period, Maria Stuart (1864), and Married (1865), were remarkably successful on the stage, while as an example of his popular style, the ballad of Nils Finn may be taken, a ballad which Lobedanz has aptly compared to Goethe's Erlköni, and which Dr. Brandes considers undoubtedly stands the comparison. But Björnson at no time considered himself merely a poet and author. He early accepted a wider vocation. The great idea of his life, the determination to improve, to civilise his country, and to preserve the independence of the two kingdoms of Norway and Sweden, made him willingly do the work of journalist and orator. But it was not until Björnson's second period of literary activity, when he had exhausted his original stock of material, and after a silence of some years, that he represents men and ideas of his day in his work and brings his politics into his literature.

All the best works of his first period were written by the time he was a little over thirty, and in these, like almost all contemporary Scandinavian writers, he kept at a distance from all the thought and life of the day. If he represented them he did it unintentionally, and they appeared dressed in old Norwegian or ancient Scottish costumes. His work of this early period had remarkable qualities, but showed no development. It seemed that it was to be with Björnson as with many Danes, that before he reached the prime of his manhood his voice was to be heard no more, because he could not renew his strength. The North at this period was shut off from the intellectual life of the time, but in the early seventies a great change came.

"Scandinavia was stirred by a modern, intellectual, and literary movement, and Björnson, in studying the work of John Stuart Mill, of Darwin, Taine, Max Müller, awoke to a new life, and found new and rich springs welling up in him after his fortieth year. He had got, as he wrote to Dr. Brandes, 'eyes that saw, ears that heard.' The ideas of the century had come into his poet's mind, and fecundated it. A burning love of truth sets its mark upon him. He plunges into modern life with the drama Bankruptcy, and follows in quick succession with A King—an attack on the social order of a monarchy—Magnhild and Leonarda on the relation of natural to conventional morality, The New System, and Captain Mansana. It is now that he embodies the best of his nation He represents its self-criticism. By nature he was a popular spirit, a spiritual representative of the people. He has ever felt himself borne onwards by his country, its history and aims, and in this belief he has spoken, and he has had his whole nation with him and at his back, as have few poets, living or dead.

Björnson has not, like Ibsen, produced a new art, nor added new traits to his genius, but the old rivalry in the varied treatment of the same subject has, to a certain extent, remained. The old order is, however, reversed. It is now Björnson who, in 1883, treated in En Hanske (A Glove) the sexual problems which Ibsen had attacked in Ghosts; and in The Wild Duck of Ibsen may, according to Mr. Edmund Gosse, be found the key to Björnson's Overalvne (Alone). Similarly, shortly after Ibsen depicts Work shattered by Love in his last play, When We Dead Awaken, Björnson makes Work the redemption of the lover in Laboremus."

LAST SATURDAY NIGHT AT STEDMAN'S.

From time to time in the pretty cream and gold Stedman theatre in Great Windmill-street performances are given in which the young—and for the most part prepossessing and charming—students of the famous theatrical academy take part. The idea is an excellent one, for it enables the stage aspirant to gain confidence before audiences. No visitor expects finished work, and that being so, last Saturday night's guests got a delightful surprise whilst witnessing the graceful and clever efforts of eighteen or more of Mr. Marshall Moore and Mlle. Lilian Leoffler's pupils. The entire proceedings were a revelation in budding talent, and it is a safe prophesy that many of the young ladies and gentlemen who made their début last Saturday night will be headliners at our best theatres in the near future.

It is stale news that Stedman's Academy has trained many stage favourites of to-day, and the very business-like directors—Messrs. Griffiths and Benwell—the latter, one of the most accomplished musicians of to-day—spare no efforts to maintain the standard on which the fame of the academy has been built.

The theatre was very crowded some time before the performance started, and a glance at the programme revealed the fact that one must expect a succession of varied dances and recitations. Miss Hilda Boot led off with a terpsichorean number of the ballet variety. This young lady looked really sweet in a dress of white and gold, and her every movement was graceful and showed the result of careful study. She was followed by Miss Diana Tunstall with a conventional Spanish castanet dance.

Very youthful Queenie Reader and Dorothy Pusey showed us how very natural, easy, and delightful it was to strew "Apple Blossoms" to a classical measure, and then to vary the proceedings Mr. Stanley Hughes gave us a sample of his elocution, reciting Robert Buchanan's "Fra Giacomo" forcefully and well.

One of the solo dancers—Miss Dorothy Edwards—whom we remember to have seen in the Court Theatre Production of "Alice in Wonderland" last Yuletide, gave a very finished operatic dance, and Miss Winifred Linder also tripped it right well in the cornflower dance from the same classic.

Miss Gracie Ingram is very fair of face, and a smiling face—"off"—but when on the stage and reciting "A Venetian Revenge" she showed us that her eyes could flash and her mouth could even assume a cruel expression, so well did her mind enter into the lines she was speaking. Miss Ingram's contribution was quite the best item in the long programme, very finished and thoroughly enjoyable.

Stedman's might take for its motto: "Smile, smile, smile; keep on smiling all the while." Every pupil is evidently taught to smile prettily whilst facing the audience, and right well the majority of them did it last Saturday.

"Can you tell me, please," lisped a little lassie to the writer, "when 'The Red Shoes' comes on, because I have got to sing in the choir, 'off.' Mr. Moore said he would fetch me, but—you never know, do you? Oh, if he forgets!" The agony of thought suggested by such a catastrophe almost overwhelmed this warbler of seven, with golden curls and a dress with quite four and a half inches of skirt to it. But Mr. Moore claimed her in time and averted an avalanche of tears.

Another clever little soul was Miss Cora Goffin, who gave us a dance, and then told us how her grandma danced the minuet long ago, but that in the present day grandma was kept busy darning grandpa's stockings.

We should like to say many nice things concerning the efforts of the Misses Meynell, Denzel, Ford, Newton, Cummerson, Tunstall, Brier, Block, Brown, and Bartlett, but space forbids.

It is an education on education to be priviledged to attend one of the private performances at Messrs. Stedman's, and we have to thank the principals for a very delightful evening, which was brought to a close with many floral and other offerings to Mlle. Leoffler, the clever teacher of clever pupils.

SHERIDAN AT THE REHEARSAL.

A repertory theatre on a small scale seems to have been instituted by Mr. Clive Currie in Maiden-lane, and so influential has the enterprise become that it is shortly to seek more extensive premises at the Court. A dozen important revivals and several new one-act pieces have been given during the past year in commendable style, but the company excelled itself on Monday afternoon last, when Sheridan's comedy, School for Scandal, was performed in a fashion worthy of a far larger audience than the little Rehearsal Theatre would hold.

A difficulty of a most provoking character faced Mr. Currie on Monday, the special scenery ordered for the production having failed to arrive. The piece had, therefore, to be confined to one scene, and it says much for the ability of the performers that the representation proved thoroughly enjoyable. Though, perhaps, not so courtly in style as one might wish, Mr. Currie was a buoyant and highly humorous Charles Surface, while the sentiment of the scene of the picture sale was admirably preserved. The honours of that episode, as indeed of the whole of play, were worthily shared by Mr. W. R. Staveley, who made a hearty and jolly Sir Oliver, with overflowing spirits and a delivery exactly suited to the words. Sir Peter Teazle was also in safe hands, Mr. Montague Mazeran combining the ponderous tones and impressive dignity of the part with the needed sense of humour. Miss Ursula Keene was a captivating Lady Teazle, and her gifts of light comedy bore the test of the quarrelling episodes very well. Her share of the screen scene, which was admirably enacted, was also creditably accomplished.

At first Mr. Osborn Adair inclined to over-accentuation both in gesture and delivery in the rôle of Joseph Surface, but as the play progressed he entered thoroughly into the spirit of the part and got through his arduous duties with conspicuous ability. Mr. Vivian Gilbert gave the drollest possible conception of Sir Benjamin Backbite, and was the cause of genuine merriment, his efforts being seconded by Mr. Victor Wiltshire, who acted Crabtree amusingly, being very well made up. He was also a spirited Careless, but would have done better had he modified his voice a little. An entertaining interlude was afforded by Miss May Saker, who as Trip submitted a study of the elegant flunkey distinguished by artistic skill and finish. Miss Clarice Laurence invested Maria with girlish grace and maidenly modesty, and Miss Maud Bowyer was a consistently haughty Lady Sneerwell, Miss Letty Paxton playing prettily as her maid. Mr. Keith J. Shepherd give a clever sketch of Moses, being, however, rather Cockney than Hebrew in his delivery, while his performance of Snake is wholly to be commended. Miss Edith Carter did excellent service as Mrs. Candour.

During an interval Miss Mary Forbes, who has been appearing in The Fighting Chance at the Lyceum, gave much pleasure by her recitation of "The Making of Song," acting and speaking with equal excellence, and as an agreeable contrast, rendered with humour Grossmith's "The Wife Who Sat Up." Miss Irene Delisse sang a French chanson with delicate expression, but lacking in power, and Miss Brenda Gayne and Mr. Joseph Schofield furnished much appreciated duets on piano and violoncello respectively.

PARIS, THURSDAY, April 28.—It is a pity that the public who witnessed the first performance of Bridge should not have been told that the picture of English life shown there was really a parody, for the result was that the audience were quite at sea, and went home with the idea that a country wherein the members of society behave in such an outrageous manner is certainly on the decline. There is a Duke of Cheshire, a cynical gentleman, who refuses to supply his second son, Frank, with any funds, and Frank's attempts to extract money from his elder brother, Tarpoley, likewise prove fruitless. Frank, therefore, is compelled to leave his regiment and to devise some means of earning a living. Having confided his troubles to his friend, Sir Edward Sheen, that gentleman advises him to adopt the profession of cheating at Bridge, a profession which is bringing him in a comfortable income. After some hesitation Frank accepts the suggestion, and becomes Sheen's partner. Frank loves Jane Lambourne. At his houseboat on the Thames he asks her to marry him, and is accepted. But Sheen has also a lady friend, Billy Honour, an actress, who, having found out that Sheen and Frank get money by cheating at cards, induces Sheen to leave his partner. Left to his own resources, Frank is again miserable, and finally confesses everything to Jane, suggesting that they had better quit this world. Jane, however, is practical, and she points out to her despairing lover that suicide would not advance matters, whilst if she took the place of the absent Sheen and helped to cheat at Bridge they could make plenty of money. And so they do, for in the third act they have amassed a large fortune. Unfortunately this happy state of things does not last. One of Jane's admirers, a certain Charles Smith, discovers the secret, but promises to hold his tongue if Jane proves herself a little more accessible. He even suggests that Frank is to lend him Jane, say for a week or so, a proposal that causes him to be kicked out of the house by the infuriated Frank. Once more Frank and Jane are at their wits' end, and once more the idea of suicide enters their mind. The scene of the last act is laid in the house of Mrs. Smith, Charles Smith's mother, where we meet an eccentric Grand Duke. Both the Grand Duke and Frank are drunk, and after Charles Smith has proved that Frank is nothing but a common cheat, the latter unblushingly admits that he has been "working" the cards for the last few years. This admission falls like a thunderclap on the assembly, but a telegram is brought in informing Frank that his brother Tarpoley has been killed in an automobile smash, so that he (Frank) is now Duke of Cheshire; and as a Duke cannot do wrong, the guests deal very indulgently with Frank, and agree that this card-playing affair was silly nonsense on his part. This somewhat disconcerting play was fairly well acted. Mlle. Arlette Dorgère, who is more at home in opérette, was a fascinating Jane, as far as looks went; and Mlle. Lutzi imparted much humour to the part of Billy Honour. MM. Signoret, Carry, and Puylagarde made the most of their rôles.

"LE SONGE D'UN SOIR D'AMOUR" is the title of a weird one-act play, by M. Henry Bataille, produced at the Comédie-Française. A famous young poet, betrayed by the woman he loves, seeks consolation with a fascinating courtesan. The latter, honoured by the visit of such a distinguished man, soon loses her heart to him, and anxiously waits for the moment that he will make his declaration. But as he utters the first word of love he hesitates, for an apparition glides into the room—that of his former mistress. Neither he nor the courtesan sees her, for she is, as she says herself, the image engraved in his heart, the "recollection" of happy days. She is coquettish, alluring, and she strokes his hand when he takes up his cup of tea, as if to remind him of the days when they, too, took tea together. In vain does the courtesan tempt him in every way. The graceful spectre always stands between her and the object of her love, and when the apparition whispers to him to tell the woman that he does not love her, he unconsciously repeats the words and slowly leaves the room, to return to the syren who enslaves him and will deceive him again at the first opportunity. The little act, written in blank verse, was admirably acted. Mme. Bartet incarnated with consummate art the shadow of the scheming, cruel mistress, terrible in her diabolical beauty. Mlle. Sorel gave a good account of the courtesan trying in vain to ensnare the poet; and M. Grand was an impressive lover. Special praise is due to the management for the manner in which they dealt with the light effects on the apparition, which imparted to it something unearthly that kept the audience spellbound. The clever act met with a first-class reception.

THERE is trouble, serious trouble, between M. Louys and Mlle. Polaire. M. Pierre Louys, the well-known author, wrote a play called La Femme et le Pantin. According to Mlle. Polaire the chief rôle therein was promised to her, whilst now it will be impersonated by Mlle. Badet. Mlle. Polaire is wroth with M. Gémier, but it is especially on M. Louys that she unloads her anger. She has threatened to shoot that author, and has already started against him a campaign of defamation, for which she may have to pay rather dearly. I am not in a position to say in how far M. Louys has broken his promise to Mlle. Polaire, but that talented artist is very ill-advised to pursue a course from which her friends ought to restrain her.

THE management of the Comédie-Francaise held its annual meeting, represented by MM. Mounet-Sully, Silvain, Férandy, Lambert, Paul Mounet, Berr, Leitner, Duflos, and Dehelly. M. Claretie, the director, having thanked the members of the House of Molière for the services rendered by them, M. Siblot read the financial report, which proved that the Comédie-Française is in a flourishing condition. The year 1909 shows a profit of £17,680, in consequence of which—after 10 per cent. has been deducted for the reserve fund—each share will receive £760. In M. Siblot's report the wish is expressed that the sociétaires who accept too many engagements in the provinces and in foreign countries may be induced to stick a little more to their posts.

THE Crystal Palace Orchestral Society will give a repetition of the concert selection of The Princess of Kensington in the concert hall of the Crystal Palace to-night (Saturday). The second half of the programme will be devoted to popular airs, including Sullivan's overture "Di Ballo," and the same composer's charming dances from The Tempest, the three dances from Henry VIII., by Ed. German, and Gounod's ballet music of Polyeucte. The chief soloists will be Miss Clara Dow and Mr. Harold Wilde. Mr. Fred. W. Holloway will be at the piano, while the whole of the arrangements will be under the personal supervision of the musical director of the Palace, Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

"THE BAD GIRL OF THE FAMILY."

Mr. Frederick Melville's company is entertaining crowded houses with The Bad Girl of the Family, the strong dramatic situations being followed with rapt attention. The piece is excellently staged, whilst the members of the company are judiciously placed. Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves is seen to great advantage as Lieut. Richard Marsh, R.N., and his conception of the character is manly and sincere, without the slightest trace of affectation. As the unscrupulous Harry Gordon Mr. George R. Montford succeeds in obtaining the execrations of the audience throughout. Mr. Montford gives a careful and highly finished portrayal of a cool, gentlemanly villain. Mr. Frederick W. Freeman plays with earnestness and directness of method as Lord Erskine; and Mr. George Belmore realises the character of Jerry Holmes admirably, losing no opportunity for displaying his ability. Mr. Luke Forster submits a very funny sketch of the Hebrew character, Barney Gordon, and the unlimited scope the part offers him is taken due advantage of. Mr. Tom May as Sammy Snozzle and Miss Amy Randolph as Sally Smithers keep the house in a ripple of merriment. Miss Guinevere Shilton deserves favourable mention for her excellent interpretation of Mrs. Moore. Miss Violet Crossley enacts the title-part, and her rendition is particularly forcible and clever. She seems eminently adapted for the part, and it would indeed be a difficult task to improve upon her reading. Honour Moore is capitally played by Miss Margaret Tueskie; and Miss Daisie Cook makes a charming and sympathetic Gladys Erskine, playing the part with tact and discretion. Mr. R. Duncan Bell plays with earnestness and directness of method as John Moore; and nothing but praise can be bestowed upon Mr. Charles Eustace's brief performance as Inspector Lawrence. The production is under the entire management of Mr. Chris. Mason, who also undertakes the arduous duties of stage-directorship, assisted by Mr. Fredk. Carr.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, April 25, the Farcical Play, by F. Anstey, entitled
"THE BRASS BOTTLE."

It was laughter from beginning to end on Monday evening at the King's when The Brass Bottle, fresh from its long and successful season at the Vaudeville Theatre, commenced a week's engagement before a very crowded house, to whom the combination of Arabian Nights mystery and modernity irresistibly appealed. Comical indeed were the effects produced by the well-meant efforts of the Genie to express his gratitude for his release from the Brass Bottle, and Mr. Anstey's ably-written farce can be highly recommended as a certain cure for melancholy. Mr. Holman Clark's rendering of Fahrash-el-Aamash is ludicrously excellent, his make-up and acting being all that could be desired. Horace Ventimore is extremely well played by Mr. Lawrence Grossmith, whose easy acting proves him to be a worthy member of a clever family; Mr. Percy Marshall's characterisation of Professor Anthony Futvoye could not be bettered; and Mr. Rudge Hardinge interprets the sneaking Spencer Pringle in capital style. A very creditable performance of the astonished Samuel Wackerbath is given by Mr. Luigi Lablache, and Mr. Harry Norton as the bibulous Rapkin is deserving of praise. Miss Viva Birkett is a charming and intelligent Sylvia Futvoye, and Mrs. Futvoye is carefully played by Miss Lena Halliday. Miss Mary Brough's delicious picture of the lodging-house keeper Mrs. Rapkin is a treat to witness; Miss Armine Grace as Mrs. Wackerbath lends valuable aid; Miss Gladys Storey is a dainty Jessie; Miss Meta de Burgh as Zobeida dances with spirit; and the Chief of the Caravan (Mr. A. Spencer) and Head Effreet (Mr. John Carey) are impressive in their solemnity. The mystery effects are exceedingly well carried out, and the scenery is in every way praiseworthy.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

"WHAT A MAN MADE HER."

Mr. Charles Darrell has a happy way of writing dramas that appeal strongly to the tender feelings of an audience, and at Hammersmith his works always play to good business. The above drama is no exception to the rule. It is being toured by Mis Renée Glendower with a most efficient cast. Miss Glendower herself plays in a most sympathetic and taking manner the part of the artist's model, Janet McAllister; Mr. J. M. Oliver plays in manly style the part of Dr. Mark Haven, and speaks his lines with telling effect; as the villainous Rupert Wogan Danescombe Mr. George Arthur proves an exceedingly good "heavy" man of much originality of style; Mr. Martin Alwyne does well as Sir Ernest Cavendish; Mr. Bert Goldin plays the moneylender Lewis Emmanuel Gunnerstein, giving a most humorous interpretation of the Jew; as his daughter Deborah Miss Tessa Myers acts in a lively manner, and proves very popular; Miss F. Russell Spiers is quite good in the somewhat colourless part of Elfrida Dowager Countess of Saxon Royal; as her detestable and drug-taking daughter, Lady Thora Danescombe, Miss Stella Carmichel shows conspicuous ability; and the minor characters are all well interpreted. The play is admirably staged throughout.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, April 25, the Musical Play, in two acts, entitled
"OUR MISS GIBBS."

There were but few vacant seats at the Alexandra Theatre when Our Miss Gibbs, which is still crowding the Gaiety, was presented for the first time in Stoke Newington by Mr. George Dance's company on Monday evening last. The excellent ensemble that obtains in all Mr. Dance's productions is fully maintained in the present one, the cast being as well chosen and the same care and attention to detail in the matter of mounting and dressing being given as one now naturally expects to find in any organisation sent on the road under this management. A very popular personage is Timothy Gibbs as Mr. Theodore Leonard presents him, and deservedly so, for Mr. Leonard obtains his effects by legitimate means, and his performance is marked by a pleasing absence of the extravagances to which the part so easily lends itself. An altogether delightful representative of the title-rôle is found in Miss Kathleen Courtney, who, whether as actress, singer, or dancer, is equally charming. Mr. Tom Shelford is a capital Hughie Pierrepoint, and plays the part in an easy, good-natured way that makes for success, and needless to say his song in the second act, "Yip-i-addy," is irresistibly redemanded. As Lady Elizabeth Thanet Miss Gladys Ivery displays her fine voice to much advantage in the musical numbers allotted to the part, a part which she invests with no little daintiness and charm. Mr. J. E. Stevenson as Slithers, the professional crook, gives a neat and finished performance, and Mr. Craufurd Kent as Lord Eynsford is all that a musical comedy lover should be both vocally and histrionically. Miss Jennie Richards makes the utmost possible of Mrs. Farquhar, and Miss Nancy Hervyn is a fascinating Madame Jeanne, the Scotch-French modiste at Garrod's. The Earl of St. Ives of Mr. Ernest Darrell (particularly good), the Mr. Toplady of Mr. R. M. Strachan, the Mr. Amalfy of Mr. Murray Stephen, and the Duchess of Minster of Miss Winifred Knightby call for special mention, while to Mr. Henry de Solla, who in addition to appearing as Mr. Beavis is also responsible for the stage-management, an extra word of praise is due for the smoothness and spirit with which the performance goes from beginning to end. The orchestra and chorus are under the capable direction of Mr. Otto Manns.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, April 25, for the First Time in London, the Drama in Four Acts, by Arthur Rosebery, entitled
"THE MASTER MAN."

Frank Manley ..... Mr. Otto Minster
Bob Manley ..... Mr. Bert Lloyd
George Gold ..... Mr. Kenneth Black
Sir Richard Gaythorne .. Mr. Frank Robertson
Major Hawke ..... Mr. Charles Dickens
Lieutenant Hardy ..... Mr. Herbert Morgan
Tom Leader ..... Mr. Harry Playfair
Will Sharp ..... Mr. Herbert Goddard
Sergeant Scott ..... Mr. Arthur Rose
Joe Piper ..... Mr. Barry Charles
Tommy ..... Mr. Charles Barclay
Mistress Leader ..... Miss Anita Playfair
Trixie ..... Miss Mary Stafford Smith
Dame Manley ..... Miss Polly Marsh
Mary Gold ..... Miss Marie Duncan
Blanche Pearl ..... Miss Bessie Rignold

Stirring situations and telling lines abound in The Master Man, "a dramatic romance of love and toil," produced last week at the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, and accorded a very favourable reception on its first performance in London at the Drury Lane of the East on Monday last. The character which gives the play its title is Frank Manley, a young inventor, who soon after the opening of the play sells a valuable invention to Mr. George Gold, a wealthy engineer and shipbuilder, for £100. He would prefer to wait and see what his idea is worth and be paid by results, but the wily Gold insists on buying the invention outright, Manley, however, being taken into his employ. Gold's daughter Mary has been a witness to the transaction, and it is obvious that the young couple have fallen in love at first sight. When Manley has departed, another visitor is announced, Major Hawke, late private secretary to Sir Richard Gaythorne, who has squandered his wealth and is now penniless, having mortgaged his ancestral home, Gaythorne Court. Hawke is after a fresh situation, and Gold, anxious that his daughter should marry well socially, asks Hawke if he can arrange that he (Gold) shall purchase Gaythorne Court, his idea being that Mary shall eventually wed Sir Richard. In the third scene of this act, the interior of Gaythorne Court, Gold becomes the possessor of the estate, and Sir Richard, who has enlisted, is about to start for the front. Blanche Pearl, a notorious actress, in love with Sir Richard, would purchase the property for him, but she is too late, much to the gratification of Major Hawke, who evidently has no fondness for his late master, and is determined to wed Blanche himself. In the next act, "At the Front," we see Bob Manley, Frank's brother, in the same regiment as Sir Richard, the bearer of important despatches. He is shot by the enemy and disabled, and Sir Richard, donning his clothes, takes his place, and proceeds on his dangerous mission, in which he is successful and for which he is awarded the V.C. Meanwhile at home Hawke is plotting to secure the hand of Blanche, but that versatile young lady at a military fête, disguised as a fortune-teller, gives him a very unpleasant five minutes, and is not particularly kind to old Gold when he enters the tent and has his fortune told. One of her many admirers, who learns that his love for her is not reciprocated, shoots himself, and Hawke denounces her as a murderess, promising to keep silent if she will marry him. We next see the inventor, Frank, testing his model in a tank. So intent is he on his work that he forgets it is his mother's birthday, but that kind-hearted old lady receives much attention and many presents from her other relatives and friends, and is all excitement at the expected return of her other son from the war. Sir Richard comes home, and is given a rousing reception by the villagers, but the faithful Blanche is heartbroken as she sees him escorting Mary through the crowd. Hawke has been busy with his lying tongue and his evil schemes, and all Blanche's letters have been returned, Sir Richard being led to believe that her conduct has been most scandalous during his absence. He eventually proposes to Mary, but that young lady tells him she will always regard him as a true friend, but that her heart belongs to Frank Manley. That honest toiler has perfected his invention, and he can now ask her father for her hand and dictate his terms. Old Gold, however, will not hear of his daughter marrying Frank, and tells her so, and then proceeds to his cottage, gives him a month's notice, and bids his old mother quit the place within a week. He also demands to see the invention, declaring that it is his, as the materials of which it is made were taken from his premises. Frank refuses to let him see it, and is felled to the ground by a blow from a workman. Hawke, forcing the door of the apartment where the model is kept, is struck down by some explosive, which also renders Mr. Gold sightless. Previous to this Sir Richard has found out the truth as to the slanderous statements concerning Blanche, and ere the curtain finally falls the "master man" comes into his own, and there is happiness all round for the deserving ones.

The play was capitally acted throughout, Mr. Otto Minster making a very vigorous and convincing Frank Manley, particularly forcible being his acting in the scene where he refuses to part with the work of his brains, his performance throughout being very impressive. A finished portrayal of the unscrupulous Major Hawke was given by Mr. Charles Dickens, the actor skilfully indicating Hawke's passion for Blanche, his enactment all through being a very meritorious one. Mr. Frank Robertson is responsible for an easy but effective portrayal of Sir Richard; and George Gold has a quite satisfactory representative in Mr. Kenneth Black, the actor skilfully indicating the old man's love for his daughter Mary. Miss Bessie Rignold as Blanche Pearl, "the idol of all," played the falsely-judged woman of the world with the ease and effectiveness one expected from so experienced an actress, particularly impressive being the scene where she appeals to Sir Richard not to believe the lying tales of her traducers, her acting where she masquerades as a fortune-teller also being excellent; and Miss Marie Duncan gave a natural portrayal of the lovable and loyal Mary Gold. There was an abundance of welcome comedy relief throughout, those mainly responsible for it being that versatile and accomplished actress Miss Mary Stafford Smith as Trixie, a sharp-tongued but good-natured lady's maid; Mr. Bert Lloyd as her sweetheart Bob Manley, who is so elated on his return home that he breaks into song—a contribution that gave evident delight; and Miss Polly Marsh as the elderly Mrs. Manley, "her boys' darling," particularly appealing to Monday night's audience being the scene where she celebrates her birthday. The numerous other parts were all adequately enacted, and the dressing and mounting were admirable.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 25, the Naval Play, entitled
"THE FLAG LIEUTENANT."

Mr. Lyn Harding and Mr. Sidney Cooper are presenting this week at the Dalston Theatre the naval play The Flag Lieutenant, by Major W. P. Drury and Leo Trevor. The piece is produced by arrangement with Mr. Cyril Maude, and the acting is remarkably good all round. Mr. George Mallett as Vice-Admiral the Hon. Sir Berkeley Wynne, K.C.B., gives a life-like representation of the character. His make-up for the part is splendid, and he seems to bring with him on to the scene the very atmosphere of the sea. Mr. Vincent Fletcher is John Penrose, the Flag Captain, fulfilling the part admirably; and Mr. Edgar Kent is Richard Lascelles, the daring and self-sacrificing young Flag-Lieutenant. There is a breezy abandonment about Mr. Kent's acting in this part which renders the performance very acceptable. Mr. Montagu Love's Major William Thesiger is a manly performance; Mr. George Percy's Walter Crutchley, surgeon in the navy, is a remarkably good character-sketch; and Mr. Hugh Wakefield as Horatio Hood and Mr. Olaf Hytten as Edward Dormer-Lee, two midshipmen, are quite an acquisition to the cast, their high spirits being positively infectious. Mr. John Wheatman's rendering of the part of Michael Palliser, of the Eastern Telegraph Co., a personage who clears up some important points in the story, is excellent. Miss Florence Jackson does not fail to make the best of the many opportunities for good acting falling to the lot of Mrs. Cameron. The Lady Hermione Wynne of Miss Dorothy Ripley is a good performance; and Miss Winifred Valiant as Viola Hood, Miss Stella Leigh as Mrs. Gough-Bogle, and Miss Ada Clarke as Lady Dugdale, complete the cast.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

"LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE."

Les Cloches de Corneville drew big audiences at Kennington Theatre this week, where the opera was performed by the talented company which Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. John Hart have sent on tour. The singing of the principals is excellent, and the chorus is also exceptionally strong, so that the ear-haunting melodies so familiar two decades ago are treated very finely. The striking "Crusaders" chorus in the second act is splendidly rendered, and nightly brings down the house; while the enlarged orchestra is ably conducted by Mr. Knight Pearce. The staging leaves little to be desired, the quaint Normandy peasant dresses harmonising effectively with the surrounding scenery of the village of Calvados and the grounds of the Château. The opera is presented under the direction of Mr. St. Alban, who also fills the rôle of Gaspard, the miser. Despite the strain entailed by the duties of stage-management, Mr. St. Alban gives a remarkably vivid sketch of the greedy and sordid selfishness of the old farmer, and in the great scene in the Crusaders' Hall, where he is frightened whilst counting his gold, he acted with consummate skill. In the lighter part of the Bailie, that well-known operatic comedian, Mr. Mark Leicester, won fresh laurels by the cleverness of his work. He introduced a lot of genuine humour, and his efforts were ably seconded by Mr. Alfred Selby as Gobo. Mr. Selby was always bubbling over with merriment, and occasioned a lot of fun. Miss Gurney Delaporte was a bright and vivacious Serpolette, acting with great spirit and singing and dancing well. Her song, "Just look at that," was rendered with much animation. As Germaine Miss Vera Dorien was excellent. She has a silvery voice of considerable range, which won her an enthusiastic encore for "Ding, dong, bells." Mr. Augustus Cramer made an impressive and imposing Marquis de Corneville, and his best song, "Fairest Maiden," was warmly received. Mr. Wensley's Russell's fine voice found ample scope in the part of Grenicheaux, and he captured the house with "On billows rocking," which was a decidedly good piece of vocalisation. Miss Lucy Kipling was a frolicsome Christophe; and the smaller parts of the village girls were creditably filled by Misses F. Hardy, E. Clifford, A. Hornsby, and M. Ross.

THE CORONET.

"OUR MISS GIBBS."

Mr. George Dance's company has introduced Our Miss Gibbs to the patrons of the Notting Hill Gate theatre this week, and very warmly they have welcomed her. Miss Elfie Vincent, who plays the part of Mary Gibbs, the canny Yorkshire lass of commercial instincts and sentimental disposition, is bright, winsome, and graceful. Her rendition of "The Yorkshire lass" and "I'm Miss Gibbs" is highly attractive and pleasing. Mr. Vincent Erne as Timothy Gibbs is a very droll little comedian, and the audience roar with laughter at his many and varied perplexities. Mr. Eustace Burnaby as the very amateurish Raffles, the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint, is in great form, and his "Yip-i-addy-i-ay" song goes with its usual verve. Mr. J. T. Durant is extremely alert and dexterous as the professional "crook" Slithers, and his exposition of the tricks of the light-fingered gentry is an eye-opener to the innocent and confiding. Mr. Arthur S. Radcliffe sings agreeably and acts well as Lord Eynsford, who poses as a bank-clerk in order to win Mary Gibbs's affection. Mr. Frank Sealy is good as the manager of Garrod's, Mr. Toplady. Mr. A. Gordon Bigg as the Earl of St. Ives, Mr. David Miller as Beavis, the family solicitor, and Mr. Campbell Browne as Mr. Amalfy are all well in the picture. Miss Amy Singleton is amusing as the Duchess of Minster; and Miss Lilian Birtles is a "fetching" little Lady Elizabeth, her scapegrace daughter. Miss Ellaline Thorne is a charming modiste Mme. Jeanne, who is Scotch out of business hours. Miss Florence Hylton scores as Lottie Farquhar, the impecunious lady of fashion; and Misses Mollie Cole, Nora Neile, and Olga Grey, as "colleens" at the White City Exhibition, do good work. A bevy of beauty is engaged in the minor rôles of fashionable ladies, shop-girls, &c. Mr. David Miller stage-manages and Mr. Edmund Mogg-Beresford is business-manager for Mr. Dance. The augmented orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Hubert Bogetti.

FULHAM THEATRE.

On Monday, April 25, the Farcical Romance, by Captain R. Marshall, entitled "HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR."

Mr. Ernest Dare is visiting the Fulham Theatre this week with an efficient company in Captain Marshall's amusing little play. Mr. Edwin Ling plays the rôle of the Governor, and makes much of the self-importance of that official and his brief attack of love-fever. Mr. J. E. Savery is a precise and dignified personage as the Colonial Secretary. Mr. Ernest Dare is brisk and cheerful as Captain Carew, and puts plenty of vigour into his work, with an excellent touch of humour. Not less humorous is Mr. R. Borlando as the solemn and ultra-official private secretary. Messrs. Glynn, Sutton West, and Waltham satisfactorily fill the parts of the military men as Captain Rivers, Major Kildare, and the Sentry respectively. Miss Irene Malvesyon does very well as Mrs. Wentworth-Bolingbroke; and Miss Gladys Veevers acts prettily as Ethel Carlton. Miss M. Lowe Dare is quite a success in the rather difficult part of Stella de Gex. His Excellency was preceded by the well-worn Box and Cox, in which Messrs. Glynn and Borlande and Miss Malvesyon took part, the rendering of Mrs. Bouncer by the last-named being the most convincing of the three.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

"WAS SHE TO BLAME?"

The attraction here this week is Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley, Travis Green, and Arthur Hinton's company in the above drama, written by Mrs. F. G. Kimberley, under whose direction the play is produced. As Lilian Norman, the vicar's daughter, Miss Nancy Roberts acts throughout in a quiet and sympathetic manner; Mr. Clavering Craig gives a really excellent performance as the unscrupulous Frank Rosselle, alias Franklyn Harcourt; and Mr. F. G. Kimberley makes the most of the opportunities provided in the all-important part of William Clark, the kind-hearted, broken-down professional. Mr. Henry Rutland gives a dignified performance of the proud and stern John Norman, vicar of Beechwood; and Miss Ellen Beverley gives welcome assistance as Mary Norman. Mrs. F. G. Kimberley as Mrs. Kate Rosselle says her many speeches in a firm and incisive manner. A fine study of an unfortunate drunkard is provided by Miss Florence Steyne as Alice Fireworks; Miss Steyne's realistic impersonation of the degraded, drink-sodden woman is decidedly the best thing in the production, being a finished and clever performance. The humorous element is provided by Mr. Kenneth Black, jun., as Timothy Swales, and Miss Nita Owen as Sarah Swales. These two artists work hard throughout.

THE BRIXTON.

On Monday, April 25, the Musical Play, entitled
"THE GEISHA."

A hearty welcome was accorded this immensely popular musical play on Monday evening at the pretty theatre on Brixton Oval, and crowded houses have been present throughout the week. Mr. Fred Mouillot is responsible for the production, and he has provided an exceptionally able company to present the delightful "tale of a tea-house." The part of O Mimosa San is in the hands of clever Miss Aimée Grey, and her interpretation is highly to be praised. Gifted with a sweet voice and pretty mannerisms, Miss Grey soon made friends with her audience. Molly Seamore is a charming young Englishwoman as played by Miss Adela Crispin, and danced nicely; and these clever artists are most ably assisted by Mr. Walter Johnstone Douglas as Reggy Fairfax, who sang the music allotted him to the admiration of the house. Miss Mary Morrison is a stately and handsome Lady Constance Wynne; and as the vivacious O Juliette Miss Renee Reel scores a big hit. Likewise Mr. Sam Lockridge is a rollicking Lieut. Cunningham. Mr. Lionel Braham is ponderous and unctuous, with dry humour, as the Marquis Imari. To Mr. Edward Carlton unstinted praise must be given for his admirable Wun Hi. He was delightfully funny, and his comicalities caused roars of laughter. Miss Dorothy Clancy was pert and chic as the midshipman, Tom Stanley; and Mr. Herbert Uzielli did justice to the part of Captain Kantana. The guests of Lady Constance Wynne found ideal representatives in Misses Olive Eileen and Cecilia Morris; and Misses Clarice Eldon, Belle Murray, Estelle Twitchen, and Beatrice West made admirable Geishas. The Geisha is most handsomely staged and dressed, the chorus capitally sang the tuneful music, and a large augmented orchestra, under the skilful baton of Mr. F. Chevalier le Grande, did excellent work. A Greek Slave was played on Friday night by special request.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, April 25, the Comedy-Drama, in Three Scenes, Written by Tom Craven and Will Evans, entitled
"THE MYSTERY OF THE CLIFF."

Rev. Peter Crabb ..... Mr. Edward Cranston
Jack Sapling ..... Mr. Raymond Wood
Old Sapling ..... Mr. H. Lilley
Jenny ..... Miss Josie Hammersley
Elsie Delver ..... Miss Nellie Morris
Agatha Harm ..... Mrs. Bennett

There is plenty of excitement packed into the three short scenes of this interesting drama, which has every requisite of success. As Agatha Harm, that sterling and accomplished actress, Mrs. Bennett, had a rôle quite to her liking, from which she extracted every ounce of effect. Her fine stage presence, perfect elocution, and ripe experience soon secured for her the complete admiration of the emotional West Londoners. Miss Josie Hammersley was bright and pleasing as the ingénue Jenny, and rendered the ballad "Somewhere" with excellent taste. Miss Nellie Morris did the little she had to do as Elsie Delver ably and well; Mr. H. Lilley was entirely successful as Old Sapling; Mr. Raymond Wood, who spoke his lines in a clear and convincing manner, cut an earnest and manly figure as Jack Sapling; and that favourite actor, Mr. Edward Cranston, sustained the amusing character of the Rev. Peter Crabb with all his old ability and skill. In the course of the evening many good pictures were screened, amongst the best being Fools of Fate, The Right to Love, Sins of Society, and Where Prison Bars and Fetters were Useless. Mr. J. H. Shotton is the persevering and courteous acting-manager for Mr. F. R. Griffiths, of the New Bio-Trading Co., Ltd., and both gentlemen can be heartily congratulated upon the success of their joint efforts to popularise this old Marylebone playhouse. Appropriate music is played during the evening by the band under Mr. Ward Bailey's efficient baton.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

"SATURDAY NIGHT IN LONDON."

By arrangement with Mr. Matt Wilkinson, the author of Sons of the Sea, Green Hills of Erin, and numerous other plays, Saturday Night in London is being presented here this week by Mr. Beresford Whitcomb's company. The drama emphasises the various phases of human existence in London at the present day, from the luxury of the upper ten to the squalor and degradation of the lower five. Introduced into the play is also a boxing competition by local champions. Mr. Beresford Whitcomb essays the rôle of Roy Wilton in a spirited and manly fashion, and does ample justice to the part of the hero. Mona Clayton is pathetically portrayed by Miss Mabel Lowe, who infuses dramatic effect into her presentment, which meets with due recognition. Mr. Charles Lloyd undertakes the part of Sir Jasper Wilton in a painstaking manner, and is successful; the rascally and scheming Edward Mordaunt is well sustained by Mr. C. Quinton Fulford; Mr. Rupert S. Carlton submits a good study of the murderous though cowardly Jew, Abram Shabner; Mr. Fred G. Kay is humorous as Jack Dornincourt, and scores well; Nicky Nobbs is ably impersonated by Mr. Tom T. Sinclair, who provokes much laughter; Mr. George Marriott, jun., makes the most of his opportunities as Jacob Giddens; Miss Dorothy Neville is amusing as Poll Hawkins; Miss Adrienne Lovell is convincing in the sympathetic part of Sara Shabner; and Miss Mabel Coleman does well as Maude Somerton.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, April 25, the Play, entitled
"THE WOMAN OF KRONSTADT."

A most praiseworthy interpretation of Max Pemberton's play The Woman of Kronstadt is being presented here for the current week. The play is suitably mounted, and the uniforms and dresses deserve commendation. Mr. Keith G. Kenneth, in the rôle of Colonel Benzo, offers a most capable delineation of this Russian military officer, and the kind heart which underlies a rough exterior is cleverly depicted, and his rendering is accorded a warm recognition. Miss Betty Fairfax as Marion Best, the English governess, infuses dramatic effect into her characterisation of the much-tempted and harassed girl. Mr. Bernard Copping as Captain Paul Zassulia also delivers his lines with good effect, the wavering between love and duty of the young officer being judiciously portrayed, and his success is never in doubt. General Stefanoff is ably undertaken by Mr. Horace Sinclair, whose occasional touches of humour, breaking through a despotic mien, are duly appreciated. Mr. Charles Ashwell offers a convincing study of Baron Muller and achieves distinction. Sergeant Seroff is amusingly portrayed by Mr. Hugh C. Bernard, and provokes laughter. Miss Edith Vogue emphasises the jealous nature of the Princess Mary de Hesse and proves herself a capable actress. Miss Cicely Clutterbuck as Mme. de Bellegarde and Miss Mynnee Kirk as Mme. de Repnine deserve praise for good renderings; while Miss Marjory Armstrong and Miss Isa Bellington as the twin sisters, Olga and Vera, are very diverting, and score considerably.

"A DAUGHTER OF POLAND."

Feodor Ivanovitch Menchikoff ..... Mr. Ernest Young
Dimitri Petrovitch Dembinski ..... Mr. George Langton
Marya Petrovna Dembinski .. Miss Marie Polini

This new one-act play, written by the clever lady dramatist who uses the nom de plume of Neilson Morris, and is also an accomplished amateur actress, was produced at a special matinée given in aid of the Mayor of Islington's Fund for the Unemployed, and, under his patronage and that of the Aldermen and Councillors of the borough. The piece, performed by members of the amateur club known as the Twelfth Night Players, proved to be highly dramatic and effective. In the year 1864 Poland was in a very distressful condition, and it was in that year that the merciless troops of the Czar succeeded in trampling out the last embers of the insurrection of the oppressed and persecuted Poles. It is at this critical period in the history of Poland that the tragic events which form the plot of the play are supposed to happen. Dimitri Petrovitch Dembinski is a patriotic Pole who has incurred the suspicion of the Russian Government, and a troop of Cossacks, under the command of Captain Menchikoff, are under orders to arrest him. He is pursued and wounded, but just manages to reach his house, where he is received by his sister Marya. He denounces the enemies of Poland, more particularly "the little father," and warning his sister against the Cossack captain, places in her hands his revolver, which, however, contains but one shot. Loss of blood has rendered him too weak to be of any assistance to her in the time of need, and when sounds below announce the arrival of Menchikoff, Marya proceeds to conceal her brother as best she can by helping him to a couch and covering him with rugs. The Cossack enters and finds the girl alone, but he has little doubt that the man he is in search of is hidden somewhere close at hand. He is prepared to spare him and her on a certain condition, which she refuses to accept. He threatens her, and she attempts to shoot him, but he seizes the revolver and extracts the single shot it contains. Searching the apartment, Menchikoff has little difficulty in discovering the hidden man, but he is dead. Marya, seizing her opportunity and a knife stabs Menchikoff to the heart, and this brings the play to a tragic conclusion.

Mr. Ernest Young ably realised the character of the fierce, unscrupulous Cossack; and Mr. George Langton was excellent as the wounded man Dembinski. Miss Marie Polini played with commendable spirit and earnestness the part of Marya. The play was produced by Mr. Ernest Young, and was preceded by a praiseworthy performance of the late R. Buchanan's comedy Sophia, also produced by Mr. E. Young.

BROADWAY THEATRE.

"THE CINGALEE."

Mr. Haldane Crichton's clever company in The Cingalee is the attraction here this week, and fulfils a very popular engagement, winning much applause at each performance. The staging is excellent, and the costumes are pretty and appropriate. The chorus is attractive and well trained, and all the conditions of success are present. Mr. Jack Crichton as Chambuddy Ram is the life and soul of the performance, and is greeted with loud bursts of merriment for his drolleries; Mr. Douglas Munro is a capital King of Kandy; Mr. Arthur Cartwright as Harry Vereker makes an excellent impression by his earnest acting, fine voice, and pleasing personality; Mr. F. W. Ford as Sir Peter Loftus adds to the success of the performance by his clever impersonation; and Mr. Scott Cullen is very good indeed as Bobby Warren. Miss Kathleen Cotter's pretty dance is a pleasing feature, and is warmly applauded; Miss Florence Watson is a pleasing actress and delightful singer, and she makes a decided hit as Nanoya and sings sweetly; Miss Ida Ernest as Peggy Sabine is highly successful; and last, but not therefore least, charming Miss Pauline Hague makes herself hosts of friends by her clever and altogether charming impersonation of Lady Patricia Vane. Mr. Roland Wood is an able musical-director, and the orchestra aids well.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, April 25, the Drama, by C. Watson-Mill, entitled
"THE SINNER."

Mr. Wilson Benge's company in The Sinner is the attraction at the Stratford Theatre Royal, and on Monday night was very cordially received. Mr. Wilson Benge portrays Monk Stretton with strength and sincerity, and is highly popular in the part. Mr. Chas. Burdon acts naturally and effectively as that consummate schemer Edgar Thornhill, whose accomplice in villainy has a caustic and clever representative in Mr. Alec Finlayson. Mr. Frank Radcliffe submits a well-defined sketch of the rugged old fisherman Bill Stanton; Mr. Henry Danson is a duly dignified Lord Ewan; and as the stuttering Chris Floppington Mr. Jay Kay is original and amusing. Miss Mona Grey supplies an incisive portraiture of Meg Stanton; Vera Ewan is very appropriately impersonated by Miss Geraldine Verner; and Honor Thornhill has a charming representative in Miss Muriel Dean. Miss Sadie Smith is a pretty and vivacious Norah Stretton, and Little Ned is intelligently played by Miss Dora Olga. Minor parts are all in quite capable hands.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, April 25, the Play, by Wilson Barrett,
"THE SIGN OF THE CROSS."

That evergreen play, The Sign of the Cross, is occupying the boards at the Borough Theatre this week, and is, as is its wont, filling the popular parts of this spacious playhouse. Many members of the cast have appeared here before, and have become familiar in their respective rôles, while the alterations quite uphold the high standard of excellence which is maintained in the piece under Mr. William Greet's régime. Mr. W. Lawson Butt is a virile and vigorous Marcus Superbus, and carries conviction with every line he utters. Mr. W. Mayne Lynton is responsible for a graphic sketch of the pusillanimous Nero; and Mr. Charles Aldred portrays the crafty Tigellinus with subtle force and directness. Mr. Frank Wood's rich and ripe performance as the tippling, philosophical Glabrio remains a prominent feature; and Mr. J. Weatherall is excellent as Licinius. Mr. Walter Fleet is an impressive Favious; and Mr. Henri Raymond plays Titus very appropriately. Miss Evelyn Hope as Mercia looks the part of the pure-minded Christian girl admirably, and acts with a natural charm and sincerity. Miss Beryl Hamilton makes a regal Poppæa; Beronice is advantageously played by Miss Dorothy Lart; Miss Esmé Lee is well placed as Dacia; Miss Mary Newcombe is a praiseworthy Ancaria; and Miss Winifred Delevanti is very successful as Stephanus. Remaining parts all receive careful treatment.

The disposal of their interests in the King's Theatre, Gainsborough, by Messrs. Lievers and Bennett will oblige Mr. Walter Norman, their resident-manager, to seek fresh fields and pastures new. Walter has recently received from Mr. Chas. Williams, touring manager of Are You a Mason? company, a silver match-box (engraved) in acknowledgment of the way he worked up the business.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Edward, and Prince Albert saw The Naked Truth at Wyndham's Theatre on the evening of the 22nd inst.

SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL.

Stratford-on-Avon has assumed a gala appearance. Lining the principal streets of the town are tall masts festooned with over a mile of evergreens. The masts are painted, some with red and white spirals to represent St. George of England, some with the Tudor colours, green and white, some black and gold to represent the poet's colours. Some of the masts bear panels with paintings of flowers mentioned by Shakespeare, others the coat of arms of characters in the plays. The universities, colleges, and great schools of England have presented shields with their arms, and others show the arms of the old craft guilds. Wreaths have been sent from elementary schools all over the country and from the British Dominions overseas; and the Americans have decorated their own fountain with wreaths, flowers, shields, and ribbons.

CELEBRATIONS AND CEREMONIES.

On Saturday the ceremony of unfurling the flags of all nations in Bridge-street took place. After the singing of the "Old Hundredth," a signal was given by the Mayor, and fifty national emblems floated out upon the breeze. Amongst the distinguished visitors who unfurled their national flags were the Lord Mayor of Birmingham (Alderman W. H. Bowater), Count Mensdorff, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, and Sir George Reid, the High Commissioner of the Australian Commonwealth. There were also members of the Corps Diplomatique or other representatives, who took charge of the flags of practically all the nations of the world, from the United States to China. Two well-known Birmingham men, Sir Hallewell Rogers and Sir James Smith, were entrusted with the flags of Canada and Cape Colony respectively, and Mr. J. S. Taylor, Chairman of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, unfurled the West Australian flag.

The visitors then proceeded to the Town Hall, where they were formally welcomed by the Mayor of Stratford (Alderman Deer). The Mayor said that the number of national flags had been increased this year by ten, bringing the total number up to half a hundred. He extended a special welcome to Count Mensdorff, Sir George Reid, the Lord Mayor of Birmingham, and the Ministers representing Mexico, Servia, Bolivia, Hayti, and Chili.

Count Mensdorff, speaking on behalf of his colleagues of the Corps Diplomatique, said he heartily reciprocated the very friendly feeling which had promoted that gathering. That day they were very happy to pay their humble tribute to the memory of the immortal genius of the great national poet, who was not only the proud possession of the English race, but the common heritage of the whole world. There was, he said, no civilised country in the world in which the masterpieces of Shakespeare were not studied and admired. Speaking of his own country, he could assure them that the tragedies and comedies of Shakespeare had always, so far as his memory went back, been a most important feature of the répertoire of all the great theatres in Vienna. Shakespeare's plays had been given on the stage as frequently as the works of Goethe and Schiller. If it were true that the works of genius formed a common heritage for the whole human race, there was no instance where this was so apparent as in regard to the masterpieces of the great genius whose last resting place they were going to visit that day.

Sir George Reid said he felt very fortunate so soon after his arrival from Australia to be honoured with a request to visit the birthplace of William Shakespeare, and to come on behalf of the Commonwealth he represented upon this memorable occasion. During a very long and strenuous career he had trained himself to speak at the shortest possible notice on every conceivable subject, but it just happened that he had never yet had to direct his attention as a speaker to the illustrious subject which was before them. He felt, therefore, it would be safest in the circumstances to gratefully appropriate the admirable address which had been delivered by his Excellency—(laughter) who represented an Empire with which the people of England has been on terms of the closest friendship for so many centuries.

Even in Australia there seemed to be quite a Shakespeare revival. In that new land of gold, in that new country far away from the inspiration of the birthplace of William Shakespeare, those living monuments of his genius could be seen crowding to see his plays as if some rubber transaction were to be engaged in. This fact surely spoke well, not only for the genius of Shakespeare, but it spoke well for the hope that that glorious mind of his would be brought more vividly in touch with the minds of the generations of to-day. They boasted with justice of the marvellous spread of literature. They saw every day books rushed through the press on every conceivable subject, but there was one book which he should like to see published, and that was "How Best to Recover the English Language." (Laughter.) Shakespeare showed centuries ago the marvellous capacity and elasticity of this noble language of ours. He could sound the most profound depths of human nature; he could speculate as to the hidden secrets of this marvellous world, and rise to the heights of the most brilliant philosophy in words not too long for an infant's intelligence.

The Lord Mayor of Birmingham also spoke, and with characteristic humour referred to the interest of the midland capital in Stratford, an interest which made the people of the city regard the birthplace of Shakespeare as a suburb only a little too remote to be annexed. (Laughter.)

The distinguished visitors then visited the birthplace, and after an inspection of Shakespeare's first home took part in the solemn procession to Holy Trinity Church, where the memorial service was held.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. R. S. De Courcy Laffan. Shakespeare, he said, was not only the greatest name in our literature, but he was also the greatest Englishman in those qualities which had made England great, and it was those qualities through which he made his appeal to the great heart of the world.

The Very Rev. the Dean of Norwich was the special preacher yesterday, the Mayor and Corporation attending matins in civic state. The Dean observed that one could safely affirm Shakespeare's wide grip of the Bible in its spiritual meaning. The whole dealing with Shylock by Portia was the very essence of Pauline explanation of Christianity. He had a considerable insight into Christian doctrine, and a special love of mercy which was in Christ. Shakespeare had little feeling for the ascetic. His genius was cheerful and sociable. Yet he was most severe upon some sins that come from easy yielding to suggestion, and drunkenness especially he condemned. Religion in its highest meaning was to be found in Shakespeare's writings.

The first of the series of twenty-four performances in connection with the Shakespeare Festival celebrations at Stratford-on-Avon was given on Friday, April 22, the place of honour being given to Hamlet. The cast was as follows:

"HAMLET."

Claudius	Mr. Eric Maxon
Hamlet	Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Polonius	Mr. H. O. Nicholson
Horatio	Mr. Murray Carrington
Laertes	Mr. Henry Ainley
Rosencrantz	Mr. J. P. Wilson
Guildenstern	Mr. W. W. Caithness
Osric	Mr. Harry Caine
Marcellus	Mr. J. Moffat Johnston
Bernado	Mr. Alfred Wild
Francisco	Mr. John Howell
First Player	Mr. Guy B. Rathbone
Second Player	Mr. J. Moffatt Johnston
First Gravedigger	Mr. Edward Harrison
Second Gravedigger	Mr. J. P. Wilson
Priest	Mr. John Howell
Ghost	Mr. Alfred Brydone
Gertrude	Miss Helen Haye
Ophelia	Miss Marie Löhr
Player	Miss Marion Forman

It will be noticed that the parts, other than the rôles of Hamlet, Ophelia, Laertes, and the Queen, were taken by members of Mr. Benson's company, reinforced by the welcome return of Mr. Alfred Brydone. There was a crowded house, and the performance was received with great enthusiasm. Except for an appropriate rural background to the grave-digging scene, the play was acted throughout to a dignified background of sumptuous tapestry, and the unaccustomed simplicity of his surroundings threw into stronger relief Sir Herbert's rich, varied, and virile conception of "the moody Dane." Miss Marie Löhr threw a spell over the audience by the intense sensitiveness and fascinating delicacy of her rendering of Ophelia. Mr. Ainley's delineation of Laertes showed some not unpleasing divergence from orthodox canons, and in his hands Ophelia's brother became not only an impetuous and impulsive, but also at times a tearful and almost tender figure. Miss Helen Haye, as quite a recent recruit to the ranks of old Bensonians, was revisiting the scene of many former triumphs, and had a hearty welcome. Mr. Alfred Brydone's Ghost, like Mr. Ainley's Laertes, showed some determination to break away from conventional trammels, and conveyed the impression rather of a resurrected King than of a "spirit walking in death." Mr. Murray Carrington gave us a frank and manly Horatio, Mr. H. O. Nicholson a finished portrait of the garrulous, sapient, and fussy Polonius, and Mr. J. P. Wilson a clever character sketch of the First Gravedigger. The principals were ably supported by the remainder of the Benson company, and the performance went without a hitch from start to finish.

On the evening of April 22 Mr. Benson and his company performed

"THE TAMING OF THE SHREW."

Baptista	Mr. Alfred Brydone
Vincentio	Mr. John Howell
Lucentio	Mr. Murray Carrington
Petruchio	Mr. F. R. Benson
Gremio	Mr. H. O. Nicholson
Hortensio	Mr. Guy B. Rathbone
Tranio	Mr. J. Moffat Johnston
Biondello	Mr. Eric Maxon
Pedant	Mr. W. W. Caithness
A Tailor	Mr. Alfred Wild
Grumio	Mr. Harry Caine
Curtis	Miss Elinor Aickin
Cook	Mr. F. Conroy
Walter	Mr. Nigel Barrie
Nathaniel	Mr. J. Fraser Outram
Sugarsop	Mr. James Turnbull
Katherina	Mrs. F. R. Benson
Bianca	Miss Nora Lancaster
Widow	Miss Winifred Durie

Following wise precedent, Mr. Benson omitted the irrelevant induction. This comedy, believed to have been adapted by Shakespeare from "a pleasant conceited Historie," is situate on the borderland between comedy and extravaganza, and within the realms of farce. The utter improbability of its incidents throws a heavy burden on whomsoever would essay to hold the attention of a mixed audience to its stilted conceits. That Mr. Benson should have succeeded in holding a crowded house interested and amused from start to finish is a tribute to his genius and versatility, and to his ripe and spirited conception of Petruchio. He successfully, and without apparent strain, extracted from the piece the maximum of refined bufoonery within the scope of stagecraft, and threw over the crudities of its construction at least the veil of vraisemblance. And Katherina gave Mrs. Benson an opportunity of showing the best that is in her. It is her favourite rôle, and alike as shrewish maiden, as rebellious bride, and as chastened and subdued wife, she aroused the enthusiasm of the house. Mr. Alfred Brydone was a courtly-mannered and dignified Baptista, with a shrewd eye to the financial side of matrimony; Mr. Murray Carrington gave a graceful and debonair portrayal of Lucentio; Mr. H. O. Nicholson's delineation of the punctilious old roué Gremio was piquantly amusing; Mr. Guy Rathbone proved a breezy Hortensio; Mr. Caithness gave us a clever character sketch of the Pedant; Mr. Harry Caine put a lot of humorous business into the part of Grumio; and the veteran Miss Elinor Aickin had a warm greeting as she stepped the boards as Curtis.

On Saturday, April 23, Mr. Benson presented

"TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA."

Duke of Milan	Mr. Alfred Brydone
Valentine	Mr. Murray Carrington
Proteus	Mr. Eric Maxon
Antonio	Mr. Guy B. Rathbone
Thurio	Mr. J. Moffat Johnston
Eglamour	Mr. W. W. Caithness
Host	Mr. John Howell
First Outlaw	Mr. F. R. Benson
Second Outlaw	Mr. J. P. Wilson
Third Outlaw	Mr. Frank Conroy
Speed	Mr. Harry Caine
Launce	Mr. H. O. Nicholson
Panthino	Mr. Edward Harrison
Singer	Mr. Dennis Drew
First Lord	Mr. Alfred Wilde
Second Lord	Mr. Harold Meltzer
Julia	Mrs. F. R. Benson
Silvia	Miss Nora Lancaster
Lucetta	Miss Violet Farebrother
Ursula	Miss Winifred Durie

Mr. Brydone gave us a sagacious and paternal Duke, and held his anger in dignified restraint in the ladder scene. Mr. Eric Maxon portrayed the fickle and treacherous Proteus with skill, and Mr. Murray Carrington was a courtly and chivalrous Valentine. Launce, in Mr. Nicholson's hands, was a quizzical, worried, and whimsical figure; and Speed, ably impersonated by Mr. Harry Caine, a clownish but discerning servitor. The vain and foppish Thurio, played by Mr. Moffat Johnston, reminded us a little of Cyrano de Bergerac; and Mr. Guy Rathbone cleverly fulfilled the rôle of the peremptory and choleric Antonio. Mr. Benson and his comrade outlaws would have been suitable recruits for the Legion Etrangère had it then existed; and Mr. Dennis Drew, a rich baritone, was several times encored for his singing of "Who is Sylvia?" Miss Violet Farebrother scored a deserved triumph as the dainty, discreet, and respectful Lucetta; and Mesdames Benson and Lancaster portrayed the leading feminine rôles with considerable charm.

At the close of the performance the Mayor of Stratford tendered to Mr. Benson and his company a warm welcome on behalf of the inhabitants of the ancient borough. "You have done more," he said, "to make this Festival the success it deserves to be than any other living man. Welcome, welcome, once again." Mr. Benson eloquently responded, saying that he looked to the Festival in its broader aspects as not only calculated to solidify the Anglo-Celtic race, but also to improve the comity of nations.

The performance was played to a crowded and enthusiastic house, and the leading players were many times recalled.

"THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR."

Sir John Falstaff	Mr. H. O Nicholson
Fenton	Mr. Eric Maxon
Shallow	Mr. W. W. Caithness
Slender	Mr. Guy B. Rathbone
Ford	Mr. Murray Carrington
Page	Mr. Edward Harrison
Sir Hugh Evans	Mr. Harry Caine
Dr. Caius	Mr. F. R. Benson
Host of the Garter Inn	Mr. J. Moffat Johnston
Robin	Miss Marjorie Patterson
Simple	Mr. F. M. Conroy
Rugby	Mr. Alfred Wilde
Bardolph	Mr. J. Fraser Outram
Pistol	Mr. Eric Maxon
Nym	Mr. John Howell
Mrs. Ford	Mrs. F. R. Benson
Mrs. Page	Miss Violet Farebrother
Anne Page	Miss Nora Lancaster
Mistress Quickly	Miss Elinor Aickin
Fairy Queen	Miss Winifred Durie
Singing Fairy	Miss Marion Forman

Of the comedies of Shakespeare, this is the masterpiece of the Bensonian répertoire. It is acted throughout in a spirit of rollicking, boisterous, breezy fun. Mr. H. O. Nicholson, who has usually taken the part of Slender, on this occasion essayed that of the Fat Knight, and added another to his series of triumphs in the portrayal of Shakespeare's humorous characters. Mrs. Benson is never seen to better advantage—except possibly as Katherine the Shrew—than as Mrs. Ford, and she and Miss Violet Farebrother played the wives with great vivacity. Mr. Eric Maxon capably doubled the parts of the braggart Pistol and the ardent lover Fenton; Miss Elinor Aickin, probably the best known living exponent of Mistress Quickly, took her share in the mischief with complete naturalness; Mr. Benson, with his usual self-effacement, contented himself with an artistic presentment of the rôle of Dr. Caius; Mr. Harry Caine was an amusing Sir Hugh Evans; and Mr. Moffat Johnstone a jovial Host of the Garter; Miss Marjorie Patterson deserves a special word of praise for the opportunities she seized in the minor rôle of Robin; Mr. Guy Rathbone earned much praise as the simpering, timorous Slender, egged on in his amours by Mr. Caithness as a querulous and doddering Shallow; and the remaining parts were capably filled. The final scene in Windsor Park was a triumph of stage management.

On Wednesday afternoon, April 27, Mr. Martin Harvey and his London company presented

"HAMLET."

Reynaldo	Mr. O. T. Earle
A Priest	Mr. H. Barber
A Messenger	Mr. H. Graves
Gertrude	Miss Mary Rorke
Player Queen	Miss Brenda Gibson
Ophelia	Miss N. de Silva

There was a crowded house, interest in the performance being enhanced by the opportunity of comparing Mr. Harvey's production with that of Sir Herbert Tree in the previous week. Mr. Harvey made several variations from the conventional rendering and arrangement, the general result tending to increase and emphasise the part of the King to the corresponding diminution of those of Ophelia and her father, and to make more lucid and comprehensible the vagaries of the title-rôle. Mr. Harvey is to be thoroughly congratulated on a most painstaking, natural, and artistic presentment of the "distempered" Prince and on the extremely picturesque setting in which the play proceeds. Mr. Charles Glenney's conception of the King was as of a man imperious in his moods, luscivious in his nature, forceful, at times almost too strenuous. Miss Mary Rorke—unlike many of her predecessors in the past—looked as the Queen not a day too young to be the mother of Hamlet, and sustained her rôle with grace, dignity, and the needful emotion. Miss N. de Silva's interpretation of Ophelia was interesting in its quaintness and departure from traditional channels. Polonius was depicted by the veteran Fred Wright with skill and humour, Mr. Percy Foster gave us a properly gruff and rugged gravedigger, and the remainder of the parts were all in capable hands. The principals were again and again recalled.

On Wednesday, April 27, Mr. Benson revived

Dorcas	Miss A. P. Nicholson
1st Lady	Miss Winifred Durie
2nd Lady	Miss Eleanor Elder

This stately and picturesque tragedy was presented to a crowded house. Mr. Benson himself poignantly depicted the unreasoning jealousy—and, later, the deep remorse—of the King of Sicilia, Mrs. Benson admirably sustaining the tragic rôle of Hermione. Polixenes was portrayed with dignity by Mr. Eric Maxon, and Miss Violet Farebrother imbued the part of Paulina with passionate indignation at the King's severity to his wife. Miss Nora Lancaster was a charmingly ingenuous Perdita, and Mr. H. O. Nicholson as Autolycus was excellent. Mr. Murray Carrington played the romantic Florizel with his usual grace; Mr. Harry Caine's Old Shepherd was a fine performance; and Miss Marjorie Patterson proved herself a polished elocutionist as The Chorus. Miss Leah Hanman had a hearty welcome on rejoining her old company, and her graceful and spirited dancing at the sheep-shearing revels was repeatedly encored. Miss Hetty Kenyon is a delightful addition to the ranks of our child-actresses, and both spoke and acted her small part of Mamillius bravely.

On Tuesday evening, April 26, and on Thursday afternoon, April 28, Mr. Benson's company performed

This mirth-provoking burlesque by Beaumont and Fletcher is introduced by its authors as "a merry passage, here and there interlaced with delight," and first appeared in 4to form in 1613. It is a piquant satire on the contemporary stage, with Shakespeare as the obvious butt of several of its shafts, Romeo and Juliet, Hamlet, Twelfth Night, and Henry being in turn burlesqued. The whole comedy is played to the background of a stable, changes of scene being indicated by cards, as "A Forest," "A Deep Forest," "A Deeper Forest," "In the Depth of the Forest," and so forth.

The humour of the skit was led by Mr. Harry Caine, who kept the house rippling with laughter as the prentice boy who sets off as a knight errant à la Quixote. Mr. H. O. Nicholson and Miss Violet Farebrother, as the worthy grocer and his wife, were admirable in their quaint comments on and interferences with the course of the play, and the whole of the company threw themselves into the merriment with zest and abandon. Mr. Benson is heartily to be congratulated on a welcome and interesting revival.

SHAKESPEARE AND THE URBAN CLUB.

Sir J. Crichton Browne presided at the dinner at the Gaiety Restaurant on Saturday, at which the Urban Club celebrated the birthday of Shakespeare. Amongst those present were Sir William Richmond, R.A., Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Acton Bond, and Mr. Norman McKinnel.

After the loyal toasts,

Sir J. Crichton Browne, in proposing "The Immortal Memory," said each new discovery in brain function confirmed the fidelity to fact of Shakespeare's etchings of insanity. It was in his consummate knowledge of the normal workings of the human mind, in every variety of character and temperament and in ever-changing vicissitudes, and in his own bitter experiences, that Shakespeare found the material for his life-like delineations of mental disorder. In writing the tragedies and the sonnets—and it was in the tragedies that the great studies of madness occurred—Shakespeare, it had been said, went near to the edge of the abyss and imperilled his own mental integrity. He struggled under the burden of human sorrow and suffering in their direst shapes, and was all but crushed by it.

Hundreds of essays, pamphlets, leaflets, and books had been published to prove that Hamlet was mad or was not mad, but not one, as far as he was aware, to support the quite tenable theory that he was both. Was it not just possible that, having put an "antic disposition" on, it got the better of him? It was a dangerous game to feign madness, and he who began by being mad merely north-north-west might ultimately find himself mad at all points of the compass. It was a question worthy of consideration whether Hamlet, having feigned insanity, did not to some extent fall under its power. He suggested that Hamlet became, not mad in any crude sense, but the victim of an obsession which blunted his feelings and impaired his power of self-control. It seemed as if the fell spirit he had conjured up to do his bidding had overpowered him, and must have made a madman of him outright but for Laertes' poisoned rapier.

Sir J. Crichton Browne then discussed Shakespeare's connection with Scotland. There was, he said, a reasonable presumption that Shakespeare found his way to Aberdeen. Professor Raleigh admitted that Shakespeare often went with his company of actors on their summer tours in provincial towns, and it was certain that a company of London actors, who bore the title of the King's servants and had a special letter of recommendation from his Majesty, visited the granite city, and that the chief of that company was Lawrence Fletcher, who belonged to the company of players in London which included Shakespeare. In Macbeth Shakespeare exhibited a correct and intimate knowledge of Scotland which could scarcely have been possessed by anyone who had not visited it at that date; and, further, he showed an acquaintance, which could surely only have been acquired on the spot, in those days of no newspapers and scant intercourse of any kind betwixt North and South, with the details of a series of trials for witchcraft which took place in Aberdeen in 1597, four years before the date of the company's visit. The Provost, Bailies, and Town Council of Aberdeen conferred in 1601 the freedom of the borough on Lawrence Fletcher. What a proud city Aberdeen would be to-day had it included in its list of new burgesses the name of William Shakespeare.

The toast was drunk in silence.

The Hon. Secretary (Mr. E. Charles Fache), who acted as vice-chairman, proposed the toast of "The Guests," coupling with it the names of Sir William Richmond, Mr. H. A. Jones, and Mrs. Acton Bond.

Sir W. Richmond, in responding, touched upon the question of the illustrating of Shakespeare. For his part, he often wished the Shakespeare illustrator had never existed. His advice to Shakespeare illustrators was "Leave it alone."

Mr. H. A. Jones noted the difference between the conditions under which the artist and the dramatist achieved success. The artist had to please one patron; the dramatist, if he did not please the boy in the gallery, had his displeasure signalled to him in a very disagreeable and often brutal fashion. In his view, the great dramatists were distinguished by their common-sense and their large sanity. That was the characteristic that marked Shakespeare, Sophocles, Molière. The late George Meredith, in an essay that was born classic, paid, in prose of the highest distinction, a delightful tribute to the last. But he forgot, or at any rate did not pay enough attention to, one habit of Molière—the habit of reading his plays to his housekeepers. They had lately listened to a work of Meredith's in the theatre. It was in chiselled, unjewelled English. Nothing like it, it was said, had ever been heard on the English stage. But the great public went further, and said they never wished to hear anything like it again. Mr. Meredith had not read it to his housekeeper. It was, indeed, not a play at all. To-day women largely dictated to the dramatist. It was they who filled our theatres. He was told the other day by the box-office clerk that at a certain matinée performance at which he happened to be present, 169 ladies passed the ticket-office before a single man appeared; and he was a curate. He was asked why he didn't write a play about some other passion than love. The women would not have it.

Mrs. Acton Bond said that Shakespeare had delved into woman's heart to discover moods women themselves had never really understood. To such an extent had her husband's enthusiasm for Shakespeare gone, that he even insisted on their being married at Stratford-on-Avon. She had had fears that Shakespeare would prove a stumbling-block in the way of real happiness; but her fears had been dispelled.

Mr. and Mrs. Acton Bond, Miss Violet Essex, Miss Doris Fâche, and Mr. Walter Grace contributed enjoyable items to the Shakespearean entertainment in the course of the evening.

PUBLIC RECORD EXHIBITION.

The Shakespeare Reading Society, which has for its president Sir Herbert Tree, gave an exhibition of original documents of Shakespearean interest at the Public Record office on Shakespeare Day. Dr. William Martin, the well-known Shakespearean writer, arranged with the deputy keeper of the public records, Sir H. C. Maxwell-Lyte, that the choicest manuscript treasures relating to the dramatist should be on view between the hours of two and four in the museum. The items exhibited included the "Signet Bill," by which the Lord Chancellor was authorised to grant Letters Patent to Shakespeare and his associates; the "Memorandum and Account Book of the Master of the Revels," which gives interesting details of the production at Court of some of Shakespeare's most notable plays; "Proceedings in the Star Chamber, December, 1598," which show how the old Globe Playhouse was built from the materials of an older theatre at Shoreditch, where Shakespeare acted when he first came to London.

SHAKESPEARE FOLIOS.

On Shakespeare Day South Londoners were allowed to see the precious first four folios together in one case at the Southwark Central Reference Library. These volumes, lent by Messrs. Maggs and Bartholomew Robson respectively, represent a value not less than £3,000. The third folio, handsomely cased to match the choice bindings of its companion volumes, is in the original binding. With these were exhibited a choice selection of books current in Shakespeare's day, and such as the poet would be likely to have read.

MR. F. R. BENSON'S LECTURE.

Mr. F. R. Benson gave an interesting lecture on The Two Gentlemen of Verona at the Technical School, Stratford-on-Avon, on the 21st inst. The chair was taken by the Deputy-Mayor (Councillor J. A. Priest). Mr. Benson, in the course of his lecture, remarked that Shakespeare was first the child of nature, then the actor, next the dramatist, then the courtier, a citizen of Stratford-on-Avon, and a citizen of the world. He (Mr. Benson) thought Shakespeare owed much to his universality, to the fact that he had learned to approach life from the actor's point of view when he adopted the calling of poet and artist. They would agree with him that The Two Gentlemen of Verona was one of the very earliest of the poet's plays. It might have covered that portion of his life in which he seemed to be wandering for awhile through the valley of the shadow, when things were not going harmoniously with him; when the world appeared out of tune, and he seemed entangled in some strange passion for the woman with the dark chestnut hair. They could note in the play the germs, the beginnings of many characters that cropped up afterwards. In Thurio they saw the beginning of Osric, Roderigo, and many another character of the same sort, the conventional light-comedy merchant, as he was called on the stage. In Launce and Speed they had the prototype of so many of the Shakespearean clowns, the ancestors of Launcelot, Gobbo, Bottom, and others. Perhaps it would be tedious to trouble them by pointing out the innumerable parallel passages of the play. Where was Shakespeare to get women to play women parts? He was unable to do so, and in the case of Julia, as with Portia, Rosalind, and her sweet sisters, the heroine changed into a boy's costume, and he (Mr. Benson) thought that this might possible have prevented Shakespeare dealing with the theme of love so successfully in The Two Gentlemen of Verona as he did later on. There was a splendid passage to the effect that "love's a mighty lord," and "his servant happiness," which reminded one of many other passages, and especially one in Love's Labour's Lost. And though he seemed to have felt the power and might of love as a force illuminating and sharpening his writings as a poet, he had not yet learnt to express it as a dramatist, and his difficulty in that respect was enhanced from having to cast boys for the women parts. Mr. Benson went on to make an interesting comparison between Julia and Juliet, and said in The Two Gentlemen of Verona they were looking at the cradle of the perfect thoughts they met with in later plays. That alone made it one of the most interesting of Shakespeare's plays. With reference to its construction, he did not think it fair to quarrel over it as much as many critics did. The story stood out pretty clearly, the climax came at the right place, the untying of the knot did not come too soon, and so the interest was maintained to the very end. Shakespeare was as great a master of plot as any man who ever lived, and though in this play he seemed so blinded with the splendour of life, so amazed and carried away with the different types of humanity he had already met, that he was half-puzzled as to which character he should most develop and elaborate, there was the beginning of all his wonderful greater plays. There was the making of a Romeo in Valentine, the possible making of an Iago in Proteus.

Miss Horniman made a clever speech at the Shakespeare Commemoration Banquet at the Grand Hotel, Birmingham, on Saturday last. She wittily opposed the talk about "elevating the drama," and its exploitation by capital, and blamed the people who were well off, and too well fed, who had supported rubbish in London and the rich towns, and so made it pay to take such performances round the country, with the result that the taste of the whole nation had become deteriorated. Miss Horniman criticised the way in which Shakespeare was generally played in England, and said she had had to go to Munich for the best Shakespearean performance she had ever seen.

Members of the London Shakespeare League attended the Mansion House by invitation of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress on the evening of the 22nd inst., when a number of morris dances, old singing games, and folk-songs were given by students of the Physical Training College, South-Western Polytechnic, Chelsea. The smaller children taking part in the games came from the London County Council Elementary School, Cook's Ground, Chelsea.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Herbert Tree's Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's, which ends this evening, has been a complete success. At the conclusion of the performance of The Merchant of Venice Sir Herbert will announce his arrangements for the autumn, and tell of a certain acting "combine," which will secure to him the co-operation of two important leading artists.

There are not many pictures or sculptures connected with the stage in the Royal Academy Exhibition this year. Mr. G. Leigh Hunt has a moderate-sized portrait of Sir Charles Wyndham in Gallery IV., and Sir Luke Fildes' portrait of Mr. George Alexander, already described by us, looks well in Gallery II. In Gallery X. there is a fine full length portrait, by Mr. Harold Speed, of Miss Lilian Braithwaite in a blue dress, and Mr. Hugh Riviere's picture of Mr. F. R. Benson in boating costume, an excellent likeness, hangs in a good place in Gallery VI. In the Lecture Room is a clever medallion in low relief representing Sir Herbert Tree as Svengali, blowing out cigarette smoke. Mr. Gilbert Bayes's memorial to the late Constant Coquelin, which was recently presented by the English actors to the Comédie Française, will also attract attention. It is about 4ft. high, and is in green bronze. Beneath the façia of a classic temple a figure holds a palm branch and a wreath, and the memorial is suitably inscribed.

The list of stewards at the Royal Literary Fund dinner at the Hotel Metropole on Thursday includes, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Henry Lowenfeld, Sir W. S. Gilbert, Sir A. W. Pinero, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Mr. Alfred Sutro, Mr. Somerset Maugham, Mr. John Galsworthy, Mr. J. B. Fagan, Mr. H. H. Davis, Mr. Stanley Weyman, Mr. Robert Hichens, Mr. A. E. W. Mason, Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, Miss Elizabeth Robins, Mrs. de Courcy Laffan, and the Duchess of Sutherland. The chair will be taken by Mr. Anthony Hope Hawkins.

Mr. George Alexander did not propose his amendment to the recommendation of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee of the London County Council on Tuesday as the recommendations were not reached early enough in the day. The Committee, it will be remembered, recommended that the reference to the Theatres and Music Halls Committee on Dec. 21-22, 1909, to consider and report what amendments should be made in the standing orders of the Council with the view to granting a general and uniform licence to all places of entertainment licensed by the Council under which it would be optional for the licensee, subject to such restrictions as may be considered desirable, to give either dramatic or what are known as variety entertainments, be discharged.

Mr. Alexander's amendment runs: That all words after the word "That" in line 1 be omitted, and the following words substituted therefor:—"As the performance of stage plays in buildings which are licensed for music and dancing only is illegal, the Council, when considering applications for music and dancing licences, will have regard to any evidence which may be submitted as to illegal production of stage plays at places of entertainment licensed for music and dancing only." When proposed, the amendment is likely to lead to an interesting argument.

Mr. George Edwardes will commence rehearsing The Divorced Wife at the Vaudeville Theatre on Monday. Mr. Robert Evett, Miss Clara Evelyn, Miss Phyllis Dare, Mr. Fred Emney, Mr. Huntley Wright, and Mr. Rutland Barrington all have important parts in the new musical play.

In the House of Commons, on Monday, the Marquis of Tullibardine asked the Home Secretary whether he would initiate measures to prevent the violation of the Sabbath day by political clubs, which were in the habit of holding variety entertainments and social functions of a similar nature every Sunday morning and evening, thus leading to a great increase of drink upon the premises.

Mr. Churchill said in reply: "I cannot accept the suggestion that Sunday entertainment in clubs ought to be wholly suppressed. If they lead to offences against the law the remedy lies in legal proceedings. One of the objects of the Licensing Bill of two years ago was to strengthen the law with regard to clubs, and I see no opportunity of reviving those provisions at present."

Mr. Charles Coltson wishes, through The Era, to thank heartily all the subscribers to the handsome testimonial which was presented to him in their name by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday last.

The Committee of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre project are sending out some interesting leaflets explanatory of the scheme. Mr. William Archer writes on "The claim of the theatre on public generosity," recent speeches delivered by the Ven. Archdeacon Bevan, D.D., Rector of Chelsea, the Rev. R. F. Horton, and others in support of the scheme are reprinted, and there is a paper of suggestions for the use of local committees for practical effort on behalf of the cause.

Mr. W. Archer quotes with approval the remarks of a member of the Committee:—"The theatre is literally making the minds of our urban populations to-day. It is a huge factory of sentiment, of character, of points of honour, of conceptions of conduct, of everything that finally determines the destinies of a nation"; to which Mr. Archer adds—"This is absolutely and exactly true. A Shakespeare National Theatre will not only be a much-needed monument of England's pride in her great past, but an indispensable instrument towards the shaping of her greater future. It will do more permanent good than many hospitals."

Mr. Martin Harvey, supported by his company, appeared as Hamlet at Stratford-on-Avon on Wednesday afternoon in the presence of an audience which thronged the Memorial Theatre. The popular actor had a most enthusiastic reception, and there was an ovation at the end of the play. Every seat was sold for this performance nearly a week before it occurred, and a large number of people were disappointed of admission. Mr. Harvey will appear next week at Portsmouth, and at Oxford the following week, thus concluding his successful spring tour.

The run of Louis XI., which Mr. H. B. Irving will revive at the Queen's Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, to-night, and the continuation of the special matinées of Hamlet can only be for a short period, as Mr. Irving has acquired a new play which he has agreed to produce during May. This is L'Enquête, the English rights of which have very courteously been transferred by Mr. George Alexander to Mr. Irving. It was Mr. Alexander's intention to produce this piece at the St. James's Theatre during the season, but the success of The Importance of Being Earnest has defeated that project. L'Enquête, which was originally produced by M. Antoine, and was presented by him in London at the Royalty Theatre on July 23, 1906, where it made a deep impression, is by M. Georges Henriot. It is in two acts, and, although very powerful, is not sufficiently long for the entire bill. Mr. Irving is therefore considering another piece in which he will appear, to be acted with it, and in this connection an interesting announcement will be made by him this evening.

A thousand actors and actresses have promised their help for the theatrical garden party which is to be held in the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, on Tuesday, June 28. Last year's gathering established a record both in profits and attendance, and the executive committee has decided to limit the issue of tickets this year. The hon. secretary, Anslow J. Austin, earnestly requests that applications for tickets should be made to him as early as possible in order to relieve the strain of the final arrangements.

The cast of Parasites, which is to be played for the first time at the Globe on Thursday, May 5, will include, in addition to the artists already mentioned, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. A. E. George, Mr. Norman Trevor, Mr. Acton Bond, Mr. Drelincourt Odlum, Mr. Bertram Forsyth, Mr. Frederick Sargent, Mr. Frank Atherley, Mr. George Bealby, Mr. Oscar Adye, Mr. Dallas Cairns, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Marie Linden, and Miss Rose Dupre.

Mr. Henry R. Smith, of the Lyceum, naturally has great faith in the revival of The Prince and the Beggar Maid at his theatre this evening. "You see," he remarked to an Era representative, "this piece was taken off in the height of its success in order that Pete might be presented, according to the arrangements we had already made. In the ordinary way of things it should have a very good run, and the advance booking, I may tell you, is excellent. Many of the favourites of the Lyceum's dramatic company are, as you know, under contract to appear, and—well, it will do no harm to reproduce the entire cast, will it? There is, of course, Mr. Eric Mayne as Hildred, the brother of Prince Olaf of Sylvania, the latter represented by Mr. Godfrey Tearle, and Miss Annie Saker will be the Princess Monica of Illyria. The other characters will be taken by Messrs. Hallwell Hobbes, Frederick Ross, Hastings Lynn, S. Major Jones, Herbert Lester, Sidney Vautier, Henry Pollard, J. R. Gillespie, Henry Armstrong, Cowley Wright, Arthur Poole, and the Mesdames Maxine Hinton and Ethel Patrick.

"Future arrangements? Well, I am a great believer in drama of the domestic order—the kind, you know, that is full of pathos relieved by broad comedy. We have such a drama, if needs must, ready to put on to follow the final curtain of The Prince and the Beggar Maid, whenever that may be. But—and this is a very big 'but,' mind you—there is also another script in our possession of which we think a very great deal. Subject and title? Oh, no, I can't tell you yet. But it is historical, with plenty of love and fighting in it. The scene will be laid not so very far from Land's End, and now you can guess just as much as you want to about Spanish Armadas, pirates, smugglers, Sir Walter Raleigh, Queen Elizabeth, Devonshire pixies, junket, tin mines, or St. Michael's Mount. Good-bye."

In connection with Mr. Charles Frohman and Mr. Arthur Bourchier's choice of the title, The Parasites, for their new production, it is interesting to recall that a piece by Miss Rose Mathews bearing that name was produced at the matinée she gave at the Scala Theatre, on June 25, 1908 and was noticed by us on June 27 of that year. The play was produced privately in the June of 1907 at the Bedford-street Theatre by the Play Actors. Miss Mathews intends to tour the play shortly.

The cast of the new comedy, in three acts, by Anthony Hope and Cosmo Gordon Lennox, entitled Helena's Path, which Mr. Charles Frohman will present at the Duke of York's Theatre on Tuesday, includes Mr. Charles Bryant, Mr. Charles Maude, Mr. Arthur Whitby, Mr. O. P. Heggie, Mr. Frederick Lloyd, Mr. Leslie Carter, Mr. Whitford Kane, Mr. C. E. Vernon, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Mary Jerrold, and Mies Mary Barton.

Miss Eva Moore and Mr. C. V. France will appear in a new play by Mr. Louis Cowen, which will be produced at a matinée on May 10, in the Grand Hall of the Criterion, at an entertainment for the benefit of the Actresses' Franchise League. Amongst many well-known artists who will appear are Miss Constance Collier, Madame Alice Esty, Madame Marie Brema, Mr. Percy French, Miss Decima Moore, Mr. H. V. Esmond, Miss Helen Mar, Mr. Ben Webster, Mr. James Welch, and Miss Lena Ashwell.

The next "At Home" of the Actresses' Franchise League will be held on Friday, May 6, in the Grand Hall of the Criterion, at three o'clock. The guests will be received by Mrs. Saba Raleigh, and the chair will be taken by Madame Alice Esty. The speakers include Mrs. Arncliffe-Sennett, the Hon. Mrs. Haverfield, Mrs. Philip Snowden, Dr. Stanton Coit, and Mr. Roy Horniman.

Managers of Birmingham theatres and music halls are manifesting keen interest in the forthcoming Whit-Tuesday sports meeting, to be held at Villa Park. These gentlemen are members of the Theatrical, Variety Theatres' and Aston Villa Football Club Charity Sports Committee, and they attended the meeting held at the Woolpack Hotel on Tuesday. Favoured by propitious weather, this year's meeting should break previous records. Mr. A. W. Matcham (the Empire) reported that subscriptions promised amounted to nearly £50. This announcement was received with applause. The committees responsible for advertising, donations, and prizes reported satisfactorily, and a suggestion was made that the Aston Villa football team be invited to participate in the procession and display the numerous trophies won by the club. Mr. F. W. Rinder (chairman) promised to bring the matter before his directors. It was decided to hold the Whit-Tuesday meeting under the A.A.A. and N.C.U. rules.

Information has been received at the Commercial Intelligence Branch of the Board of Trade from His Majesty's representative at St. Petersburg to the effect that the terms of the Russian Customs Circular of June 27/July 10, 1902, regarding the levying of duty on the importation of theatrical properties, are being strictly enforced. The circular in question provided that no arrangement could be made for the refund of duty paid on properties imported by artists for performances in Russia when such properties were taken out of the country. Applications which have recently been made for such refund have been unsuccessful, and there is no likelihood that any alteration of the procedure will be made in future cases.

Mr. William Haviland, when he played Polonius for the first time with Sir Herbert Tree a few night ago, established what is perhaps a record for any living actor—he has played every male part in Hamlet, from the title-part downwards, besides sustaining every male part in The Merchant of Venice. Mr. Haviland, whose reputation as an exponent of the difficult art of speaking blank verse is second to none, has received so many requests for some time past to give instruction in the art of elocution and correct delivery to actors, clergymen, and barristers, that he has at length decided to devote a portion of his time to a few special pupils. He is also willing to coach professional ladies and gentlemen in their parts prior to rehearsal, and the advantage of such tuition to the clever, but not very experienced artist, who has been so fortunate as to secure an engagement entailing the performance of a part which may be a little beyond his or her scope for the time being is hard to over-estimate.

Mr. W. W. Kelly is making a remarkable success of his new Liverpool theatrical venture—Kelly's Theatre—and, by means of a skilfully varied series of programmes, has succeeded in playing to a surprisingly high average of attendances since he opened his fine playhouse last autumn. Mr. Kelly has now on offer for the autumn and the spring of next year a choice covering attractions of practically every known kind, having received no less than nine applications for one particular date.

Mr. Kelly has a remarkably low series of prices for the attractions that he is offering, and his success proves that there is a public ready to take advantage of fine theatrical bills at cheap rates. His bookings for the future constitute a surprising list, and now that he has proved that Kelly's Theatre, as conducted by him, is a satisfactory venture, he has set himself to the task of securing better attractions still.

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones will read a paper on "The Delineation of Character in Drama" to the members of the Ethnological Society on Wednesday evening, at 35a, Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square. The chair will be taken by Mr. A. B. Walkley.

Mr. Charles Frohman's revival of Caste at the Empire Theatre, New York, last Monday, was a "big" success; and Mr. G. P. Huntley, Mr. Graham Browne, and Miss Marie Tempest, whose Polly Eccles was a triumph, shared the honours of the evening. Mr. Huntley's Eccles is stated to have been quite a revelation.

Mr. F. R. Benson is to be granted the freedom of the city of Stratford-on-Avon in recognition of his services in helping the public to a more lively and abiding sense of the true value of the works of Shakespeare. The freedom will be conferred on him at the next ordinary meeting of the Town Council.

The many admirers of Miss Lucy Wilson, will be pleased to learn that she has sufficiently recovered from her recent accident to repeat her fine performance of Everyman at Manchester next week. Miss Wilson was to have been the Julia in the recent matinée of Two Gentlemen of Verona at His Majesty's Theatre, but was prevented by her unfortunate mishap.

Mr. Ian Robertson, who has been delighting large audiences at Carlisle with his dignified rendering of the part of The Stranger in The Passing of the Third Floor Back, was on the 22nd inst. the first guest of the "Round Table," a coterie of citizens associated with music, literature, art, science, or the drama. One of the original objects of this recently formed body is to bring player and playgoer into closer personal touch in this agreeable manner, and in replying to the toast of the evening Mr. Robertson expressed his approval of this happy idea.

Booking by wireless is the latest instance of the application of science to the stage. On the 22nd inst. four stalls were secured by Marconigram from a Cunarder in mid-Atlantic for the 200th performance of The Blue Bird at the Haymarket on Wednesday of this week.

A new one act tragedy entitled The Law of the Zincali, from the pen of Frances Ayton Gostling, the authoress of the book entitled "Bretons at Home" and the sketch Joan's Kiss, will be produced at the Theatre Royal, Worthing, on Tuesday next.

Maeterlinck's delightful fairy play, The Blue Bird, reached its 200th performance at the Haymarket Theatre on Wednesday. The success of the piece is phenomenal, and, especially at the matinées, the house is crowded to the last seat.

M. Maeterlinck has telegraphed to Mr. Herbert Trench as follows:—"On the occasion of the 200th performance of The Blue Bird, pray, my dear director, accept and be kind enough to transmit to its courageous interpreters my thanks and congratulations; and my hope to be present with them in the highest spirits on the next three-hundredth performance."

The King, with the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Edward and Prince Albert of Wales, and Prince Arthur of Connaught, went to the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, on Wednesday night for the performance of Rigoletto.

The Australian rights of The Balkan Princess, which has settled down into a pronounced success at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, have been secured by Mr. J. C. Williamson, and the South African rights by Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler. The piece has already been translated into Hungarian, and will shortly be produced at Buda-Pesth. The Naked Truth at Wyndham's is doing splendidly. Mr. Frank Curzon is to be congratulated on having two such prominent successes running at his theatres.

Miss Dorothy Richardson has been engaged to play May Edwards in Ticket-of-Leave and Zoe in The Octoroon next week at the Theatre Royal, Luton.

Miss Ada Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow have secured from Mr. Charles Hawtrey the rights of The Naked Truth, which was an instantaneous success, and is now playing to the capacity of Wyndham's Theatre. They will start on tour with a very strong company August Bank Holiday.

Mr. Edward Thane has been engaged by the Melodrama Production Syndicate to create the part of Julian Croft in their new play The Master of the Mill, to be produced at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, on May 23.

Mr. W. Wilson Blake will shortly conclude a long tour with Mr. Ian Robertson as stage-manager for The Passing of the Third Floor Back. A few weeks ago Mr. Blake was called upon to take up the part of Joey Wright, the old bookmaker, which he played with great success, and again on Tuesday night at the King's Theatre, Sunderland, he undertook the rôle of Christopher Penny, the artist, at very short notice, and was complimented by Mr Robertson upon his excellent performance.

Miss Maisie Hanbury, who to-night concludes a special engagement as Bessie, in A Woman's Past company, has been engaged for the summer stock season at the Grand Theatre, Brighton.

Mr. Eric Hudson will conclude on May 7 450 performances as Tab-y-wana in A White Man with Mr. Herbert Sleath's company. The actor's wonderfully realistic make-up has been the source of many encomiums, and speculation has been rife in many towns as to his being a genuine Red Indian. It is a picturesque assumption, and has created a great impression everywhere.

Foreign training was at one time thought to be imperative in the making of an opera singer, but the success at Covent Garden of our London-taught artists has brought into prominence the advantages of home teaching. Amongst those who have distinguished themselves during the recent Beecham season at the Royal Opera are Miss Carrie Tubb, for seven years a pupil at the Guildhall School of Music, Miss Betty Booker, and Mr. Byndon Ayres, each of whom is claimed by the same musical alma mater. Miss Edith Clegg, of the Royal Opera, also studied at the same institution, where, it may be added, a fully equipped stage, and classes in acting and gesture, enable the aspirant to undergo a really practical operatic course.

Mr. Laurence Irving and Miss Mabel Hackney appeared in The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont, a play in four acts by Eugene Brieux, at the Comedy Theatre, New York, on the 13th inst. The English translation was made by Mr. Irving, and is practically the same as the original version. Mr. Irving scored a double success on this occasion, for the work had been rendered into English in an apt and effective manner, and in his handling of the principal rôle (Monsieur Dupont) he was conspicuously successful.

Mr. Irving's Monsieur Dupont is a graphic portrayal with many humorous touches. It is a finished characterisation that proves his innate cleverness, and is the best thing he has done in this country. Miss Hackney's Julie, too, is an excellent portrayal, and the performance from beginning to end is highly interesting. The action takes place in and near a French provincial town at the present time.

Mr. W. Payne Seddon is to be congratulated on the success which is attending his innovation at the Theatre Royal, Lincoln, of which he is part lessee. The first three nights of each week are devoted to musical and light attractions, once nightly; and the last three nights to drama, twice nightly. The average receipts at this theatre have steadily increased for the past six years, and during the latter half of that period doubled those of the previous three years.

The "once nightly" bookings for the present season include The Dairymaids, The Belle of New York, The Gay Gordons, Girls of Gottenberg, The Merry Widow, G. Brydon Phillips' pantomime, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. Edward Compton, Toddles, Flag Lieutenant, The Thief, and When Knights were Bold; while "twice nightly" attractions comprise A False Wife, The Dandy Fifth, At Duty's Call, Lucky Liza, Walter Melville, Millar Anderson, Thompson Carruthers, &c.

The Opera House and Hippodrome, Londonderry, of which Mr. W. Payne Seddon is proprietor, gives drama and variety twice nightly. There being no boats from Derry after the performance on Saturday night, this town serves most conveniently for dramatic companies and variety artists to precede Dublin or Belfast. Other enterprises of Mr. Seddon's are the New Theatre, Hawick, with drama and variety twice nightly; and the Spa, Whitby, which is visited by the leading attractions. In addition, Mr. Seddon runs a booking agency for theatres and halls and companies of repute. Mr. Seddon will be abroad for three weeks from Monday, May 23, to Saturday, June 11.

The tour has just concluded of Dick Whittington, the pantomime produced at the King's Edinburgh, in December last by Mrs. Lillie Williams, and which, after a huge success there, has been on the road since. The libretto of this pantomime is by that clever writer the late Fred Locke, and shows the vitality that remains in a really smart and well-constructed book. Several of his pantomimes have been tried in recent years with equally good results.

Miss Marie Brema has found it necessary to again extend her season at the Savoy with Orphéus. After this week eight further performances will be given from May 3, Tuesdays and Fridays being set apart for evening performances, and matinées taking place on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The cast will be the same as before, Miss Marie Brema repeating her famous impersonation of Orphéus, while Miss Viola Tree has postponed her departure for Italy in order that she may again sing the part of Eurydice.

Mr. F. R. Griffiths, the responsible managing-director of the West London Theatre, has installed Mr. H. Nugent as his general-manager there, an appointment which bids fair to be a deservedly popular one.

A varied assortment of musical comedy productions will be found for sale by a reference to our advertisement columns. They consist of the Apollo production of Mr. Popple, the No. 1 productions of The Earl and the Girl, The Three Little Maids, The White Chrysanthemum, Daly's Theatre production of The Duchess of Dantzic, and the fit-up productions of The Toreador, A Chinese Honeymoon, and A Country Girl. The provincial right of performing most of the above plays can be included by arrangement.

Mr. Brember Wells, who was acting the foppish young Captain Larolle at Rochdale last week, unfortunately sprained his ankle, and was unable to reach the floor with his right foot. He did not allow his predicament to interfere with the effectiveness of his performance, and hopped about in a very lively way during two acts. Indeed, it is doubtful whether the audience would have noticed that there was anything wrong if Mr. Norman had not craved their indulgence, and it might have been supposed that the hopping was only one of the young officer's many idiosyncrasies.

Mr. Austin Hurgon will to-night, at the Strand Theatre, try the experiment of offering The Merry Monarchs to the public at popular prices. Mr. Leslie Stiles, Mr. Lennox Pawle, and Miss Daisy Le Hay will resume the rôles which they sustained at the Savoy, and Mr. George Giddens and Mr. Hayden Coffin will replace Mr. Robert Whyte, jun., and Mr. Roland Cunningham respectively. Mr. Hurgon has also secured a comedian whose name is not mentioned, but who is described as being a real trouvaille.

"Her Marriage Vow" finishes a three years' run at Dundee on May 14. Mr. J. Forbes Knowles and company then go for a short stock season to Aberdeen, and on August Bank Holiday Mr. Knowles produces Nick Carter.

Mr. Lawrence Derrick has been specially engaged by the Melodrama Syndicate to create the name-part in their new drama, The Master of the Mill, which is to be produced at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham Junction, on May 23. He has also been engaged by the same syndicate for the autumn tour of their successful play Hush Money, to play the lead, Sexton Blake, opening on August Bank Holiday, at Reading. In the latter engagement he will be joined by Miss Marian Brereton, who is to play Mary Woodford, a strong character part.

Mr. Allan Wilkie has secured from Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale the theatre rights of the "Lindo" version of David Garrick. This version introduces several novel and dramatic situations, and is at the same time full of excellent comedy.

"The Brass Bottle," transferred in its entirety from the Vaudeville Theatre, has scored an unmistakable success at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith. The business this week has been so great that Mr. Mulholland has arranged with Mr. Gaston Mayer to extend the engagement over next week, during which this delightful farcical play will be given nightly at eight, with a matinée on Thursday. Monday night being the 250th performance by the company, the occasion will be marked by a souvenir in the shape of Mr. Anstey's novel, "The Brass Bottle," being given to a section of the audience. A run of "six nights only" has so long been the rule at the King's that the extension of this will be watched with interest. Seeing, however, that the prices charged are only about half those of the West End houses, and that Mr. Mulholland is presenting the actual West End company, his spacious theatre should be crowded at each performance.

Mr. Edward Compton received the following letter:—"Sir,—Somewhere about twenty years ago you and your wife were playing at Her Majesty's Theatre, Aberdeen. I was an apprentice engineer, and probably the most inveterate stammerer you ever heard. I went on Monday night and heard you, and all the week I overcame minor difficulties at the end of the week to obtain the necessary to get in. After, I quietly and steadily practised your magnificent style of elocution as I learnt from carefully observing you. Owing to various causes and ill-health, I have not been a success in life; I am merely an advertising canvasser, but that requires a fluent tongue, and that I owe to you. I have often thought of writing you, but felt rather nervous. Any way, sir, one man thanks you heartily from the bottom of his heart for giving a splendid lesson—you may say unconsciously, but, nevertheless, I benefited by it."

"Chantecler" is coming to London in the autumn, and will be produced by Mr. Charles Frohman in English. Mr. Louis N. Parker has completed the adaptation, and the piece will be acted by an entirely English company.

Manchester was the scene of more than one "flying" feat on Thursday, for on that day Mr. George Alexander and his company accomplished the formidable task of playing the same piece in that town and in London as well. They appeared in The Importance of Being Earnest at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, in the afternoon, and returned to town in time to present the piece at the St. James's.

The birthday of The Arcadians was celebrated on Thursday at the Shaftesbury, where for a whole year the bright and melodious piece has entertained consistently crowded houses. No souvenir marked the occasion, but Mr. Robert Courtneidge, with laudable beneficence, devoted the whole of the proceeds of the evening to the Children's Fresh Air Fund. Several new items have also been introduced, including a lively number, "All down Piccadilly," in which droll Mr. Dan Rolyat figures prominently, and an effective ballad, "The Call of Arcady," exquisitely rendered by Miss Florence Smithson. Both are from the pen of Mr. Lionel Monckton, who is highly to be complimented on his work. Mr. Alfred Lester is as indefatigable as ever in provoking mirth, of which he creates an abundance. Miss Cicely Courtneidge has succeeded Miss Phyllis Dare in the rôle of Eileen, and does complete justice to the part, both in singing and acting.

Mr. Philip Leslie has been engaged by Mr. George C. Tyler to play Lord Tommy in his forthcoming production of The Dawn of a To-morrow at Liverpool and in town.

Mr. Edward S. Petley and Miss Una Gilbert have secured Little Mrs. Cummin, by Richard Pryce, the recent Playhouse success, by arrangement with Mr. Cyril Maude, and are about to tour it. The company, besides Mr. Petley and Miss Gilbert, includes Christina Rayner, Jessie Clapham, Caralene Fenton, Edgar Stevenson, and Gordon Hamilton.

Mr. Cecil Raleigh and Mr. Henry Hamilton read to Mr. Arthur Collins on Tuesday a completed scenario of the new Drury Lane drama, the first act of which takes places in Harley-street. There will be a strong naval element in the play.

Mr. Norman V. Norman and Miss Beatrice Wilson scored a great success at the New Theatre, Oxford, the first week of term. The popular players were enthusiastically received and called before the curtain each night.

Mr. Hugh Fleming, whose recent attack of influenza left him with a dangerous malady of the eyes, has undergone a successful operation in Brussels, and returns to London next week completely recovered and ready for fresh engagements.

A meeting of the creditors and contributories of the Crystal Palace Company was held at the Holborn Restaurant on Thursday, before the Assistant Official Receiver of the Companies (Winding-up) Department. The Chairman stated that unless some scheme were put forward which could offer the first debenture holders some reasonable prospect of security for the future, there would be no course left open but to dispose of the property at break-up prices.

He attributed the failure of the company, among other causes, to its outlay having been nearly ten times greater than was anticipated, to the fire of 1866, which destroyed the north end of the building and its contents, to a great storm and three landslips, to litigation with one of the refreshment contractors, and difficulties with the railway companies; and to the competition in later years of more accessible and attractive places of amusement.

The Receiver for debenture holders said that a very advantageous arrangement had been made with the directors of the Pageant Festival of Empire. It was stated that a proposal for reconstruction had been prepared, which could not be discussed now, and £150,000 would have to be found. It was resolved to leave the liquidation in the hands of the Official Receiver.

The funds of the Charing Cross Hospital are to be augmented by a Japanese Matinée, which will be given on Thursday, June 23, at the Adelphi Theatre. The entertainment will consist of three plays, all dealing with the land of the chrysanthemum, viz., The Mirror, founded on a Japanese legend by Rosina Filippi; A Japanese Revenge, dramatised from a short story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; and Jappy Chappy, a musical extravaganza, in which about forty children will take part. The plays are being produced by Miss Italia Conti.

From Detroit, Mich., U.S.A., comes news of the production of a new musical comedy called The Echo, in which Mrs. Annie Yeamans impersonates a "coquettish hotel typist" and Miss Georgie Drew Mendum represents a newspaper correspondent. Mr. Fred G. Latham has staged the piece quite handsomely, it is said, and Mr. Richard Carle, the chief comedian, seems to have made a hit. He appears as a wealthy soap manufacturer who flees to a New England hotel to escape the notoriety he has won by writing a comic song. He had forgotten the song, when it suddenly became popular, and rose up to haunt and pursue him everywhere.

The following charming letter has been received by Joska Szigeti, the seventeen-year-old Hungarian violinist, from the Queen of the Belgians: "Palais de Bruxelles, April 20, 1910.—Sir,—Her Majesty the Queen of the Belgians is most conscious of the courtesy which you showed to her on your recent journey through Brussels. The Queen commands me, sir, to repeat again how much pleasure it gave her to hear you, and how greatly she appreciates your talent. Her Majesty has the most pleasant recollection of your artistic performance, and she hopes soon to have the opportunity of applauding you once again, and to be able to reiterate her great admiration. In memory of that delightful afternoon the Queen has herself chosen a jewel for you, which I am forwarding by this same post. Her Majesty wishes you to accept it as a token of her goodwill, and as a precious sign of the pleasure she had in hearing you play. With best wishes, yours faithfully, Grand Master of the Household of Her Majesty the Queen, Baron H. de Woelmont."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Sullivan's Losses.

"The parallel case of Sir Walter Scott naturally comes to mind," says the Daily News, "when one reads how Mark Twain lost his life's savings in the collapse of the publishing house in which he had invested them. Twice in his career Sir Arthur Sullivan, after building up a tolerable fortune, was placed in the same unenviable position, as was Mark Twain when, in 1895, his 'rainy day' balance disappeared in the failure of a concern in which he was interested. And the famous composer met financial disaster with the same equanimity as did the author.

His Heroism.

"By far the greater of the two financial disasters which overtook Sullivan happened in 1882, and the news reached him under very dramatic circumstances. In that year Iolanthe was produced at the Savoy, and, as usual, its composer conducted the first performance. On the day fixed for the production the bankruptcy was announced of the firm in whose keeping Sir Arthur had entrusted all his securities, and the news of the crash reached the composer just as he was setting out for the Savoy Theatre. In a moment the result of the work of a lifetime and of economy had been swept away. From the monetary point of view he had to make a beginning all over again. But, unmoved by his ill-fortune, he conducted the first performance of Iolanthe that night."

A Descendant of Shakespeare.

Mr. William Shakespeare, gardener, was born at Wasperton, a little village close to Charlecote, and lives now in a humble cottage by the waterside. There is no manner of doubt that this lowly cottager is a genuine survivor of the family that gave Shakespeare to the world. He has no formal pedigree, but he can show at least that for generations upon generations his equally lowly ancestors have borne his name in the villages of Longbridge, Wilmcote, Rowington, and Snitterfield—the last of which, one of the trimmest and prettiest villages in all Warwickshire, was unquestionably the birthplace of old John Shakespeare, the poet's father.

Quite apart from Stratford's pomp and pageantries he has his own little celebrations, and each 23rd of April his country neighbours call in and wish him "Many happy returns" over a glass of home-made rhubarb wine. None the less, at the very hour when pilgrims from far and near were making speeches and scattering flowers over the grave of William Shakespeare the departed, William Shakespeare the living was toiling in "the eye of Phoebus," alone and unremembered, over his garden borders.

Shakespeare's Awakening.

"He happened, with it all, to be a cheery old fellow, ungiven to philosophise upon 'man's ingratitude' like his supreme relative, and perhaps a little disappointing as a literary heir. As he chatted with me at his cottage door," says the Chronicle man, "with the swans sailing by in the twilight, he told, with immense conviction and gusto, the story about the poet having gone to sleep for twenty-four hours under a crab-apple tree, after a convivial evening, and 'missing a day.' 'You may be certain sure that it's true,' said he, 'for I had it from my father, and the crab-tree is still there. And d'you know what he said when he woke up? "Why, bless me," he says, "To-day's to-morrow!" Them was his very first words! You may be certain sure they were!'"

A Railway Smash.

"About 1874," writes Mr. Tom Green, "I was the principal comedian at what was then called the Lyceum Theatre, Workington. The proprietor was Mr. John Clifford. 'Honest John' he was called, because he always paid his actors. During the long season we used to have a number of well-known 'stars' pay the usual six-nights' visits. Charles Dillon, Henry Loraine, Julia Seaman, 'Vady Don,' and many others. One week we had Tom Glenny, one of the most versatile actors that ever trod the boards. Saturday night another big attraction, i.e., Jessie Brown; or, The Relief of Lucknow and The Scamps of London. In the last piece, Glenny, who, I may mention, was a very stout gentleman, was playing old Tom Fogg. In the great sensation scene Fogg is tied to the railway lines, and the express train is expected to dash into him at any moment. The 'express train' consisted of three or four frames painted to look like like an engine and carriages. The property-man, who had one good eye, the other being a little faulty, insisted that he should go first with the engine. He did, but, unfortunately, his good eye was next to the scenery, and not being able to see well with the other the result was most disastrous.

An Unlucky Accident.

"Glenny was lashed to the rails on his back, and was working up the excitement splendidly, when the square corner of the engine struck him in the stomach. Over went engine and the property-man; the other carriages, with their attendants, followed suit; and amidst screams of laughter from the front, Glenny was making fine speeches not in his part, and, fortunately, not heard by the audience.

Upsetting the Throne.

"A few weeks after I came to grief on the same stage. The piece on this occasion was Timour the Tartar, and the climax comes when the two rival Chieftains fight their great sword combat. I was selected for one rival, as I used a sword fairly well. The other Chieftain was a gentleman twice my size; but, as I had to kill him at the finish, his size did not worry me. The eventful moment arrived. The King and Queen mounted on their throne at the back, composed of two chairs on some boxes covered with red Turkey twill. Then the band started. So did we—'round eights,' "sevens,' 'fives,' 'threes,' 'single and double point,' and other stock stage blows too numerous to mention. All the time I was fighting I felt something like a rolling-pin prodding me in the middle of the back. All of a sudden there was a crash, and, turning round, I saw what I had done. In my terrific exertions I had pushed the King and Queen off their boxes, and they lay flat on the stage together."

"The Colleen Bawn."

"A good many amusing incidents," continues Mr. Green, "are connected with this well-known Irish drama, and most of these have generally occurred in the famous sensational Water Cave Scene. Fred Neebe, a well-known comedian, and afterwards the lessee of the Theatre Royal, Exeter, was never at a loss for a 'Cut Cave Scene' when on a fit-up tour, and The Colleen Bawn was put up for a special night. He generally told the property-man to glue a lot of sheets of brown paper together, and lower the lights, so that the audience couldn't see what it was. On one occasion I was playing Danny Mann, and I made the usual entrance with Eily in the boat. This was worked on what is termed a 'boat-truck,' and pulled on by a stage-hand at the side. When we arrived in the centre of the stage, and I spoke my first line, 'Step out on to the rock, the boat's leaking,' the man at the wing gave an extra pull with the rope; and, instead of stopping out, we both fell out in a most undignified manner. A short time after I played Miles-na-Coppaleen, who has to swing on a rope from one rock to another on the opposite side of the cave. The property-man had neglected to place anything at the back of the rock for me to land on, with the result that I came back to the middle of the stage, clinging to the rope. There was no help for it; get off somehow I must. So, dropping into the water up to my waist, amidst the screams of the audience, 'I walked off.'"

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree's production of The Merchant of Venice is famous and familiar to all. Sir Herbert appeared in the character of Shylock at His Majesty's in the April of 1908, with Mr. Basil Gill as Bassanio, Mr. William Haviland as Antonio, Mr. Charles Quartermaine as Gratiano, Mr. Norman Page as Launcelot Gobbo, Mr. G. W. Anson as Old Gobbo, Miss Auriol Lee as Jessica, Miss Dorothy Minto as Nerissa, and Miss Alexandra Carlisle as Portia. Mr. William Haviland and Mr. W. R. Creighton are available for the present revival, and both play their parts with unabated excellence. Mr. Haviland's Antonio is a sound, firm, and carefully considered performance, and deserves to be praised. Mr. W. R. Creighton repeats his clever representation of the Prince of Arragon—an ingenious reading and well warranted in its details. As for Sir Herbert Tree's Shylock, it has been so widely and warmly commended that we need only say that it is the same powerful and picturesque performance as it was in 1908. The audience at His Majesty's on Monday rewarded Sir Herbert's efforts with enthusiastic applause, and the impression he created was strong, intense, and universal. From beginning to end it was replete with imagination, invention, and the imagery of genius. Mr. Henry Ainley's fine personality, the ease and grace of his bearing, and his excellent elocution, made him an unimpeachable Bassanio, and his expressive acting rendered Portia's infatuation quite probable. As the heiress of Belmont Miss Evelyn D'Alroy showed sweet refinement, tender sensitiveness, and an aristocratic delicacy which was quite appropriate to the great lady she represented; and Miss Margaret Bussé as Nerissa cleverly realised the playful and pleasant companion. Miss Hilda Moore as Jessica put plenty of fervour into her delivery of her loving lines, and made a becoming boy; and Mr. Yorke Stephens gave an original reading of the rôle of Gratiano. Mr. Edward Sass was a dignified and urbane Duke; and Mr. Hubert Carter was duly solid and serious as the Prince of Morocco. Mr. Frank Esmond and Mr. Harry Hewitt were good as Salanio and Salarino; Mr. Frederick James was a good Salerio; Mr. Shiel Barry was a fervent and spirited Lorenzo; and a very quaint performance as Tubal was supplied by Mr. J. W. Braithwaite. Another dry and curious bit of acting was Mr. W. G. Fay's Old Gobbo, to which Mr. Nigel Playfair's well-rounded Launcelot Gobbo was an effective foil. Mr. C. E. Clarke was satisfactory as Leonardo; and Mr. Henry Morell as Balthazar and Mr. Clifford Heatherley as Stephano both did good work, Mr. Smithson being efficient as the Clerk of the Court. The play was mounted in the same effective manner as in 1908, and was received with the same hearty encouragement. Amongst the very acceptable musical embellishments were the song to "Portia," Act I., second scene, composed by Roger Quilter; Morocco's March, composed by Raymond Roze; some Hebrew chants in Act II., first scene, selected from "Mogen Dovid," and composed by the Rev. Herman Davids; the casket song, "Tell me where is fancy bred," composed by E. Humperdinck; the "Wedding March," composed by Raymond Roze; and incidental music arranged by Adolf Schmid. The tenor solos were tunefully rendered by Signor M. Bacci.

On Wednesday, April 27, was revived Shakespeare's

Sir Herbert Tree rescued King Richard II. from the comparative oblivion which had fallen on the piece by reviving it at His Majesty's Theatre on Sept. 10, 1903, and since then he has several times reappeared as Richard II. In the 1903 production Mr. Tree was supported by Mr. Lyn Harding as the Duke of York, Mr. Oscar Asche as Henry of Hereford, the late Mr. Lal Brough as the Gardener, and Miss Lily Brayton as the Queen. The play, one of the most curious and interesting, if not one of the strongest, of Shakespeare's, held an appropriate position in the London Shakespeare Festival, and its performance at His Majesty's on Wednesday was witnessed with pleasure by an appreciative house. There are few parts which Sir Herbert Tree has made more specially his own than this of Richard II. He depicted with great skill the alternations of frivolity, melancholy, and energy in the character of the King, who, thoughtless and extravagant in prosperity, sinks in adversity to the level of didactic despair. The subtleties of the character were admirably expressed, and the poetical speeches which Shakespeare has allotted to the unfortunate, but eloquent, monarch, were delivered by Sir Herbert with great delicacy and feeling. Mr. Henry Ainley played John of Gaunt with remarkable power and picturesqueness, delivering the old man's denunciations of Richard with telling effect and distinct success. Mr. Lyn Harding made Henry of Hereford a thoroughly manly and vigorous personage, and his stalwart stature was well suited to the magnificent armour which he wore in the character. Miss Iris Hoey looked very handsome as the Queen, and acted with an impulsive earnestness and womanly loyalty which were very appealing; and a really fine rendering of the small, but striking, part of the Gardener was given by Mr. Edward Sass. Mr. Shiel Barry was expressive and spirited as the Duke of Aumerle; and Mr. William Haviland contributed a sound and well-considered rendering of the rôle of the Duke of Norfolk. Richard II. contains a large number of less distinctive characters, and all of these were carefully and creditably sustained. Mr. Hubert Carter supplied an excellent reading of the rôle of Edmund of Langley, Duke of York; and the smaller rôles of Bushey, Bagot, and Greene had efficient and intelligent exponents in Mr. Harry C. Hewitt, Mr. Frederick James, and Mr. W. R. Creighton. Mr. C. H. Croker-King doing good work as Lord Scroop. Mr. Frank Esmond being quite satisfactory as the Earl of Salisbury and Henry Percy, and Mr. Jules Shaw ably representing the Earl of Northumberland. Mr. H. Smithson was effectively energetic as Sir Piers of Exton. Most of the fine features of the original mounting were reproduced; and, under the supervision of Mr. P. Ambrose Lee, the York Herald, this splendid spectacle of the middle age was revived with broad and strong effect, the tableau of the Coronation of Henry IV. in Westminster Abbey, and the dazzling stage picture representing the lists at Coventry, being especially admired.

On Friday afternoon a special bill was given at His Majesty's Theatre. The first item was an act from Macbeth, in which Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Cyril Keightley, Miss Violet Vanbrugh, and Miss Marie Illington appeared. This was followed by an act from The Clandestine Marriage, interpreted by Mr. Cyril Maude and Mr. Fred Lewis, Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. H. B. Irving abandoned their original intention of presenting a scene from Othello, and in its place the Balcony Scene from Romeo and Juliet was given, in which Miss Constance Collier, making her first appearance after her recent American visit, appeared as Juliet, with Mr. Henry Ainley as Romeo. Sir Herbert Tree, Mr. Basil Gric, Mr. Robert Loraine, Mr. Henry Neville, and Miss Marie Löhr appeared in the screen scene from The School for Scandal. Owing to the early hour at which The Era goes to press on Friday, it is impossible to notice this performance at length, but a full account will appear next week.

DINNER TO SIR HERBERT TREE.

Sir Herbert Tree was entertained at the Hotel Metropole on Sunday by the London Shakespeare Committee, in recognition of his services in connection with the Shakespeare Festival. A profusion of red roses adorned the table, and a bust of Shakespeare occupied a prominent place. The committee included Mr. F. R. Benson, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Martin Harvey, Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. William Poel, Mr. Otho Stuart, Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Herbert Trench, and Mr. Lewis Waller. Mr. F. R. Benson, the senior actor present, occupied the chair.

THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

In order to ascertain the feeling amongst the leading London managers as to the National Theatre scheme, we have asked them to acquaint us with their opinions on the subject. In the case of Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Martin Harvey, correspondence was unnecessary, as they have already defined their views in interviews and speeches:—

SIR HERBERT TREE.

Sir Herbert Tree, in a recent interview in The Era, said: "I can hardly suggest the spirit of an Endowed Theatre better than by a quotation from an article by Miss Annie Besant, in which, envisaging a Socialistic state, she says, 'The daily bread being certain, the tyranny of pecuniary gain will be broken; and life will begin to be used in living, and not in struggling for the chance to live. The desire to excel, the joy in creative work, the longing to improve, the eagerness to win social approval, the instinct of benevolence—all these will start into full life, and will serve at once as the stimulus to labour and the reward of excellence.' A National Theatre would appeal to the the intellectual class which only visits the theatre occasionally. It is impossible for any manager unsubsidised and unendowed to present a succession of literary and intellectual plays. As you know, False Gods comes off on the 6th, and I produce M. René Fauchois' Beethoven on the 18th. In the interval I must put on Trilby. It is not the fact, as Mr. Augustine Birrell says, that the actor turns with delight to the cheaply popular and easy achievement. At the bottom of every actor worth his salt is the desire to excel, to do his best even if the doing be difficult. But one has to make both ends meet, and the result is a 'divided duty.' Now the manager of an Endowed Theatre would be as superior to these sordid considerations as the manager of the Comédie-Française. Though even those commercial considerations assert themselves, all he would have to think about would be Art. If it paid, so much the better; if not, it would not matter."

MR. MARTIN HARVEY.

Mr. Martin Harvey, in a speech on the subject at a meeting presided over by the Countess of Wemyss on April 6, said: "It must be a Shakespeare National Memorial Theatre, and it will come. The public is ready for it. Look at the renewed interest there is in Shakespeare and his works; renewed largely because the tendency of modern Shakespearean scholarship has been to humanise the great author himself. In every important centre in the British Isles is growing up a branch of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, which will, I venture to say, prove to be a powerful organisation for the collection of subscriptions for our Memorial Theatre. Mr. Benson renews his Shakespearean Festival at Stratford-on-Avon under happier auspices than ever before; and Sir Herbert Tree is also able to announce no less than five weeks' festival at His Majesty's Theatre. Surely this last spectacle alone is enough to win over any who may be sceptical as to the possible success of our enterprise. I am sure we of the executive of the Shakespeare National Memorial Theatre are grateful to Sir Herbert Tree for proving to us at the critical moment the readiness of the public to support the undertaking and a great series of Shakespearean plays. The mere fact that so many distinguished members of my calling have lent their names to the Festival at His Majesty's Theatre is surely proof of their desire to honour Shakespeare in the most practical way, and indirectly to show their sympathy and belief in the ultimate destiny of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre. And that belief in its destiny will be realised. It is surely coming."

MR. ROBERT COURTNEIDGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have to say that I regard the institution of a National Theatre as highly desirable and quite practicable if the requisite amount of money be forthcoming for its establishment and maintenance.

A National Theatre on such a scale as that of France would lend dignity to our calling, give opportunities to authors, actors, and producers, and set a standard of excellence in all branches of our art.

But is the erection, equipment, and maintenance of a National Theatre in London the best possible panacea for the ills that beset the poor drama? Would that alone vitalise the body dramatic, debilitated by a course of long runs? Would it suffice to nurture the rising talents, sustain their higher flights, and become the repository of all the great traditions?

As there is always difficulty in raising money for artistic objects, and as a second fund could scarcely be raised if the first failed of its purpose, it behoves us very carefully to consider whether the vast amount of money which must be expended upon a National Theatre might not provide wider and fuller results if laid out in other ways.

I venture to believe that the capital subscribed might be used more wisely and profitably by dividing the income into yearly grants for the encouragement of any worthy dramatic endeavour either in London or the country.

I think that private enterprise at His Majesty's Theatre and the Duke of York's s even now giving us performances equal to anything which a National Theatre could provide, and that it would be better to support and strengthen these ventures than to undermine them by competition.

The name of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree is a synonym for the best our stage can show in the way of Shakespearean productions. The series now being given at His Majesty's shows the greatness of Sir Herbert's methods, the largeness of his views, his ability to influence others, and his expertness in mingling the best elements in the dramatic crucible. He is a notable stage-manager—full of resource, sparkling with ideas, possessing the happy faculty of choosing his players with an instinctive knowledge of that which is suitable and attractive. For one instance of this, let me recall the stroke of genius that combined Ellen Terry and Madge Kendal in The Merry Wives.

Then again, can anyone desire finer performances of comedy than those now being given at the Duke of York's Theatre? To Dion Boucicault and Granville Barker I convey my respectful admiration; to the ladies and gentlemen of the company my fervent gratitude. The stage management is perfect; the performances leaves us impressed with a delightful memory.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree and Charles Frohman have both shown themselves capable of administering. They have displayed courage and devotion to high ideals. They deserve the heartiest support. Therefore I would prefer to discharge the debt of public gratiture to these gentlemen before building a dramatic palace. I would like to make sure that they may be able to continue the good work they have begun. And in order to make certain that they will not fail I would subsidise them if they would accept such aid.

I would assist in like fashion all those whose aims are high, and who would, by the nature of their venture, take uncommercial risks for the sake of doing good work. I would extend help and sympathy to Miss Horniman and to promoters of repertory theatres in all parts of the country.

On these lines I think a better result would be attained than by the institution of a National Theatre in which the best actors and plays might, indeed, be worthily housed, but which would surely be in danger of that ossification which sooner or later attacks art when it is too carefully sheltered and protected.—Yours faithfully,

ROBERT COURTNEIDGE.

MR. FRED TERRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I cannot think for one moment that a National Theatre is necessary. The London theatres are in themselves one huge repertory theatre, and it would be difficult for a National Theatre to secure to themselves the services of such a band of players as would be necessary to adequately enact such a vast range of plays—from farce to tragedy—as a National Theatre would be called upon to produce.

With regard to the practicability of the scheme, I would sooner leave it to those who have already essayed the experiment of a repertory theatre—Mr. Frohman and Mr. Trench—to express an opinion thereon.—Yours faithfully,

FRED TERRY.

MR. FRANK CURZON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In reply to your letter, I have already expressed my opinion of the National Theatre, which is that I cannot see the want of it, and I am sure it would become a dramatic dustbin.—Yours faithfully,

FRANK CURZON.

QUEEN'S HALL.

On Thursday afternoon, April 21, Mr. Rudolf Weinman, the violinist, made his reappearance in London at Queen's Hall after a most successful Continental tour. Mr. Weinman was assisted by Mr. Paul Schramm, pianist, pupil of Leschetizky, who, on Thursday afternoon, appeared for the first time in England, and both performers had the advantage of the fine Queen's Hall orchestra, conducted by Mr. Henry J. Wood. Mr. Weinman was first heard in Wieniawski's Concerto No. 2, in D minor, a favourite with violinists, and the artist secured a most refined interpretation of the charming romance, while displaying great command of his instrument in the dashing Finale (Alla Zingara). Mr. Weinman was also much applauded in "Havanaise" (Saint-Saëns), and in a group of solos, accompanied on the piano by Mr. Edward Brightwell, the violinist played Sarabande on the G string with organ (Sulzer), organist Mr. Stanley Marchant, and gave a delightfully finished performance of Bach's Gavotte in E, for violin alone. Other examples were Beethoven's Menuett in G major, a Berceuse of the violinist's own composition, and Concert Etude for violin alone (Fiorillo-Weinman). Although Mr. Weinman's tone was somewhat small for so large a concert-hall, he played with great expression and faultless execution, and had a most hearty greeting from the audience. Mr. Paul Schramm's first appearance in this country, in the recital on Thursday, proved an undoubted success, for it was at once evident that Mr. Schramm is a pianist of power and resource. In Tschaikowsky's Concerto No. 1, in B flat minor, his massive playing of the beautiful opening movement and masterly technique throughout the concerto aroused considerable enthusiasm, and how admirably he was supported by Mr. Wood's orchestra can be well understood by those who have heard this esteemed conductor's interpretation of the Russian composer's music. After a most brilliant performance with orchestra of Liszt's "Ungarische Fantasie," Mr. Paul Schramm was recalled many times, and had to concede a short solo as encore.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR NEW YORK CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, April 20.—Beethoven, a dramatic biography in three acts, by René Fauchois, was produced at the New Theatre on the 11th inst. Mr. Henry Grafton Chapman was responsible for the English version. The original play was produced at the Odéon Theatre, Paris, on March 9, 1909, and Mr. Louis N. Parker's English version was performed at His Majesty's Theatre last November. The three scenes represent a public garden near Vienna, about 1809; a room in Beethoven's lodgings a few years later; and Beethoven's rooms in the old house of the Spanish Blackfriars, in Vienna, on March 26, 1827. Throughout the play selections from Beethoven's music are used to emphasise and illustrate the action. The play deals with the growing fame of the composer in Vienna, his approaching deafness, his unfortunate love affairs, and finally with his complete loss of hearing, his poverty, his loneliness, and his death, which occurs during a thunderstorm after he has seen a vision of his nine symphonies, these being represented by young women. Although this "dramatic biography" is hardly calculated to attract the general public, it is a highly artistic and tasteful production, and one that is distinctly creditable to the management of the New Theatre.

Mr. Donald Roberson gave an excellent interpretation of the title-rôle, and at the close of each act was warmly applauded. Others who earned praise for their impersonations were Mr. J. H. Benrimo as Beethoven's friend, Anton Schindler; Mr. Frank Currier as Johann, the composer's brother; Miss Helen Tracy as the brother's wife; Miss Rebecca Warren and Miss Gertrude Bennett as Bettina and Giuletta, with whom Beethoven was in love at different periods of his life; Mr. Stanley Dark as the Archduke Rudolph of Austria; Mr. Robert Vivian as Councillor Von Pless; and Mrs. Sol Smith as the composer's servant, Nanny.

"Hannele" was Mrs. Fiske's offering piece at the Lyceum Theatre for the third week of her engagement. It would seem that nothing is impossible to a clever artist when a lady who has portrayed Becky Sharp, Tess, and Hedda Gabler, can depict the simplicity of childhood as faithfully as Mrs. Fiske does in Hauptmann's pathetic dream play. Her performance was wonderful, and it was evident that the production had been most carefully prepared. Hannele, translated by Mr. Charles Henry Meltzer, was produced in New York about fifteen years ago under the author's direction. The play at that time aroused much discussion, but since then, with the exception of some performances in German at the Irving-place Theatre, it has not been seen here. The present version is by Mary J. Safford and Percy Mackaye.

Mr. Holbrook Blinn as Gottwald, Mr. Fuller Mellish as Mattern, Mr. Henry Stephenson as Dr. Wachler, and Miss Alice John as Sister Martha played their parts admirably.

The play was preceded by The Green Cockatoo, a "grotesquerie" in one act, by Arthur Schnitzler, translated from the German by Philip Littell and George Rublee. The title refers to a Paris cabaret near the Bastille in 1789. The keeper of the cabaret is one Prospère, who was once a theatrical manager. His place is patronised by the gallants and aristocrats of the town, who are attracted by the performances of a troupe of shabby actors who impersonate the most vicious criminals and perform tragic plays. The leading man is called Henri, and he is famous for his realistic recitals of murders he is supposed to have committed. On this particular night he comes to tell his companions that he is about to marry the beautiful Leocadie, whom he has loved for years, and go into the country to live. But he is told by one of the company that the woman is faithless, and has had an affair with the Duc de Cadignan. Worked up by the news, Henri draws upon his imagination, and recites for the company the story of his love for Leocadie, and how he found her untrue, for which he killed the Duke. At that moment the crowd bursts into the cabaret with the news that the Bastille has fallen, and among those who enter is the Duc de Cadignan, upon whom Henri falls murderously, letting out his life. And the woman kneels by the corpse and moans: "Never was I worth so much as this!"

Mr. Holbrook Blinn appeared as Henri, and gave an impressive portrayal. Mr. Henry Stephenson played Prospère, and Mr. Fuller Mellish was the Marquis de Lansac. The piece was finely acted and the stage-management was very good indeed.

"Lulu's Husbands," a farce in three acts, adapted from the French of Maurice Soulie, by Thompson Buchanan, has made a hit at Maxine Elliott's Theatre. Lulu Rogers is a vaudeville actress with a yearning for notoriety. She invokes the aid and imagination of her press agent, A. Lyre, and he advises her to advertise for a husband, and attract attention to herself by refusing to marry him at the last moment. This she does, and receives numerous answers. Instead of sending her own photograph, however, to the favoured suitor, Algernon Brown, she sends one of her friend, Mrs. Marguerite Morrison, never thinking that he will ever meet the lady. Brown plays a similar trick on her by sending a photograph of his barber. At the Clove Blossom Inn, near New York, Lulu goes to meet Brown and encounters Mrs. Morrison, who has just eloped with Albert Schwartz, and has been arrested with him for exceeding the speed limit in his motor-car. Dr. Morrison has heard of his wife's escapade, and comes in pursuit of her. All sorts of complications arise, and there is the usual mixing of identities. Morrison is so befuddled that he actually serves as his wife's best man at a bogus wedding without knowing who she is, as she is heavily veiled. In the second act he is terribly frightened because the disappointed Brown is "thirsting for his gore," believing him to be the cause of all the trouble. Brown wants his wife, thinking she is Lulu. Morrison denies his identity, and Brown wants to kill Schwartz, mistaking him for Morrison. Schwartz falls in love with Lulu, but she swears she is married to Brown in order to protect Mrs. Morrison from a charge of bigamy. The complications are not straightened out until it is found that Brown was married in New York on a New Jersey licence.

Miss Mabel Barrison as Lulu and Mr. Harry Conor as Dr. Morrison are the principal funmakers, and they make the most of their opportunities. The piece is briskly acted and proves uproariously funny.

The operatic situation in New York has undergone a startling change. It is stated that the Metropolitan Opera House has secured Mr. Hammerstein's Philadelphia Opera House, and all rights regarding operas, contracts, artists, scenery, and costumes. Mr. Hammerstein's New York Opera House will be retained for purposes other than opera. Mr. Hammerstein, it is understood, is being bought out by a powerful syndicate, headed by a wealthy Philadelphia banker, who are paying him the sum of £420,000.

At the Old Bailey on Thursday, Mr. Herbert Bernhardt, concert agent, of Regent-street, W., who was charged with committing perjury in an affidavit, was found not guilty and discharged, counsel for the prosecution saying that Mr. Bernhardt had honestly made a mistake.

The annual Toy Dog Show opens at the Crystal Palace on May 10 for two days. It includes this year many extra classes, and is always very popular with the ladies, who thus for two special days in the year allow their pets to be "on show."

"THE STRANGE CASE OF MR. BEGBIE."

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Arthur Law's new play contains abundant possibilities, which, added to the entertaining features it already possesses, would ensure success. In the first act we are introduced to old Mr. Begbie, who is on the verge of discovering a powder to produce "perpetual youth," but something always happens to thwart him, the latest mishap being an explosion that nearly settles the old chap. He is overwhelmed with his misfortunes, more particularly as his father had worked out the same idea successfully, but died without imparting the secret to his son. While Mr. Begbie is being put to rights by his housekeeper, a grandson, Mr. Ferdinand Begbie, calls with his fiancée, Miss Jessie Garthwaite; but, on giving a fictitious name, the old chap will not see him, and Begbie, jun., leaves on the table a photo of his sweetheart. On Mr. Bebgie's return he immediately falls in love with the original, and laments his continual failure to find the powder. In the midst of his lamenations an old portrait luckily falls down, and at the back thereof the housekeeper discovers a packet, which, on examination, is found to contain the long sought for powders. The old man promptly mixes and swallows one, falls unconscious to the ground, rises up looking and feeling like twenty-five, and starts out to have the time of his life.

In the second act we find Mr. Begbie so transformed that his housekeeper does not know him, and on Miss Garthwaite coming in a second time he recognises the original of the photo, and she thinks he is her sweetheart. A series of complications arise between Mr. Begbie and Matilda (whom he has promised to marry), Miss Garthwaite, her father and mother, and Ferdinand Begbie, jun., ending by Mr. Begbie ordering Matilda to meet him at the railway station. Suspicion is roused by the disappearance of old Begbie and the appearance of this young man who calls himself Walter Robinson, and the matter is placed in the hands of the police.

The third act takes place in the garden of the Hollyhock inn, where old Begbie, calling himself Walter Robinson, turns up, as does also Turnbull, a detective, on the look-out for the supposed murderer of Mr. Begbie. The old man, in desperation, tries to hocuss the detective by giving him one of the powders. Several funny incidents here occur, and finally Mr. Begbie himself drinks the whisky and water primed with the magical powder, totters on to the stage in his natural character, and everything is explained.

Mr. J. E. Watson's company did admirable work with the materials provided. Jessie Garthwaite was charmingly portrayed by Miss Evelyn Ormonde; the detective was well rendered by Mr. Alfred Field-Fisher; and the housekeeper was admirably played by Miss Phyllis Manners. Mr. F. G. Thurstans, in the dual parts of the Begbies, worked particularly hard and was well received. Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood and Miss Madeline Du Val as Mr. and Mrs. Garthwaite were satisfactory; Mr. J. E. Watson made the most of the country landlord, Juniper; Miss Madge Elswick was a comely and smart Emma; and Mr. Dudley Walton is good as Tom Spinks.

Mrs. Lionel Marks, the fair American who carried off from 300 competitors the £200 prize for the original play to be produced at Stratford-on-Avon on May 14, is (says the Chronicle) young, pretty, soft of voice and quiet of manner, full of a curious old-fashioned grace that tells of her native Boston, and an almost unbelievable contrast to the strident type of American woman that most of us know and all have heard. She is the wife of the Professor of Engineering at Harvard. Professor Marks is a Birmingham man, but it was a mere chance that his wife happened to hear of the Stratford competition, thousands of miles away, and her play was chosen solely on its merits. Her maiden name was Peabody; she is a connection by marriage of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and her people, if they did not actually go over in the Mayflower, all belong to the New England aristocracy of Boston and Salem. Like all good Americans, she has already made one pilgrimage to Stratford-on-Avon. This time, being a good Boston mother, she has brought her two little children with her.

The play itself, which is called The Piper, is a dramatisation of the famous old legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin, but is on entirely new lines. "What I should like to emphasise," she says, "is that it is not merely a play for children. It is symbolic and emotional, and instead of being a supernatural figure, the piper himself is entirely human with no magic about him whatever. Indeed, it is the development of his character that is the principal thing in the play. In the main, the Hamelin townsfolk represent the worldly, pragmatical element; the piper is an idealist, and that is what attracts the children. The rats, I might mention, are all cleared off before the curtain goes up.

"Together with the higher qualities, there is a certain brutality in the piper's character, and this is where my heroine's purpose comes in. She is to be played by Miss Marion Terry, Mr. Benson playing the piper, and I am hoping that the audience may be at any rate a little moved by the scene where she pleads with him to give the children back. I only know I shed some tears over it myself, though I may tell you that the play has a happy ending."

The play is, it may be added, in verse. For this Mrs. Marks apologised. "I would have avoided verse most willingly if I could," she pleaded, "but when you can't help it, surely it is right!" It is a significant fact, too, that it is an almost direct product of the dramatic classes held at Harvard University under Professor Baker. "I attended Mr. Baker's lecture on Christopher Marlowe," Mrs. Marks said, "and the result was that I was moved to write a play on the life of the poet himself. That was my first dramatic effort, and it was acted by Mr. Baker and the Harvard students. This pied-piper play is my second attempt, written originally simply to please myself. It has just been published in America, and the first reviews were waiting for me in this country. I am glad to see that they have all been very flattering."

The Channel Islands raise other good things besides flowers and fruit. This statement is proved by the fact that three prominent laughter-makers in the current London Coliseum programme hail from Jersey and Guernsey—Messrs. Seymour Hicks, Geo. H. (FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Flight, a drama in four acts, by Charles March, was produced at the Theatre Royal, West Stanley, on Monday evening. The story is one of thrilling interest, and relates how a young English engineer, John Trevor, invented the aeroplane, which he offered for sale to the British Government. They, however, refused to listen to him. He then opened negotiations with a foreign power, but before he could complete his arrangements he was arrested and imprisoned for trafficking in Government secrets at the instigation of Spencer Wilmot, who afterwards, along with an accomplice, Pritchard, stole the plans of Trevor's invention and followed out the scheme, built the machine, and were about to conduct the trial flights, when John Trevor arrived on the scene and put a stop to their game. In the Hangaar scene a full-sized Bleriot machine is used, and both this and the Aerodrome scene are the acme of stagecraft. The part of John Trevor is played with great power by the author; Mr. P. Ballard is excellent as Wilmot; Mr. H. Compton gives a good reading of Rice Pritchard, and the comedy lacks nothing in the hands of Mr. E. Hall Eldon. Miss E. Yates is very winning as Elsie Maynard, and Miss Violet Crawford plays Mrs. Trevor with credit. The minor parts are well played by Messrs. Court Harvard, J. Harrell, P. Quinn, Percy Hall, A. G. Holroyd, and A. Lockhart.

LYCEUM CLUB.

The fourth performance arranged by the dramatic sub-committee of the Lyceum Club was given at the Club House, 128, Piccadilly, on Wednesday afternoon last.

The programme was made up of three items, the first a fifteen minutes' human incident, Jim's Sweetheart, by Mrs. Wakeman Lathrop and Mrs. Herbert Bennett, adapted from Mrs. Lathrop's "Autobiography of a Charwoman." It was originally announced that Mr. Ivan Berlyn would play the part of Jim Jakes, the shoemaker, but Mr. Herbert Bird was seen in the character of the unlucky cobbler when the curtains were drawn aside better late than never. The story is an excellent one. Betty is Jim's sweetheart, and the day before they are to be married at a registry office she visits the little home Jim has got ready for her for the first time. But Jim is strangely altered, and naturally Betty wants to know the reason of it. At last he confesses that news has come to him only that day that his first wife, whom he had believed dead, is alive. Now, although Betty had made just one little slip in the past, and a small boy is in existence as evidence of the fact, she scorns Jim's suggestion that as they cannot get married they shall live together. He pleads with her in vain, and not being a bad sort really, he allows her to leave him with a couple of presents for the kiddie, whom he had intended to bring up and treat as though he had been his own boy. And so Betty goes from him; but not for long. She returns, and sobbingly tells him of her great love for him, and that she will brave the world's scorn for his sake. But Jim has pulled himself together in the meantime, and gently, but firmly, he tells her that this may not be, and that they will hope and wait. Miss Jessica Salomon as Betty was extremely good and natural in a difficult part, and Mr. Bird made a very earnest study of the shoemaker whose luck was out.

A number of French recitations were next given by Mlle. Beatrice Von Holthoir. Her terse style and quaint mannerisms won her the heartiest applause. "A fanciful forecast," entitled A Hundred Years Hence, by Mr. Stanley Clark was also given, in which Miss Muriel Currey and Mr. John Beamish appeared. This amusing trifle has recently toured the provinces as a curtain-raiser, and should be seen in London.

One significant line of the programme may be quoted: "Ladies are most earnestly requested to remove their hats." And with but very few exceptions hats were conspicuous by their absence, but "woman's glory," arranged in the many entrancing fashions of the day, was a notable feature of the assembly.

The College paper at Cambridge, The Granta, has been commenting cautiously on the recent bad behaviour of the undergraduates at the New Theatre. The Granta says: "The behaviour of undergraduates at the New Theatre is becoming a serious reproach to the University. It is intolerable that a small section of mannerless schoolboys should be allowed to monopolise the house, while decent people cannot attend the performances without feeling ashamed and disgusted at the behaviour of their neighbours.

"We notice that the programme for this term at the New Theatre is of an exceptionally high order, and we congratulate the management on having taken the first and most effective step towards eradicating the nuisance.

There are, however, more parties to the case, and we must return for a moment to the undergraduate. As we have hinted, the section of undergraduates which collects at the theatre with the honourable object of emphasising any possible double meaning is very small and very unimportant in the University. These are, probably, in their own estimation graduating for the position of 'sportsmen,' and think it just as much the duty of a conscientious 'nut' to shout indecencies in a theatre when an actress's 'purity' is alluded to as to imbibe unnecessary whisky or adopt a studied vapidity. There is little hope that they could ever be induced to understand that they are behaving like unmitigated cads."

The Stage Society's next production, which will be given at the Aldwych Theatre on the evening of May 8 and the afternoon of May 9, is called Champions of Morality, and is a translation by Messrs. A. H. Hertz and Frederick Whelen of Moral, by Franz Thoma, a satirical comedy which has already been performed in Germany and Austria some 300 nights.

The Hebbel Theatre, Berlin, will produce to-night a new three-act drama, the plot of which treats of competition in business circles. The title is Konkurrenten, and there is a prologue, entitled In der Pension, which is practically another act, and shows the two principal characters as boys in a boarding school.

At the Theatre Royal, Norwich, on Saturday, Miss Senna St. Clair was presented with a handsome bouquet by the members of the Sexton Blake combination on the occasion of her severance from the company after a tour of sixty weeks, during which she has appeared as Philadelphia Kate.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday, at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Sir Whitaker Thompson (chairman) presiding.

THEATRE AND MUSIC HALL LICENCES.

As happened at last week's meeting, the adjourned recommendations of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee were not reached until after 7.30, when only unopposed business can be taken. The Committee's report appeared in last week's Era. The first recommendation had reference to music and dancing and stage-play licences. The Committee recommended that the reference to the Theatres and Music Halls Committee on Dec. 21-22, 1909, to consider and report what amendments should me made in the standing orders of the Council with the view to granting a general and uniform licence to all places of entertainment licensed by the Council under which it would be optional for the licensee, subject to such restrictions as may be considered desirable, to give either dramatic or what are known as variety entertainments, be discharged.

Mr. George Alexander has given notice of the following amendment: That all words after the word "That" in line 1 be omitted, and the following words substituted therefor:—"As the performance of stage-plays in buildings which are licensed for music and dancing only is illegal, the Council, when considering applications for music and dancing licences, will have regard to any evidence which may be submitted as to illegal production of stage-plays at places of entertainment licensed for music and dancing only."

CONDITIONS ATTACHED TO LICENCES.

The Committee recommended that licences granted under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, in respect of premises which are not licensed for music, music and dancing, or stage-plays, be subject to a condition as follows:—That persons be not permitted to stand or sit in any of the intersecting gangways, and, if standing be permitted in the gangways at the sides and rear of the seating, sufficient room be left for persons to pass easily to and fro.

The following notices of amendments to the recommendation have been given by Mr. Thomas, to be seconded by Mr. Lambert:—That all words after the word "to" in line 2 be omitted, and the following words substituted therefor: "conditions as follows—(i.) Persons must not be permitted to stand or sit in any part of the gangways; and (ii.) overcrowding must not be permitted in any part of the premises." By Mr. J. D. Gilbert, to be seconded by Sir John MacDougall:—That all words after the word "gangways" in line 3 be omitted.

JAPAN-BRITISH EXHIBITION.

The only unopposed recommendation of the Theatres Committee was one having reference to six drawings submitted by Mr. F. White, with regard to the arrangement of buildings at the Congress Hall and Cinematograph Hall at the Japan-British Exhibition, Shepherd's Bush. The Committee recommended approval of the arrangements, provided that certain stated conditions be complied with, and after an appeal had been made by Mr. Greenwood, chairman of the Committee, the recommendation was agreed to.

In the Chancery Division on Monday Mr. Justice Warrington dismissed, with costs, an action brought by Mr. Frank Curzon against Mr. John Highfield Leigh, which involved the question of which of them was responsible for the payment of the excise duty in respect of the sale of intoxicating liquors at the bars of the Prince of Wales Theatre, the position being that Mr. Curzon holds a seven years' lease of the theatre from Mr. Leigh, but has no interest in the bars, which are run by Mr. Edgar Bruce. Mr. Terrell, K.C., for the plaintiff, said that Mr. Curzon sold no excisеable liquors at all, but for the purposes of the theatre he had to obtain a theatre licence from the Lord Chamberlain. Having obtained that, it was not necessary under the Excise Acts to get a licence direct from the Justices. You could obtain one from the Inland Revenue Office, but they would only grant an excise licence to the person holding the Lord Chamberlain's licence. So, though Mr. Curzon had no interest whatever in the bars, he had to take out the excise licence and pay the annual fee of £20. Counsel asked for a declaration that Mr. Leigh was liable to repay the amount to Mr. Curzon. Mr. Cave, K.C., for the defendant, submitted that Mr. Leigh could not be compelled to repay Mr. Curzon, whatever the case might be against Mr. Bruce. His Lordship held that the excise duty was not included in the outgoings that the landlord covenanted to pay, and that there was no obligation expressed or implied upon the landlord to pay it. Mr. Curzon was not compelled to take out the excise licence. It was a voluntary payment by him, and he was not entitled to the declaration asked for.

Many years ago, when in Brechin, Wullie Frame, "the man you know," was approached by a Miss Jukes, who asked him to sing a few songs at the almshouses to cheer the old folk. "Wullie" not only came, but brought his company with him. It was "Wullie's" birthday, always remembered by the company, the people of Brechin and Miss Jukes taking every interest in the affair. In the course of time Miss Jukes passed away, but in order that the old people in whom she took so much interest should not lose their yearly holiday and entertainment, she left an annuity to provide a day's holiday for them to enjoy the entertainment, which "Wullie" has promised to give as long as he lives. This incident proves that though music-hall entertainers are often subject to undeserved slights, there are broad-minded people who can appreciate at its true value the kindly thought of a highly-popular artist.

Mr. E. T. Wilson, Acting Under Sheriff, sat with a jury at Preston Sessions House on Wednesday to assess damages in an action for slander, which was undefended, and in which the plaintiff was Walter Mould, 262, Burnley-road, Accrington, manager of the new Hippodrome, Accrington, and the defendant Samuel A. Mewha. Mr. Frank Rowland represented plaintiff. Early this year the Accrington Garrick Amateur Dramatic Society approached Mr. Mould and arranged to take the house from March 14 to March 19. The first performance took place on Monday, March 14, and consisted of The Silver King. It was the duty of the manager to collect the money taken at the door, and to make a return from the returns supplied by the people in the various offices, and then an epitome of these representing the money he had in his possession or tickets to that amount. Copies of this final return he gave, in this instance, to the treasurer and secretary of the Dramatic Society, and to his directors, who were his employers.

Mewha, the defendant, was the stage-manager of the society, and on the Monday night was standing behind the scenes with Mr. Hawkins, treasurer, who, with Mr. Upton, the secretary, had seen the returns for the night checked. Mr. Hawkins showed the return for the night to Mewha, and defendant then made a most extraordinary charge. He said: "What! Only £19? The house is blued; we are being diddled." Although Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Upton checked the returns again, and Mr. Mould made explanations to them about the returns, the accusations were continued. The directors of the Hippodrome sent for Mr. Mould, and told him they had heard of the accusations, and that he must clear himself or clear out. The jury found for plaintiff, with £50 damages.

Following the installation, luncheon was partaken of, the ladies joining the gentlemen. Several well-known artists in the theatrical world were present, and the programme, which was arranged by Bro. E. Wighton, of the Olympia, Liverpool, included such names as Chung Ling Soo, Suey Seen, Ed. E. Ford, Vera Elmore, Happy Fanny Fields, Milt Wood, A. Aldridge, Ruth Davenport. Other well-known guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Kelly (Birkenhead), Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wighton, Mr. N. E. Goffin (New Brighton Tower), Will Jones and the Misses Jones, Dr. and Mrs. Brewer, Mr. Charles Hand, Mr. A. Leighton, Mr. S. Carter, Mr. F. Parker, Mr. J. Moir, Mr. A. Richards, Mr. A. Prince, Mr. F. and Mrs. Weston (Birkenhead), and Winnie Browne, Havana company. Letters of apology were read from Lord Egerton of Tatton, the Duke of Devonshire, Oswald Stoll, Edward Terry, J. M. McLeod, Will Sley, Walter de Frece, and Miss Vesta Tilley, Bro. and Mrs. Fred Bulmer, Bro. and Mrs. Gar Kiddie, Bro. and Mrs. A. T. Wright, Bro. Horace Cole, Bro. Walter Hassan, Bro. Harry Arnold, and Lord Derby, and others.

Tea was partaken of on the terraces, and at the conclusion the brethren and guests met again in the banqueting hall, when a list of toasts was submitted.

W. Bro. Taylor gave "The Charities," which was heartily drunk.

In a neat and appropriate speech W. Bro. Romer gave the toast of the evening, "Our Master," saying that he was sure the Lodge would prosper under the guidance of their newly-elected W.M. He would add to its lustre, and members would feel a justifiable pride in belonging to the Bohemian Lodge.

The Worshipful Master, in response, made a happy speech, in which he promised to do all he could for the prosperity of the Lodge. That was one of the proudest moments of his life, and he trusted he would fully justify the honour they had conferred upon him.

W. Bro. A. J. Thompson submitted "Our Hosts." He alluded to the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Lever in receiving them at the Manor and giving them an open house. They knew in Masonic matters what Bro. Lever had done for their charities, not only locally, but in connection with the central institutions. Bro. Lever had invited the Bohemian Lodge, later in the year, to a garden party at Thornton Manor, so that instead of being tired of them, he wanted them there again. Bro. Thompson proceeded to state that he had received a piece of stone which had come from the wailing place of the Jews, which was the outer wall of the temple of King Solomon of Jerusalem. They had placed a small portion of the stone in a brooch, which they wished to present to their hostess. He had the greatest pleasure, on behalf of the members of the Bohemian Lodge, in presenting that little token. The stone, as she would see, contained an inscription as follows:

"This stone is from the wailing place or outer wall of King Solomon's temple at Jerusalem."

Mrs. W. H. Lever, having received the gift, was loudly cheered. She replied, addressing the gathering as "brothers and sisters," a remark which elicited loud applause. She briefly expressed her gratitude for the exquisite gift.

Similar brooches were presented also to Mrs. Tafner and Mrs. A. J. Thompson.

W. Bro. W. H. Lever, in replying to the toast, alluded to the pleasure it gave him and his wife to receive the guests, and made a humorous and characteristic speech, terminating with a pleasant surprise by pointing to the walls of the banqueting hall and selecting a beautiful water-colour picture of the Holy Land in which a letter-writer was depicted in his work, and asking Bro. Thompson to accept it from him as a memento of his visit to the Holy Land and the piece of stone which had been forwarded to him from the temple of King Solomon.

W. Bro. Thompson suitably replied, saying he would treasure the gift all his life.

The Senior Warden gave the health of the ladies, and

W. Bro. Taylor gave the toast of the "Immediate Past Master," and presented him with a Past Master's jewel and a large framed portrait of himself. He further presented a handsome rose bowl to Mrs. Romer.

The portrait was the work of Bro. Russell, who has offered to present a portrait of the I.P.M. each year.

W. Bro. Romer responded in suitable terms.

Other toasts followed. Songs were given by Miss Maude Hughes, who delighted the audience.

The menu card was designed and printed by Will Jones, of Liverpool, and enclosed in a bandana handkerchief to represent a Bohemian dinner. The brooches were designed and made by Messrs. Oldfields, Ltd., of Old Post Office-place, Liverpool. The Hebrew inscription was written by the Rev. W. L. Walter, Professor of Hebrew at St. Aidan's College, Birkenhead.

BREAKING RECORDS FOR BIG BUSINESS EVERYWHERE.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

MELBOURNE, March 23.—Princess's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. J. B. Moutrie.—The Night of the Party, which has had a successful run at the Princess Theatre, will be withdrawn after to-morrow night. The piece has proved a great fun-maker, as large audiences have enjoyed themselves immensely over Mr. David James as the obsequious butler and other bright characters. Next Saturday evening is fixed for the appearance of Miss Nellie Stewart in J. M. Barrie's comedy What Every Woman Knows. Miss Stewart will sustain the character of Maggie Wylie.

Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. E. J. Tait.—The up-to-date American play, The Lion and the Mouse, was repeated at Her Majesty's Theatre on Saturday evening. The very large house exhibited the most hearty appreciation of the play. The leading parts are sustained by Mr. Julius Knight and Miss Katherine Gray, an American actress of distinct merit. The central idea of the play is so clearly defined in the first act that the interest of the house is at once gripped. The play abounds in strong situations.

Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. Arthur Levy.—On Saturday evening a large and enthusiastic house witnessed the performance of Sergeant Brue. The doings of the gallant sergeant and his comrades were followed with delighted interest. The play is full of good things, and the fun never flags from start to finish. The cast is an excellent one, and the staging matches it in excellence. The last performances are now announced. On Saturday evening next The Arcadians will be staged for the first time in Australia.

King's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. William Anderson; Business-Manager, Mr. Julius Grant.—The Prince and the Beggar Maid was repeated on Saturday evening. The building was packed in every part, and the pleasing drama was repeated with all the success which has hitherto characterised its career. On the first night the best judges pronounced that The Prince and the Beggar Maid would prove an effective draw, and so it has. The last nights are, however, now announced. Saturday evening next sees the first performance of A Thief in the Night.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Frederic Aydon.—On Saturday night Mlle. De Dio was heartily applauded by a large audience for her graceful prismatic dances, which were the leading feature of the evening. This is the second season of Mlle. De Dio, whose charming and novel turn can scarcely fail to please. The dance has many embellishments, being full of colour and vivacity. The rest of the programme was as good as ever.

Children on the Stage—Managers, agents, entrepreneurs, and performers wishing to possess a copy of the "Complete Act" can do so by forwarding three stamps to the Publisher, The Era offices, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS FOR BUSINESS MANAGERS.
How the Affairs of a Theatre can be most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.
By CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY,
Chartered Accountant.
Price, 3/6. Post free, 3/9.

All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts," by Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.), shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Morning Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (3s. 6d., The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.). The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

THE MATINEE HAT.

Mr. FRANK CURZON'S courageous and skilful method of dealing with the matinée hat question has attracted attention to a matter of serious importance to theatrical managers and the public, and illustrates the difficulty of dealing rationally with irrational arrangements. At first it may seem a simple thing to insist on every lady removing her hat at a matinée; but the practical manager has a very large section of his patrons to consider. The extent to which matinées at theatres are attended by the fair sex is hardly realised by the mere man; and the manager has to decide if it will pay him to offend his best supporters. For it is a curious fact that the opposition to the matinée hat usually comes not from women but men. The freemasonry which exists between members of the so-called "weaker" sex must not be recklessly disregarded. Apparently there is a tacit agreement amongst ladies to allow their view of the stage to be obstructed by the hats of other ladies, provided that the first section are allowed to obstruct the view of others behind them. The pleasure of exhibiting the hat thus seems to compensate for the imperfect view of the stage. But here again we are met by a mystery. It has always been an axiom that women decorate themselves with hats and other absurdities in order to attract the attention of men. As matinées are chiefly composed of women, what result do they obtain by the display of hats? Is it that there is a spirit of competition amongst the women as to which shall wear the largest and most flamboyant hat? We cannot tell.

The decision given by Mr. CURTIS BENNETT at Bow Street that "a manager has a right to insist on a lady leaving the theatre if she refuses to remove an obstructing hat" is excellent as far as it goes; but it does not touch the real crux of the matter. The manager is between two fires—the male and the female. The male who finds himself at a matinée with his view of the stage reduced to a mere slice by a grove of immense hats naturally looks to the manager for protection and support. On the other hand, the manager has his popularity and that of his playhouse to consider. Under present arrangements, the female sex enjoys great advantages. They may hit the men, but the men must not hit them back again; and the same female who resists coercion in most strong-minded style can suddenly fall back on her status as an alleged weakling as soon as there is any attempt at "removing" her. One of the many humorous postcards which came out a short time since relating to the suffragist movement showed a diminutive clerk contemplating with dread an immense and athletic female suffragist at a male meeting. He was represented as saying to her, "Madame, will you leave quietly, or must I use force?" But even with "force" at one's command it is hardly expedient to use it. A lady who defies a manager to remove her from her seat vi et armis places that manager in a very awkward predicament. Considerable exertion of strength is needed to extract from a stall a strong female who takes a firm grip of the furniture. The result is a "painful scene," in which the sympathies of the audience are sure to be on the side of the "poor, weak" woman and opposed to the "great, rough, blackguardly men" who are "ill-treating" her. In ejecting the suffragettes from a meeting at the Albert Hall it was found necessary to invert them; and this method, harmless except for the inevitable flow of blood to the head, excited the greatest indignation. If a man gives a woman a push in turning her out, what is easier than for her to fall on the floor, say she has been knocked down, and faint away? It is all very well for Mr. CURTIS BENNETT to rule that the manager has a right to "insist" on a lady leaving her seat if she refuses to remove an obstructing hat; but insisting is useless unless accompanied by forcible action. Glendower boasted that he could call spirits from the vasty deep; but Hotspur very sensibly enquired whether they would come when they were thus summoned. Mr. CURZON, in his recent engagement, succeeded—as so many able generals have succeeded—by taking advantage of a mistake on the part of the enemy. There were the usual obstructive hats, the usual male complaint, and the usual refusal to remove them. Then Mr. CURZON imitated the strategy of WILLIAM OF NORMANDY at the battle of Hastings, when he induced the Saxons to leave the strong position which had proved impregnable. He sent a messenger to the ladies, and they went out into the corridor. This was a strategic error which enabled Mr. CURZON to win his battle. It is, as we have said, almost out of the question to "remove" a lady from the stalls in the sight of a sympathetic audience. But it is easy, when once you have her out in a corridor, to oppose her re-entrance. Here the greater weight and solidity of the male figure are invaluable. This manœuvre gained for Mr. CURZON the victory. He could place himself in the way of the ladies, and throw upon them the onus of attack. It was a masterly stroke; but it will not work "next time." The obstructionists will be on their guard, and will refuse to leave their strongholds and give battle in corridors.

Nevertheless, Mr. CURZON'S courage in facing the difficulty, and his craft in meeting and overcoming it, were beyond all praise; and we trust that the ladies generally, with whom, apart from his managerial responsibilities, Mr. CURZON is a great favourite, will visit in their hundreds the exhibition of theatre toques which he has arranged for Messrs. REVILLE and ROSSITER to give on the stage at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Monday afternoon, and reward his bravery with fair play, retrenchment of headgear, and reform.

MR. CHARLES COLTSON'S TESTIMONIAL

A luncheon was given in the dome of His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday, the 26th inst., to Mr. C. I. Coltson, the respected secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, to serve as a vehicle whereby an illuminated address and a handsome cheque could be presented to that indefatigable official.

Sir Herbert Tree presided at the function and eulogised the admirable qualities of Mr. C. I. Coltson. Only the personal friends of Mr. Coltson were present, and these included Messrs. J. D. Langton, Henry Evill, R. Clay Sudlow, E. H. Bull, Sydney Paxton, Chas. Cruikshanks, and F. H. Pedgrift. There were nearly one hundred of the best-known signatures in the theatrical world affixed to the address.

This luncheon and presentation gave one an indication of the extremely busy man Sir Herbert is, for despite the fact that he had been rehearsing all the morning, and would be doing so again in the afternoon, with a performance to follow in the evening, he yet found time to be present at a function to do honour to an old associate and colleague, and also to be present at a meeting of his brother managers to discuss vital questions in connection with theatrical interests.

A beautiful album, bound in red morocco, contained the address and the names of the subscribers. Sir Charles Wyndham, as President of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, signed the address. The following is the text:

"Presented to Mr. C. I. Coltson by some of the friends of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, as a token of their affectionate regard and of their high appreciation of the manner in which he has discharged the duties of secretary during the past twenty-one years.

"(Signed) CHARLES WYNDHAM,

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—With reference to a paragraph in last week's issue of your paper anent Mr. Wentworth Croke's version of East Lynne, in which you mention as a novelty that "Beauty's eyes" will be sung in place of "When other lips," I should like to draw attention to the fact that that song has been sung in Miss Grace Warner's version of the piece for at least five years, also that the chief novelty of that lady's version, apart from the part of Little Willie being played by a boy, is the fact that the piece itself is not a new version of this famous novel, but a most realistic portrayal of the old, old story which is so familiar to us all.—Yours faithfully,

April 28, 1910. ROY RHIND.

MR. RICHARD MOULD, chief librarian and curator of the Southwark Public Library, writes: "Steps have already been taken by the Southwark Public Libraries and Museums Committee for the provision of a public Shakespeare library in London. It will be part of their Central Reference Library, which is located in the district with which the poet's London life was most prominently identified, and within a stone's throw of the site of the old Newington Theatre, where he acted and produced his plays before the more famous Globe was built. The object of the Southwark Library authorities is to house a Shakespearean Memorial Library in an apartment at the Central Library, fitted and furnished in the Elizabethan style, and formally to dedicate it in 1916—the tercentenary year.

Mr. Alexander Henderson's new production at the Apollo is a bright, lively, and amusing piece, which only requires a little judicious revision to make it a complete and lasting success. It starts with well-chosen surroundings. The Navy has always been a popular service, and the success of The Flag Lieutenant has shown the deep interest which is taken by the British public in anything naval, if well represented on the stage. And the scene of the first act of The Islander is remarkably realistic and complete. Two long guns, which have an illusive appearance of solidity, protrude from an armoured fort, practicable ladders lead up to decks on which stand officers and look-out men, and the whole effect is most imposing. It appears that the mission of this magnificent ironclad is the annexation of a certain island in the Persian Gulf. But Sir William Pickerton, the local Commissioner, has lost the despatches which contained the instructions which were to direct the movements of the captain of the vessel, who consequently takes action on his own responsibility. A party of English ladies come on board, including Lady Birkenhead, a globe-trotter; Wilhelmina and Georgina, her daughters; and Kitty McIan, her ward.

Scarcely have these been shown over the ship when the approach is announced of Mirza Makh Ali Khan, the local Pasha, who, after receiving much diplomatic compliment, reveals himself as a canny Scotsman who has obtained the position of Pasha by marriage. Captain Jarrett explains the object of his mission, and the Pasha agrees to do a "deal" for the island, if the captain and his officers will come and dine with him on shore. In the course of this act there are frequent love-passages between Lieut. the Hon. D'Arcy Langton and Kitty, and Lieut. Reginald Hume and the Pasha's daughter, the Princess Haidee, an artless but beautiful Oriental.

The second act takes place in the beautiful gardens of the Pasha's Palace, where the ladies of the harem are singing, dancing, and reposing. It was the Pasha, it appears, who caused Sir William's papers to be purloined, and he is going to drive a hard bargain for his share of the spoil. In this he succeeds admirably, especially as the island has belonged to England all the time. He recognises in Kitty his daughter by his first wife, and she consequently becomes a Princess. The young people pair off prettily, and the merry musical comedy concludes.

Much of the success of The Islander was doubtless due to the excellent way in which each character was sustained by a cleverly-chosen cast. The success of the evening was won by that charming artist, Miss Elsie Spain, as Kitty McIan. Miss Spain had a part which suited her exactly, and she won the warm approbation of the audience by her arch and animated acting, her sweet and expressive singing, and her dainty dancing. Her triumph commenced with the song "Kitty" in the first act, and was continued throughout the piece. Her picturesque appearance, both in English and Persian costume, the vivid expression which she put into the delivery of her dialogue, and her bright, winning, and piquant personality won the enthusiastic applause of the house again and again. Miss Spain had a part worthy of her talent, and she scored in it to the highest possible degree. All her songs were encored, and she was frequently and enthusiastically applauded. Another strikingly successful rendering was Mr. Neil Kenyon's Pasha. The "pawky" humour of the creation, the dry, quiet style of Mr. Kenyon's acting, and the admirable ease and self-restraint of his whole performance made it intensely enjoyable. Mr. Sam Walsh gave full force to the peremptory vigour of Captain Alderson Jarrett; and Mr. Fred Allandale acted with brisk vivacity as Lieut. the Hon. D'Arcy Langton, and sang his songs capitally. Mr. Laurence Legge doing excellent work as Lieut. Reginald Hume, and playing the part with skill and spirit. A word of praise is due to Master Bobbie Andrews, who made a sharp "midshipmite"; and Miss Ethel Morrison was duly aristocratic and self-important as Lady Birkenhead, Miss Mary Dibley and Miss Elaine Inescourt being alert and agreeable representatives of the two daughters. Mr. Lawrence Caird, whose style and appearance were excellent, acted quite in the comedy spirit as Sir William Pickerton; and Mr. Reginald Lawrence was quaint and characteristic as the Pasha's High Treasurer, Hakim Sirdar. Miss Mabel Burnege not only looked picturesquely handsome as the Princess Haidee, but sang a very sweet, sentimental song in the second act with deep feeling and expression; and Miss Lesley Everell gave a neat performance as Sister Katharine. The minor rôles were well and carefully represented; and a solo dance in the second act by Miss Sybil Warren was much admired. The piece was carefully produced by Mr. Harry Grattan. The naval uniforms and costumes were made by Messrs. Nathan from designs by Karl; and Mr. Bruce Smith must be warmly praised for his elaborate and effective scenery.

Turning the Tables.

CHARLES MATHEWS and Frank Matthews were playing together at the St. James's Theatre. Charles at that time was in pecuniary difficulties, and had the reputation of never paying his debts. Frank, on the other hand, was a steady man, whose word was his bond. Frank had a pint of stout sent in every night from a neighbouring hostelry, which he paid for once a week. The boy brought it in as usual one night, and was intercepted by Charles, who said to him: "I'm going to Mr. Matthews's room and will give it to him." So, thinking to take a rise out of Frank, he knocked at his door, and imitating the boy's voice, said: "I've brought your beer, Mr. Matthews." Frank shouted through the closed door: "Put it down on the shelf outside, boy."

Charles, still imitating the lad's voice, said: "Please, Mr. Matthews, my master says I'm not to leave it without the money. He has his doubts about you."

By this time Frank had tumbled to the deception, and turned the tables on Charles by saying: "Oh! it's evidently Mr. Charles Mathews you want. The beer—and the message—must be for him."

MR. COMPTON ON COMEDY.

Mr. Edward Compton, in his lecture on "New Humour and Old Comedy," at the Manchester Playgoers' Club on Sunday last, said:—It is recorded in the annals of Olympus that when Hephæstros, better known as Vulvan, limped on a fine morning into the midst of the divine assembly his peers laughed immoderately. The limp alone was funny enough, but the knowledge that his deformity was the result of a kick from the father of gods and men added intensely to the risible character of the situation. The theatrical "gods" of to-day gain a similar delight from the spectacle of a human being (whose appearance is eccentric on account of mauve eyebrows, or emerald nose, or conical head) suddenly tripped up, and flung with violence upon the stage by the ingenious accomplice who assists him to earn a large salary and infinite applause.

This primitive type of humour probably dates back to the acrobatic originals of mankind. The first laugh was probably at the expense of some unskilful ape, whose tail "let him down" rather badly. It would, perhaps, be hazardous to speculate further about these prehistoric jests, but I think we should be safe in a conjecture that the offer of an empty cocoanut was the first practical joke.

The latter still earns a hearty laugh. Children still offer eggshells upside down to unsuspecting governesses. Comedians still present explosive cigarettes to innocent companions. The humour lies rather in expectation than realisation; in the existence of a large body of initiated persons and one dupe.

Now, although these unsophisticated and childish jests "make the judicious grieve," they have a considerable value, inasmuch as the judicious are rare birds—outside the aviary of dramatic criticism.

It is useless to pretend that only the gallery and the pit are diverted by the misfortunes of others. It is true that the inhabitants of boxes and the frequenters of stalls do not nudge one another with the same ecstasy of appreciation; but observe what apologetic smiles betray the human hearts beneath the well-starched shirt-front and the courtly corsage.

When a young lady informs you that Shakespeare's humour bores her it does not mean that the cocoanut joke bores her, but that she is not sufficiently mistress of her own language to enjoy Elizabethan wit. For though acrobatic humour still engages our delight, I fear that acrobatic wit is out of fashion, and Chantecler just a succès de costume. Yet, notwithstanding the indisputable fact that it is possible for an audience composed of entities widely divergent in their views of life to be temporarily united under the great banner of laughter, it is equally indisputable that such an emotional event is hardly ever recorded at the present time.

The most disquieting tendency in modern English drama is the continually widening breach between—what shall I say?—sophistication and unsophistication, complex and simple, fustian and plush. After all, any attempt to divide a great nation so arbitrarily is absurd, and yet the division unhappily exists.

Speaking broadly, the erstwhile frequenters of the popular parts of the theatre now patronise to a great extent the music halls. "'Tis true 'tis pity, and pity 'tis 'tis true." This is due partly, I think, to the often feeble fare (from their point of view) provided by the theatres, partly by the usurpation of their privileges by the suburbs.

At one time the upper circle was par excellence the haunt of the denizens of the latter, but whether the burden of the middle classes has driven them to sink their respectability in cheapness, or whether the increased facilities of transit have tempted them to go to the theatre more often, causing them to pay four separate shillings rather than four shillings all at once, I do not know. At any rate, I will venture to wager that you will not find at a modern comedy a single representative of the masses.

Neither do you find them to any great extent at the musical comedies; and, because they have been banished, the London theatre of to-day is a barren place.

The theatre audiences, therefore, lack in a great measure the unanimity of enjoyment which infects a popular music hall. In proportion to the amount of real life on the stage, the real life in the audience is decreasing. It applauds not because it wants to applaud, but because it thinks that loud appreciation is a politeness. The latter, speaking generally, has become as meaningless as the conventional call after a dinner or dance.

There is no need to worry about the absence of culture among costermongers, but there is great need to fret over the excess of culture in Surbiton.

I propose to elaborate my contention by contrasting eighteenth-century comedy and twentieth-century comedy, as I think that the former may serve as a sign post, or, rather, danger signal, to the road which the drama is following. I know from a very happy personal experience that the former is still able to attract a much more representative audience than the latter. You are always told by the critics that the eighteenth century was the age of artifice. You are expected to believe that it was imposed on the rest of time, as one of its own patches was imposed on the cheek of one of its own wise and witty women. You are told by the painters and novelists that it was the age of sentiment, by the parsons that it was the age of scepticism, and by the dramatists that it was the age of highwaymen, high-spirited young men, and high play.

They are all more or less wrong. It was essentially the age of commonsense—cool, sound, calculating commonsense, and as such a great deal nearer to us than the high-falutin' century which intervened—that romantic epoch which began with the Revolution, went on to keepsakes, perpetrated the Albert Memorial, and expired with the Yellow Book.

Dr. Samuel Johnson was the representative figure of the eighteenth century—the man who summed up in himself his period, who was regarded by his contemporaries as the epitome of their noblest emotions, their most admired virtues—the advocate of their most cherished prejudices, and the orator of their profoundest commonsense.

"Johnson, thou shouldest be living at this hour. England hath need of thee." We have far too many loud "inglorious Miltons."

I confess I should like some Boswell of the daily Press to invite his opinion on—but were I to specify what, I fear I should trespass upon the borders of the uncharitable.

What I like about Johnson, and what his contemporaries liked about him, was that they knew where they were with him. He wrote an unconscionable amount of bosh, and held an enormous number of wrong-headed views, but he was absolutely sincere, and he had a wonderfully keen scent for a charlatan.

Among the many good and great things which he condemned was Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer. He said it was low, in so far as it introduced a number of low characters. He stigmatised it as farce, not comedy. In fact, he summed up the opinion of the first audience that saw it performed. Now our modern critics are apt to be so much engrossed with their own opinions that they fail to discover the opinion of the audience at all.

Johnson was wrong; the first audience was wrong. She Stoops to Conquer survived the double censure, and is still vital enough to attract gallery, pit, and boxes. So is The School for Scandal; so, in a lesser degree, is The Rivals.

No doubt their reputation is, to a certain extent, responsible for this; but it would be a great mistake to suppose that reputation alone is sufficient to endow bygone literature with present life. The pundits of criticism do not influence more than their contemporaries. No conspiracy of praise, no admiring claque lends them an ephemeral rejuvenation. The applause that hails their repetition is not the greeting of ghosts—no; no—the public still enjoys their performance. Familiarity certainly helps an audience to appreciate them, but the passion of humanity for twice-told tales is very ancient. The onlookers are not hampered by the need of following an unfamiliar story. This allows free play to their artistic faculties. The Elizabethan dramatists and the Greek dramatists always chose well-known stories for their plays. Unbound by the intolerable chains of invention, they could devote the best of their gifts to the elaboration, or simplification, or novel presentation of an old theme, and their listeners or readers were able to give this aspect of their plays a fuller and worthier attention. The progress of the tale was, as it were, an instinct.

In so far as the relation of the history moved them, it moved them by its very familiarity. The emotion of irony, as the Greeks called it, was one of the strongest artistic emotions possible to conceive.

All round those gigantic stone amphitheatres, during the slow progress of a tragedy, sat the populace of Athens, equal in wisdom to the high gods—equal to them in knowledge, but without power to deter the beloved hero from his doom.

This same love of irony possesses the soul of the present playgoer. Sit in the popular parts of a provincial theatre, and you will hear a continual murmur of explanations all round you. Mrs. Smith does not believe that Mrs. Jones can enjoy a situation unless she is made acquainted with it. The last thing an audience likes is a surprise. Observe with what passionate reiteration Mrs. Smith insists that Lady Teazle is actually behind the screen. She is terribly anxious for Mrs. Jones to appreciate the irony of Sir Peter's revelation of his innate goodness to Joseph Surface.

What is the motive of all old comedies? Mistaken identity—the simplest mechanical device to give even an unfamiliar audience this sense of irony. And rightly, too, for a comedy is, after all, only a laughable tragedy. It must be to some extent artificial. If it were not, it would be a tragedy, and this tragedy itself must have a drop curtain to end it or it would be insupportable.

I remember that once, when Mr. Henry James was paying me a visit, he went to watch the performance of the School for Scandal. When I asked him how he liked it, he replied: "A curious old play, a very curious old play." Now Mr. James's conception of drama is a psychological one. For him, the artless arrangements of Sheridan have no more interest than an old piece of furniture. He regards life from an utterly different standpoint. A master of analysis, he has no patience with so synthetic a presentation of emotions. The value of the play, for him, is destroyed by the inherent absurdity of the psychological situations. But what he did not understand was, that to an audience lacking as a whole any fine mental acuteness, the dramatic revolutions of Lady Teazle's temperament could only be expressed in the way it is. An audience prefers an effect to a cause, and I am inclined to think that the drama was invented to present effect in the form most comprehensible to the majority. The School for Scandal is merely a conventional and theatrical expression of a series of temperamental platitudes. It appeals to a base idealism in its advice "Be generous before you're just." It is fundamentally immoral, and yet it affords an extraordinarily workable theory of life. Were I to seek to emulate the subtlety of Mr. Henry James, I would say that the continual success of Sheridan's comedy is due to the fact that while the conscious audience is loudly applauding the worst side of it, the sub-conscious audience, infected by the comic spirit, is all the while laughing at the banality of itself. While the former says, "There is nothing more noble than a man of sentiment," the latter replies, "Oh, damn your sentiment!"

The truth is that our modern comedy is based on a topsy-turvy theory of art and life. The new playwrights claim that drama should be stripped of conventions, and in their desperate eagerness to bring down the curtain of the last act between the first and second lump of sugar of a cup of tea, in order to avoid anything so dramatic or unexpected as a third lump, they forget that they are already fairly on the way to a convention of their own. Moreover, obsessed and overweighted by the responsibility of avoiding the dramatic, they are forced either into the contemplation and reproduction of the undramatic side of life or into the necessity of inventing a dramatic side of a life that only exists in their own daring and unconventional minds.

Life without conventions would cease to have any dramatic value. The characters in most of our modern comedies, choked by their own loquacity, expire of dramatic inanition. They are presented by their authors as real people. Their manipulation is extolled because the strings are invisible; they are congratulated because they do not talk in asides; but, indeed, they talk so much and so frankly to each other that there is no need for asides.

You have only to watch the faces in the theatre to see the disastrous effect of the new humour. Instead of being led by the comic spirit to a genial and refreshing view of the world—instead of being filled with a sense of ampler existence, a deeper knowledge of humanity, and an honest desire to eat a hearty supper—these pallid enthusiasts stream out from the comedy exhausted with conversation, exasperated with the censor, and only saved from despair by the prospect of reading at home the play they have just seen performed.

I confess that our modern dramatists do not impress me with this sense of passionate impulse. There is too much dawdling for the sake of dawdling. A digression can only be forgiven when it serves to knit the whole closer together. There is too great a tendency nowadays to affirm that everything possesses a dramatic value. This same want of determination displays itself in all the other arts. I believe it has arisen from a misapprehension of the aims of the Parnassians, the Symbolists, the Impressionists, and the rest of the artistic associations. The correlation of the Arts is an excellent working theory up to a point, but it is apt to lead enthusiasts into unwise appropriation; too much "shop" has led to "shop lifting."

An accentuation of the value of the personal equation seems to me another dangerous tendency. I cannot agree with those people who say that the point of view is the main importance, that windows opening on to bottle-haunted backyards, and summits of the wind-swept Apennine, are equally worth two guineas a week. The extra charge for light is inevitably so much heavier in the former apartment.

Moreover, with Solomon, I'm inclined to think that Impressionism is not so new as Whistler. Art has been a hole-and-corner affair for some time, and justified as such by the limitation of human vision. The landscape painter argues with reason that the reproduction of every feature with meticulous exactness is false, since no man can include so much in an impression. Now, if a great man works on this principle, all goes well, but, unfortunately, it has been used to justify the methods of the small man. Go to any picture exhibition at present, and you will come away from it with that consciousness of petty interests which invariably accompanies the burden or delight of looking through a friend's collection of photographic snapshots. It is the same with the novel, the play, the poem, and the musical composition. A tremendous decentralisation in Art is everywhere apparent.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The amount collected to date through the shilling fund for the Music Hall Home has reached the total of £365 16s. 6d.—just a pound a day for a year. The profession must be heartily congratulated on such a splendid result.

The Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund Sports will be held on Thursday, July 21, at Stamford Bridge. Many novel events are promised, and with a committee of sportsmen there should be many interesting competitions and a big crowd.

An event of particular municipal interest occurred on Thursday at the Church of St. Martins-in-the-Fields, when the marriage ceremony was performed by the Mayor of Westminster, the Rev. F. Harcourt Hillersdon, the bride being Nina Margery, daughter of the well-known and popular Councillor Henry Tozer (chairman of the Syndicate Variety Theatres), and the bridegroom Hubert Barham, of Lloyds'. The beautifully-decorated church was crowded, and the guests were afterwards received by Councillor and Mrs. Henry Tozer at the Whitehall Rooms, Hotel Metropole.

Miss Marie Loftus is just recovering from a second attack of shingles, not in mild form, but one of the severest cases known to the medical profession. It is expected she will be able to leave the nursing home some time next week. She had not completely recovered from her first attack when she suffered a relapse, with all its agonising pains. Miss Loftus has been ill for over sixteen weeks.

Mr. George Hestor, who has just concluded a three years' engagement as principal comedian in Mr. Fred Karno's His Majesty's Guests company, has signed a contract with Mr. Robert Courtneidge for the autumn tour of The Arcadians. Those who have enjoyed his Sergeant Lightning can easily imagine him in the part of the doleful jockey, Peter Doody. Mr. Courtneidge appears to have a very great appreciation of Mr. Karno's comedians, for it will be remembered that Mr. Dan Rolyat was at one time a representative of Sergeant Lightning.

Collins's is for sale. The old-established hall facing Islington Green is to come under the hammer at the Mart, Tokenhouse-yard, on Tuesday, May 31, the auctioneers being Newbon and Shephards, of Upper-street. The establishment stands on ground originally forming part of the Lansdowne Arms, from which tavern it took its original name. When Sam Collins took it over he rechristened it, and at his death it became the property of Mr. H. Watts, and it was carried on for some time by his widow, who had as manager Mr. Herbert Sprake, her nephew.

Under the proprietorship of that gentleman, the place flourished exceedingly. The present house, which has seating accommodation for 1,114 people, besides eight private boxes, was erected in 1897 in a most substantial manner, and the valuable fixtures, fittings, and accessories will be included in the sale.

Mr. Bransby Williams's new entertainment Bookland and Stageland is a great success on tour. At the Hippodrome, Manchester, on Monday the young actor had to make speeches at both houses, his welcome back from his host of friends among Mancunians being especially hearty. He has this week secured the English rights of his first play for his first theatrical venture. It is written by Miss Beatrice de Burgh, assisted as part author by Mr. Sydney Valentine. The title of the play at present is Kit Careless, the period 1798. It is a fine romantic play with a strong story, and full of incident. It is his intention to tour the principal cities as soon as pantomime ceases. He of course plays the title-rôle.

Mr. Charles Coborn sends us some Mark Twain gossip. He says:—"Late in 1900 I was in New York, and Major Pond invited me to visit the Press Club on the occasion of the reception given to Mark Twain after his last lecturing tour round the world. It was all very interesting and amusing. The president of the club, Colonel Brown, was in the chair, but instead of allowing the chairman to introduce him Mark introduced the chairman, pointing out with comic seriousness the clear indications of every kind of crime and evil intent in the worthy Colonel's big, round, innocent countenance.

"There were a number of speeches (some affectionate, but mostly of the 'roasting' order, for which Mark had given the cue), but the hit of all was made by the treasurer of the club, a Mr. Hennessy, I think. He said: 'I have been called upon to second an expression of welcome to the guest of the evening, but I cannot but think that the task might have been placed in fitter hands, as I have never seen the gentleman before, nor have I read any of his works.' For a moment there was a gasping silence, succeeded by a roar of laughter.

"When Mark responded he said, with an amusing affectation of annoyance and nervousness, 'I must say I felt rather hurt at the remarks of the gentleman who seconded your resolution, and also somewhat puzzled when he said that he had not read any of my works, because he looks like an intelligent man, but how can he be an intelligent man if he hasn't read any of my works?' This speech restored the balance of things, and the game was honours divided.

"I sang 'The Newsboy' and 'Four fingers and a thumb,' and the great humorist was good enough to mark (oh!) his approval of my humble efforts. At the conclusion of the meeting all the boys crowded round Twain like flies round a treacle-pot to get him to autograph their invitation cards; but not so your Charles. I had no desire to assist in smothering him, so quietly waited till next day, when I sent mine to his private address, giving my reason for not bothering him the night before, and saying how greatly I should esteem his conferring the same favour upon me. The result was that I received my card again, covered by a nice little note, which is now one of my greatest treasures."

Miss Lillie Langtry, the electric spark, is making a great success in Australia. She is finishing sixteen weeks with Mr. Harry Rickards, who has re-engaged her for another twenty weeks. Lillie likes Australian audiences. She says when you are once a favourite you are never forgotten. She has never missed one performance, and is singing four songs and doing a dance nightly, as well as at matinées.

At the London Hippodrome Mme. Réjane's presentation of a scene from Madame Sans-Gêne seems to be highly popular, and last week among the well-known people to be recognised in the boxes and stalls were "the flying man," Mr. Henry Farman, Lady Troubridge, Lady Jessell, Lord and Lady Alington, Countess Eugene Kinsky, Sir Ernest Paget, the Earl and Countess of Poulett, the Marchioness of Townshend, Lord Harewood, Mrs. Rupert Beckett, General Brabazon, Captain and Mrs. Berkeley Levitt, Mr. Aurel Batonizi, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Meyer, and Mr. A. G. Vanderbilt.

The Liverpool Lyric Theatre Company was registered on April 21. The company has been established for the purpose of taking over the Lyric Theatre, Everton Valley, Liverpool.

The new Coliseum, Whitley Bay, near Newcastle-on-Tyne, which will accommodate 3000 persons, will open for the season on Saturday, May 14. Mr. Fred Patterson, late of the Tynemouth Palace, has been appointed resident-manager.

The directors of the Glasgow Pavilion, Ltd., have declared an interim dividend for the half-year ending April 30 at the rate of 30 per cent. per annum, payable on May 2, which is the same as was declared for the corresponding period last year.

Mr. Joseph Lawrence, manager of Mr. Frank Macnaghten's Leicester Pavilion Theatre of Varieties, announces a trial turn matinée at that hall on Tuesday afternoon, May 17, the entries for which will close on Thursday, May 12. Mr. Frank Macnaghten, Mr. Sydney Arthur (provincial booking manager), Mr. Frederic Baugh (London booking manager), and several proprietors, managers, and agents will be present to select suitable turns for salaried engagements. Competitors are invited to compete from any part of the kingdom.

Managers of Birmingham theatres and music halls are manifesting keen interest in the forthcoming Whit-Tuesday sports meeting, to be held at Villa Park. These gentlemen are members of the Theatrical, Variety Theatres, and Aston Villa Football Club Charity Sports Committee, and they attended the meeting held at the Woolpack Hotel on Tuesday. Favoured by propitious weather, this year's meeting should break previous records.

Mr. A. W. Matcham (the Empire) reported that subscriptions promised amounted to nearly £50. This announcement was received with applause. The committees responsible for advertising, donations, and prizes reported satisfactorily, and a suggestion was made that the Aston Villa football team be invited to participate in the procession and display the numerous trophies won by the club. Mr. F. W. Rinder (chairman) promised to bring the matter before his directors. It was decided to hold the Whit-Tuesday meeting under the A.A.A. and N.C.U. rules.

The Palace, Maidstone, commenced a new era of history and prosperity on Monday, the management being taken over by the new lessee, Mr. Ewart C. Potter, who brings energy, business tact, and a fund of geniality to his aid. Mr. Stanley Baskerville, who has just relinquished the position of manager, was presented on Saturday night, on behalf of the orchestra and staff, with a silver cigarette and cigar case and an illuminated address. The artists for the week presented Mr. Baskerville with a silver cigarette-holder as a mark of esteem.

Mr. A. E. Pickard, the enterprising manager of the Panopticon, Glasgow, is organising a big excursion from that city to Blackpool on Glasgow Fair Monday, July 18. The trippers will leave the Central station on Sunday at 12 midnight, and are due to arrive in Blackpool about 7 a.m. They will have fourteen hours in which to sample the various delights of "breezy Blackpool," and are timed to arrive home in Glasgow early on the Tuesday morning. From what we hear, the trip is likely to be taken advantage of by large numbers.

Dr. Walford Bodie writes that he has just crossed the Border, finishing his eight months' Scotch tour, which has been a veritable triumph. He opened at the Alexandra Theatre, Widnes, playing to record business, his electrical wonders and his feats in bloodless surgery creating quite a sensation in the town and district.

On Friday Mr. Baird, the chief electrician of the Runcorn and Widnes transporter bridge, challenged Dr. Bodie to pass—as he claimed—30,000 volts through his body from a huge 12in. spark induction high tension coil. Dr. Bodie, in the presence of several electricians, members of the Press, and other gentlemen, accomplished this great feat of endurance, and kept the huge audience spellbound. At the conclusion he was loudly cheered. This week he is startling the garrison town of Colchester, giving his demonstration, assisted by "La Belle Electra," twice nightly to large and enthusiastic audiences.

There was a large assembly representing stagedom and its habitués at the Great Northern Hotel, Leeds, late last week, the occasion being a complimentary dinner to Mr. T. Gerald Morton, of Leeds. As the district manager of the Yorkshire circuit of the Moss' Empire Halls, Mr. Morton has made many personal friends in Leeds by admirable work on behalf of the charities of the city generally. A representative company of about a hundred, presided over by Mr. Arthur Willey, sat down.

In an appropriate speech, freely garnished with humour and witticisms, Mr. Arthur Willey presented Mr. Morton with a handsome gold watch and a jewelled scarf-pin and stud. In a brief speech Mr. Morton expressed his deep sense of gratitude for these tokens of friendship and regard.

The toast of the evening, "Our Guest," was submitted by Mr. Fred R. Spark, who said they had met to honour one who was worthy of honour. Mr. Spark recalled the commencement of the Empire charity matinées under the kind and zealous direction of Mr. Morton. "A man with a better or bigger heart," he said, "does not live in this city of Leeds." It was in connection with the Empire charity matinées that a Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress appeared for the first time on a music hall stage in England.

Mr. Percival Craig, of the Bradford Empire, "dropped into poetry" somewhat Walt Whitmanesque in form. Unhappily he had a defective memory, and an effort to extemporise resulted disastrously for the moment; but no one enjoyed the joke more than Mr. Craig himself. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presence of the Empire orchestra, under Mr. Louis Myers. By special arrangement half a dozen of the oldest members of the Empire staff were entertained at the presentation.

Mr. Walter Stockwell, of Thompson's Hotel, Bristol, once more thanks the ladies and gentlemen who have already answered his appeal re Harry Jennings. He also wishes to state that the subscription list will close on Monday next, and any small donation will be thankfully received and duly acknowledged. The following sums have been received:—V.A.B.F., £1; Elliotts and Savonas, 10s.; G. H. Elliott, 5s.; Walter Stockwell, 5s.; Atlas and Vulcana, 5s.; J. E. Daveridge, 5s.; W. J. Churchill, 2s.; T. R. Gannon, 2s.; F. W., 2s.; T. W., 2s.; L. Barrett, 2s.; Sam Plaster, 2s.; W. B. Webb, 2s.; Gus Elen, 1s.; Sal Grogan, 1s.; G. Manning, 1s.; D. W., 1s.; Mrs. Webley, 1s.; C. W. Mr. Harry Lauder is still on the sick list, but is progressing favourably, and will, it is expected, make his reappearance at the Tivoli on Monday, May 9.

Mr. Frank Gerald, who is no stranger to Australia, sailed for that country on Friday (yesterday) by the ss. Ormuz. He has various commissions on hand, and may be away for six months or longer.

Among a large circle of professional friends the news of the death of Mrs. O. Maus Dayton will be received with sincere regret, and the bereaved husband and family have been the recipients of many telegrams from all parts of England expressing the deepest sympathy.

The deceased lady had suffered much during her illness, and passed away on Sunday morning last at Macclesfield at the early age of thirty-one. Mrs. Dayton was born at Sherborne, Dorset, on May 2, 1878, and on her marriage eleven years ago became associated with the famous acrobatic family known as the Dayton Family. Held in high esteem in the profession generally, it is in this little group of performers that her loss at so early an age will be felt as a crushing blow.

It was her great desire to be buried in Macclesfield, and about two weeks ago she was, under the doctor's orders, transported thither by ambulance van from Nelson. The knowledge that she was in Macclesfield brought her some relief in her last hours. The funeral took place in the cemetery there on Tuesday, the obsequies being attended by the whole of the Dayton Family, the relatives, and many friends. Wreaths came from all parts of England. Mr. Dayton, a German by birth, came to England fourteen years ago, but for the last six years he has been a naturalised British subject.

Mr and Mrs. P. A. Sley are shortly to be "mine host and hostess" at the Equestrian, next to the Surrey, an item of news which will be duly appreciated by the many members of the profession who know the high reputation of this genial pair.

Mr. Charles Green was initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers Order on Sunday. The ceremony was performed by Terrier Harry Gribben, P.W.T., assisted by Terrier H. Cee Mee, P.W.T. Terrier Arthur Were officiated as organist.

The officers of the Terriers' Association for the month of May are as follow: Terrier Martin Henderson, W.T.; Terrier Tom Packer, V.T.; Terrier Fred A. Hooper, W.D.; Terrier C. W. Kloof, Y.B.; Terrier C. C. Cornish, W.I.; Terrier Arthur Were, Organist.

A ladies' concert will be held on Sunday next at the Three Stags Hotel, Kennington-road, at 8.30 p.m.

The banquet to Terrier Griff will be held upon Sunday, May 29, at the Hotel Boulogne, Gerrard-street, W. The annual river outing is fixed for Sunday, June 26.

Terrier Griff offers a gold medal for the best suggestion on how to increase the attendance of the Sunday meetings. All suggestions must be forwarded to the secretary on or before May 14.

Mr. Herbert Shelley has just concluded his second tour of Ireland with Dan the Outlaw, receiving the highest praise from all classes for his exceedingly correct insight into old-world Irish character in both humour and song. His "Colour of my coat" ballad has gone all over the world, and bids to become a standard national song.

Miss Louisa Peach had a most enthusiastic reception last week at Mr. Raymond's hall, Walthamstow, where she is a big favourite. Her sketch of The Ticket-of-Leave Man proved an enormous success, and she returns again May 30, with a sketch of The Colleen Bawn. Next week Miss Peach is at Gravesend with The Settler's Daughter.

Mr. Thomas Barrasford, of the Hippodrome, Brighton, formerly of Leeds, founder of the Barrasford Music Hall Syndicate (owning twenty-one halls) and managing-director of the Pavilion, Newcastle-on-Tyne, who died on Feb. 1, left estate valued by the widow (Mrs. Maud Barrasford), the executrix, at £17,337 10s., of which £2,990 14s. 3d. is net personality.

The will, dated Dec. 2, 1909, reads as follows:—"This is the last will of me, Thomas Barrasford, of Brighton, music hall proprietor. I appoint as my executors my wife, Maud Barrasford, and my friend Frederick Eley, of Leeds, bank manager. I give all I die possessed of to my said wife, absolutely, after payment of my just debts and funeral and testamentary expenses."

Messrs Carl and Carr, the twentieth century comedians, are opening new ground this season at Selsey with their Merry Pierrots, and have bought the land, which they will call the "Pierrot Gardens." An open-air Oriental café will occupy a part of the space required. The popular comedians have been booked by Mr. Elliston to play Dame and principal comedy part in his next pantomime.

The Luna Park and Palace of Amusements (Southend), Ltd., is the name of the company now running the Kursaal, Southend, which is being converted into a first-class ornamental park and open-air amusement and pleasure ground. A scenic railway is now in course of erection, and the place will be an ideal spot for shows of every kind. There is to be a grand opening in June. Mr. T. W. Hilton is the managing-director.

Mr. Charles Coborn, who roused Londoners just a few years ago when he sang at the Oxford "The man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo," is a member of Mr. Frank Glenister's excellent company at the London Pavilion, where his character songs have certainly caught on. It was at the Trocadero opposite that Charlie used to delight the b-hoys with "Two lovely black eyes," which came to be known as the Trocadero anthem.

Messrs. Woodhouse and Wells were working last week at the Shepherd's Bush Empire, where Harry Tate was topping the bill. When journeying to business on Friday evening Mr. Tate had the misfortune to break down, and until his arrival Mr. Lewis Vincent, the manager, asked the clever pair to go on again. Readily consenting, they submitted an encore on distinctly different lines, and had a most gratifying reception. Such an occurrence is, to say the least, uncommon; but the true artist is always equal to "turning the dust of servile opportunity to gold."

Miss Ada Reeve has presented Edgar Bateman with a magnificent sea rod in appreciation of his new song, "And just then he fell out of bed," which the great artist has lately secured. Mr. Bateman was to have had a similar presentation on Saturday night last at the Horseshoe Hotel, when the Lychnobite Angling Society's annual dinner took place, the Earl of Hardwicke being in the chair, but the Cockney writer was unavoidably absent. The health of the progenitor of "The grateful crab" and "The Tortoise with the ball-bearings" was drunk, and the hope expressed that Mr. Bateman's forthcoming annual fishing tale would sound as truthful as did his previous ones.

Mr. J. L. Graydon, who has retired from the proprietorship of the Middlesex after four decades of successful music-hall management, was specially honoured on Thursday, the 21st. On that date he was entertained at a testimonial banquet by past and present members of the Entertainments Protection Association.

Mr. T. Ernest Polden, one of Mr. Graydon's co-directors on the board of the Palace Theatre, Limited, took the chair, and he was supported by Mr. Alfred Butt, managing-director of the Palace Theatre, Mr. E. Cremetti; Mr. Harry J. Hitchins, manager of the Empire; Mr. Walter de Frece and Mr. Walter Gibbons, of the Variety Theatres Controlling Syndicate; Mr. Richard Wake, a former proprietor of the Royal Standard, Pimlico; Mr. T. S. Dickie, the present proprietor (hon. treasurer of the testimonial); Mr. John Brill, a former proprietor of the Royal Music Hall; Mr. Philip J. Rutland, J.P. (hon. secretary of the testimonial), and others.

Letters of regret at their absence were read from Mr. Henri Gros—who was prevented by illness from being present to do honour to his friend of many years—from Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, and others.

After the loyal toast, the chairman, in a few heartfelt sentences, proposed "Our Guest," speaking very highly of Mr. Graydon as a man and as a manager, and also referring in felicitous terms to Mr. Graydon's excellent work in connection with the Entertainments Protection Association, which brought him to the main purpose of that happy gathering.

Mr. Polden then presented Mr. Graydon with a splendid gold watch, which was inscribed as follows:—"Presented by past and present members of the E.P.A. to James Lawrence Graydon, of the Middlesex Music Hall, as a memento of twenty-two years' honorary services as secretary.—April 21, 1910."

On the framed and signed vellum was inscribed the following:—

The undersigned past and present members of the Entertainments Protection Association hereby record their appreciation of the untiring and successful services both in the interest of the music-hall industry and of the public of as Honorary Secretary of the Association for twenty-two years. Presented with an inscribed gold watch at a banquet held at the Trocadero Restaurant, Piccadilly, London, W., on the 21st day of April, 1910.

Mr. T. S. Dickie proposed the toast of "The Chairman," to which Mr. Polden gaily replied; and Mr. Alfred Butt, in proposing "The Health of Mr. Dickie," spoke in flattering terms of that gentleman's exertions in connection with the hon. secretaryship of the testimonial. Mr. Rutland and Mr. Walter de Frece also spoke.

Mabel Sinclair, England's premier lady ventriloquist, after a long and highly-successful tour in the provinces, returns to London for the season, opening May 2 at the Empire, Hackney.

Mr. Lawrence, stage-manager at the Tottenham Palace, and brother to Miss Vesta Victoria, is vacating his position at the end of May on account of ill-health, and will sail for Australia, that climate having been recommended him by his medical adviser. A testimonial is on foot to give him a "send-off."

Three young officers occupied a box at the Opera House, Cork, on Saturday night, and during Mr. Bransby Williams's performance they continually giggled and made very audible remarks. They were most talkative when he was giving his excerpt from Hamlet, and consequently he stopped to apply a reprimand. "I am surprised at the conduct of these people in the box," he said, pointing to the three offenders. The audience at once took up the cue, and showed its approval by applauding the actor.

"I regret that I have nothing sufficiently inane in my répertoire to amuse the occupants of the box, but I am pleased to know that the performance I am giving is acceptable to the pit, stalls, circle, and even the gallery," said Bransby Williams. This caused a perfect uproar, but the occupants of the box did not heed it. As Mr. Williams returned to the stage as Shylock, they threw chocolates and caramels on the stage, and at the close of the selection the actor addressed the audience once more. "I know that the gentlemen—if I may be pardoned the word—are not Irish. They are——," (mentioning the regiment).

Here the audience broke in with yells, and made such a demonstration against the occupants of the box that they left their places. Mr. Williams had not been back in his dressing-room many minutes when he was informed that an officer wanted to see him. When shown in, the actor recognised him as one of the three in the box. He had the audacity to ask what Mr. Williams meant by attacking them from the stage.

Hot words followed, and at last Mr. Williams threw him neck and crop out of the room. He continued to blackguard him near the stage entrance, so Mr. Williams invited him to prove that he was a soldier and a man. But the "soldier" fled, much to the amusement of the stage hands. The funny part of it all is that Mr. Williams knows nothing about "bruising" or "boxing."

At the meeting of the London County Council on Tuesday consent was, on the recommendation of the Building Acts Committee, given to the erection of an iron and glass shelter in front of the Theatre of Varieties, High-road, Balham, in accordance with plans submitted in connection with the application of Mr. B. Crewe on behalf of the Electric Theatres, Ltd.

Mlle. Lydia Kyasht, the first of the celebrated Russian dancers to capture London, is to have a further opportunity for the expression of her artistic genius in a "Series of Dance Ideals." In these charming and difficult classical movements Mlle. Lydia Kyasht is to have the co-operation of M. Bolm, the principal dancer of the Imperial Opera House, St. Petersburg, who has already been sharing her success in the delightful "Danse des Papillons" in the ballet East and West. The introduction of the new dances will in no way affect the ballet. Mlle. Kyasht and M. Bolm will be supported by the highly-trained coryphées of the Empire.

Mr. Benjamin Woodger, secretary of the Music Hall Home, desires, on behalf of the committee, to thank the following:—Arthur H. Burdett (Hippodrome, Boscombe), £2 1s. 8d.; P. C. Rowe (Empire, Swansea), £1 17s.; R. W. Duce (Granville, Walham Green), £1; Harry Slingsby (Empire, Hull), 15s. 6d.; Lewis De Burgh (Hippodrome, Southend), 15s. 3d.; Chas. M. Jones (Tivoli, Dublin), 5s. 4d.; Ernest Bridgen (New Empire Palace Theatre, South Shields), 8s. 2d.; Will A. Jackson (Palace and Hippodrome, Cardiff), 15s.; Sidney W. Winter (Royal Hippodrome, Eastbourne), 5s. Also Alex. Galley (Empire, Leeds), E. McCormick (Empire, Greenock), George Weldon (Hippodrome and Circus of Varieties, Dewsbury), for their kind help to the Home Fund. The Secretary will be pleased to receive the contents of the collecting-boxes before the end of April, that being the end of the financial year. The next committee meeting will be held on Thursday next, May 5, at noon, at the Empire, Camberwell.

A revised version of the revue, Hullo! London!, was given at the Empire Theatre on Wednesday evening. A new attraction to appear on Monday next is Le Petit Roberto, the remarkable boy instrumentalist.

Collins's is now under the general-management of Mr. Arthur L. Williams, who has a hard-working lieutenant in Mr. G. Ivor Sprake, the acting-manager. During the short time the hall has been under their command it seems to have gained much of its old popularity.

With the real opening of the London season, Mr. Alfred Butt is surely to be congratulated on the engagement of Mlle. Pavlova, N. Mordkin, and the other talented dancers who have come from Russia to show us what dancing really means. The stall area at present might be compared to that of the Grand opera, so distinguished are the visitors. On Monday Miss Margaret Cooper returns to her first variety home, and brings with her a new and varied répertoire of songs, of which much is expected.

David Bliss, a music-hall agent, of Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, appeared before Mr. Marsham at Bow-street on Tuesday to an adjourned summons charging him with committing wilful and corrupt perjury when giving evidence in Westminster County Court during the hearing of an action between the United Counties Theatres, Ltd., and Messrs. Ferguson and Mack, comedians. It was alleged that the defendant had falsely sworn that he had not released the comedians in question from an engagement to appear at the Hippodrome, Devonport.

The case for the prosecution having been concluded, Mr. Marshall Hall submitted that there was no case for him to answer. The most that the prosecution had proved was that in the multiplicity of his engagements the defendant might have made a mistake as to whether he had, on the telephone, released these comedians or not. The prosecution had not put Messrs. Ferguson and Mack into the witness-box. Why was that? Because if they gave evidence it would be seen at once that this was a prosecution, not by them, but by the Variety Artists' Federation. Ferguson and Mack did not say that the defendant had committed perjury, and had been performing for him since.

The defendant had come into conflict with the Federation, and aroused their animosity. It had been indicated from the first, on the part of the defendant, that this was not a prosecution by Messrs. Ferguson and Mack, so there was no excuse for not calling them. There was no evidence that there had been anything of a wilful and corrupt nature. At the most there was a suggestion that the defendant had made a mistake. He (counsel) suggested that the mistake had been made by others who had given evidence in the case, and not by the defendant.

Mr. Marsham said the real point he had to consider was whether wilful and corrupt perjury had been committed. His own view of the matter was that no jury would consider that there had been. Mistakes had been made, no doubt, but there was not sufficient evidence to put the defendant on his trial for wilful and corrupt perjury, and the summons would be dismissed.

Miss Melinda May, secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., on behalf of the committee, begs most gratefully to acknowledge the following: Mrs. Charles Coborn (collecting), 2s. 10d.; Miss Dolly Harmer (collecting in South Africa), £1 0s. 6d. Miss Irene Rose writes that her guessing competition, "Teddy Bear's Name" ("Hugh") has been won by Mr. Harry French, Knowle, Bristol.

A case of considerable importance to the profession was heard at the Sheriff's Court held at Preston on Wednesday, when the jury awarded Walter Mould, the manager of the New Hippodrome, Accrington, £50 damages for slander against Samuel A. Mewha, the stage manager of the Accrington Garrick Amateur Dramatic company. Defendant did not appear, and was not legally represented.

Mr. Rowland, for the plaintiff, submitted that the slander was of a most cruel nature. The Hippodrome was taken by the Dramatic Society for a performance of The Silver King, from March 14 to March 19 last, upon sharing terms. Upon the first evening Mr. Mould, after checking the receipts and the tickets with Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Upton, the secretary and treasurer of the Dramatic Society, presented his return of the takings, which amounted to £19. The secretary and treasurer were perfectly satisfied with the return, but upon it being shown to the defendant he remarked: "What, only £19? The house is blued. We are being diddled."

Defendant continued the accusations, and the directors of the Hippodrome, who live in the Midlands, hearing of them, sent for Mr. Mould, and told him he must clear himself or clear out. The slander was repeated to the committee of the dramatic society. Plaintiff held a very responsible position, and his livelihood depended upon his honesty and integrity. Therefore he asked the jury not to assess the damages at a frivolous figure, because that would undo the good which would otherwise ensue. Plaintiff bore out counsel's opening statement, and the jury, after a short deliberation, assessed the damages at the figure named.

The Executive Committee of the M.H.A.R.A. met on Wednesday afternoon at the offices, the following being present:—Messrs. Fred Herbert (in the chair), J. Miller Northern, Jeff Vendome, Arthur Rigby, Tom J. Morton, John Alexander, Jack Crawley, Harry Bancroft, J. H. Milburn, Charles Coborn, and Bert Williams. Besides the usual routine business, the question of the Glasgow branch was further discussed, and a new agent appointed in Mr. Cockcroft, Mason's Arms, Barrow. The weekly statement passed showed twenty-seven new members and a cash total of £49 11s.

Frequenters of Collins's in the years that are gone were familiar with the form of Mr. Frank M. Nilen, who made himself very popular "in front." He was then in the first blush of youth, and relinquishing his connection with the "halls" became manager of the Rockingham, a large house in the vicinity of the Elephant and Castle. He has since become a licensed victualler, and last year was chosen Governor of the Incorporated Society and Licensed Victuallers' School. At the conclusion of his year of office last week Mr. Nilen was specially entertained at dinner at the Holborn Restaurant, and presented with a service of plate.

The presentation was made by Mr. W. R. Coysh, Mr. Nilen's successor in office. From the inscription engraved on the silver salver we learn that the articles of plate were presented by the Incorporated Society of Licensed Victuallers to Mr. Nilen, Governor of the Society, 1909-10, as a mark of their appreciation of the able and energetic manner in which he discharged his duties. In his reply Mr. Nilen said the tangible expression of the Society's appreciation was valued very highly. It was, he thought, a great event in a man's life to enjoy such honour as had been paid to him that evening.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

A WEIGHT has during the last few days been lifted from the shoulders of the lesser music publishing firms of the Metropolis, and they are severally thankful that much worry and thought have been spared them. The master song of the year has forestalled Halley's Comet, and the greatest thing in the air just now beside aeroplanes is the air of Miss Florrie Forde's newest number, "Flanagan."

THE same great artist's song sensation, "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" had been thought the last word in popular song-writing, but the author and composer—Messrs. Will Letters and C. W. Murphy—were ill content to rest on even so splendid a laurel, and so on the 20th inst. they handed to her the precious M.S. of their magnum opus, and on the Friday, at the fine house at Balham, the music hall was nearly wrenched from its foundations by the chorus. Messrs. Francis and Day are the publishers.

MR. FRED ELTON, the entertainer at the piano, whose song-scena "On Board of an Ocean Liner" is now an admired feature on every programme in which it features, has just been secured for the ensuing five years by Messrs. Moss and Stoll. His new "rubber boom" song, "Tahiti," promises to be a craze, and both he and Barnes, Weston, and Maurice Scott are to be heartily congratulated. The publishers are Messrs. Francis and Day.

MR. GEORGE LASHWOOD, who on May 9, at the London Coliseum, will soothe ruffled Cockaigne—whose umbrage at his long absence from town is pardonable—by singing his latest eye-opener, "O blow the scenery on the railway," has just published with Messrs. Francis and Day, who are also placing the "railway" item on the market, a laughable song, from the practised pen of T. W. Connor, entitled "The girl with the rooster in her hat."

MR. W. J. CHURCHILL, whose merry quips and jests are just now amusing London, and who a few days since was seen in Charing Cross-road expatiating to an inquiring Cockney song-writer on the delights of fishing, has just had accepted by Messrs. Francis and Day for publication his current song, "Faith, hope, and charity." It is by W. H. Wallis and Fred E. Terry, and is fully worthy of the reputation of the writers.

DENHAM HARRISON has composed and Richard Elton written a song, which Messrs. Francis and Day are publishing under the title of "A cargo of love." Messrs. Terry and Bentley are producing the same.

MR. JOE ARCHER'S latest song, "It's a mad, mad world," is by Robert P. Weston and Fred J. Barnes, and will shortly be published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MR. FRED HASTINGS, whose "Tommy Dodd, I'm laying the odds," is one of the most talked-of humorous songs of the time, has just published with Messrs. Francis and Day his laughable ditty "Beastly awfully jolly, don't you know." It is written and composed by himself.

GEORGE STEVEN, a writer whose songs are highly esteemed, has, in conjunction with Henry E. Pether, produced a charming ballad, named "Shine, star, shine." No more desirable conjunction of ability and genius could be possible in the world of popular song, and Messrs. Francis and Day, in securing the item for publication, have only followed the precedent set by themselves of obtaining the best of the pick of the song market.

To look at George Arthurs, the popular writer, if one were a stranger, one would settle it in one's mind that a man of his scholarly and refined bearing could be guilty of a poetic song nor would one be wrong. Notwithstanding that more than one of Wilkie Bard's best comic creations emanated from Mr. Arthurs' brain, he can and has done serious and beautiful work, and his graceful song, "There is an old English garden," which Messrs. Francis and Day are placing on the market, will rank high in the estimation of people of culture. With him in the song is Alf. J. Lawrance, who is, as ever, melody personified.

A PRETTY song, called "The garden of love," has been secured for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day. It is by Tom Mellor and Harry Gifford. Other numbers the famous house is producing are "Dennis, dear," by Weston, Barnes, and Scott, and Miss Rosie Lloyd's arch song, "Are you looking for a girl like me?" by those past masters of the art of writing, E. W. Rogers and Orlando Powell.

MISS FLORRIE GILLMORE has made a tremendous hit with her chorus song, entitled "Sammy played the saxophone," and has written in enthusiastic strain to her publishers, Messrs. Francis and Day, anent its success. The number is by Charles Wilmott and Maurice Scott.

AT noon to-day (Saturday) at Euston a number of friends will assemble to bid farewell to Mr. Louis Dreyfus, of the great New York house of T. B. Harms and Francis, Day, and Hunter. Mr. Dreyfus's visit to Europe has been fraught with pleasant memories and matters of satisfactory and high import to the solid structure in America of which he is so worthy a pillar.

MR. DAVID DAY, on Saturday evening last, at the Queen's (Small) Hall, was for a time chairman at the concert organised for the benefit of the widow of the late W. M. Davies, who had for many years been connected with the music trade as a "knight of the road," notably with Messrs. Ascherberg. Every great publishing house was represented, and a splendid array of talent appeared, including Miss Madge Temple, who was accompanied on the grand pianoforte by her talented husband, Mr. Herman E. Darewski. A financial success accrued, which was in no small measure due to the strenuous work put in by the hon. secretary, Mr. R. S. Strauss.

MR. LAWRENCE BARCLAY, who is making tremendous strides in his profession, has in his song "My wife's run away with the baker"—a song which Messrs. Francis and Day have published—a number that combines with funny words an infectious chorus. His forthcoming number, "Cuthbert, call Clarence at once!" is by John L. St. John, and will be voted a fine specimen of the art of the jovial young pilot, who has done, and is doing, such yeoman service as a song-writer for such high lights as Mr. Robey and others.

MR. JOE TABRAR'S song "For nights and nights and nights" (though similiar in a way to his other song, "Months and months and months" as to title) looks like eclipsing in public favour even that rage, which lost nothing in the safe hands of Mr. Jack Smiles. Mr. Syd Walker is singing the newer number.

MR. FRANK POOLE, the energetic manager of Barrasford's Hippodrome, Sheffield, has written and composed a waltz-song, under the title of "Empress of Home, Sweet Home," a pretty and tuneful melody, which has been harmonised and orchestrated by Mr. J. G. Hahn, conductor of the Hippodrome orchestra. It has been played as the overture each evening this week with marked success. Both gentlemen are to be congratulated.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE PALACE.

"La saison Russe" is in full "flight" at the Palace, and Russian art will probably loom as large in our public amusements during the next three months as Japanese. Mr. Alfred Butt has certainly introduced us to several more or less classical dancers, but nothing in the way of terpsichorean art presented at the Palace has ever approached the delightful interpretations of classical music by Mlle. Anna Pavlovna and M. Michael Mordkin. In writing of the lady, who is in the early spring of her youth, we may well adapt the lines of Milton and say, "Haste thee, nymph; come trip it as you go, and dance to strains of linked sweetness long drawn out," and also add Shakespeare's well-known lines from The Winter's Tale, "When you do dance, I wish you a wave o' th' sea, that you might ever do nothing but that." In the opening pas de deux arranged by Michael Mordkin that danseur joins Mlle. Pavlovna in an "Adagio" by Bleichman, both artists giving a fine interpretation of the dreamy rhythm of the music; but it is the Automne Bacchanale in which their dramatic expression is so advantageously displayed; and a very remarkable example of their art is the "Valse Caprice," by Rubinstein, in which they obtain special honours. Their eight companions are perhaps at their best in Liszt's Rhapsodie Hongroise (No. 2), of which the fine character dancing of Mlle. Eduardova and M. Monakoff is the best feature. We often hear it said that the charms of ballet are waning; but it depends so much on how it is done. At the Palace the fashionable crowds in the stalls give enthusiastic welcome to two of the most gifted dancers that have been seen on the London boards since the days of Lucille Grahn, Cerito, and Taglioni.

Mr. Albert Whelan, the Australian entertainer, who, we believe, is fulfilling his first engagement at the Palace, may be congratulated on his great success. He has very much improved his entertainment since his recent stay in America. He has a capital skit on operatic singers, the verse being witty and the music lively. His whistling and mimicry of Harry Lauder and Chirgwin are still popular features of an entertainment that is warmly acclaimed. Riley's athletic fox-terriers are equal to very remarkable feats in the way of somersault, and the final football match is a screamer. Miss Beatrice Allen has a skating song, which she sings in fascinating style; the Palace Girls are as chic and charming as ever in their dance; and the violin playing of the lady known as La Contadina evokes considerable applause. The Great Goldin still leads the way in lightning illusions, which include the creation of a fully-furnished bedroom from an empty cabinet, the fascinating Mlle. Jeanne Fransioli playing the part of the sleeping beauty in peignoir. Bromley and Fontein in their entertainment The Man Behind the Music Stand repeat their former success, and keep the house in a state of merriment, and Selbo and Lily Hayes, comedienne, also entertain. The Bioscope is presenting films of Mr. Grahame White's great aeroplane flight, and a very interesting domestic subject, illustrated with Kinemacolor effects, is Choosing the Wall Paper.

BOW PALACE.

The current programme here is a particularly interesting one, and includes the dramatic episode A Divorced Woman, presented by Fred Maxwell and company. Mr. Fred Maxwell plays Mateo with all his accustomed strength and finish. Miss Margaret Watson is particularly good as the divorced woman Stella Raby, acting throughout with intense emotion and true womanly feeling. The part of Marie Alleyn, the "villainess" of the piece, is in the capable hands of Miss Minnie Sadler. Good work is also done by Mr. Leonard Harrison, Mr. Fred Bailey, and little Miss Grace Warden.

Barney Armstrong is seen in his very best form, which means that he is decidedly funny. Able assistance is rendered him by little Kelly. Their simultaneous song and dance act is a "scream" from beginning to end, and the house literally rocks with laughter. Tom Hulme is good in his "Girl Medley" song, and has some very good stories and humorous patter.

Bromley and Fontein amused us very much with their bright and breezy display, and the clever fooling while the lady is singing "Il Bacio" creates much laughter. George James sings "Mine's all right, how's yours?" and "The old high hat"; Elsie Kedward dances well; and both Guy Ryder and Connie Duprez have good songs. The Ten Dixie Girls have a very pretty song scena in "The Silver Coon," the dances being particularly attractive. One of the troupe has a fine number in "Somebody loves you, dear," which she sings in taking style. Will De Shara's little Cherub, comedienne and dancer, and the usually good Palace pictures are also in the bill.

THE HIPPODROME.

On Monday, April 25, Madame Réjane and company in a selection from Victorien Sardou's drama,

"MADAME SANS GENE."

La Maréchale Lefebvre .....MME. REJANE
Napoleon I. .....M. CHAUTARD
Caroline, Queen of Naples ..MME. ARCHAINBAUD
Elisa, Princesse de Lucques ..MLLE D'ARTIGNY
Comte de Neipperg .....M. ALERME
Roustand .....M. DERIVES

It would have been a thousand pities had Mme. Réjane returned to Paris without having given English audiences a taste of her quality as Mme. Sans Gêne, which she played for the first time on the production of Sardou's wonderfully effective drama, at the Paris Vaudeville, on Oct. 27, 1893. The famous French comedienne, who is drawing the most distinguished members of the English nobility to the beautiful house in Cranbourn-street, has selected one of the most crucial and most interesting scenes in the play. The action takes place in the Palace of Compiègne.

Napoleon is in his study, poking the fire, while taking his coffee. The Duke de Rovigo, who has replaced Fouché as Police Minister, informs him that the Comte De Neipperg is about to depart, and this affair being settled satisfactorily, Napoleon sends for his sisters. When left alone with them he forthwith proceeds to "laver son linge sale en famille," as he used to say. He reprimands them for their dissolute conduct, which causes unseemly scandal; the sisters fall out, begin to abuse each other in the Corsican dialect, and the Emperor intervenes in the quarrel in the drollest style, exclaiming in a towering rage, "Basta, Basta!" Sans Gêne is introduced, and the Emperor tells her without preamble that she must agree to a divorce. She refuses point blank, and, bristling up according to her wont, enumerates her services as vivandière—which Napoleon had ignored until then; but the word blanchisseuse grates on him. If it were a crime to be a laundress, she gently insinuates, it enabled her at least to give credit to a young officer, whose lodging used to be on the quatrième étage, and he still owes her sixty francs. The production of the tattered little bill enables the Emperor to realise the debt that he still owes Mme. la Maréchale, once vivandière and laundress. He is quite disarmed, and when Sans Gêne confesses to a sneaking affection for him, the arbiter of the destinies of Europe shows quite a tendresse for the benefactress of his struggling days as a sous-lieutenant. He is taking his leave of her laughingly when, as the door opens, a noise is heard in the corridor, and a man is seen advancing towards the Empress's apartment. Napoleon seizes the imprudent intruder, who is none other than Neipperg. A scuffle ensues, during which the Emperor tears off the Comte's epaulettes. The latter draws his sword, and Napoleon, calling his guard, orders his assailant to be shot at dawn. The De Neipperg incident is not historic, but is the invention of Sardou. Everybody knows that after refusing to accompany her husband to Elba, Marie Louise became De Neipperg's mistress and married him at Napoleon's death, but his appearance at the French court as early as 1810 is an anachronism.

At this period of his career (1810) Napoleon seems to have adopted a brutal attitude towards the gentler sex, and Mme. Réjane makes it quite clear that in her dealings with men the exalted blanchisseuse possessed a fine tact. The presentation of the little bill to the great conqueror is done half deprecatingly; and the Emperor becomes the mere man under the blandishments of the born coquette, whose hand he kisses with the true gallantry of a son of Corsica. The scene was perfectly admirable, and its charm irresistible. M. Chautard, who was the Lauriston in the original production in 1893, was responsible for a portrait of Napoleon that for once familiarised the London public with the realities of the greatest historic figure in French history. In the encounter with Neipperg the Emperor's anger was like a tornado. Neither must we omit to praise the fierce impetuosity of the Comte de Neipperg, as presented by M. Alerme, an excellent actor. Mme. Archainband and Mlle. D'Artigny were also well placed as Caroline and Elisa. The interior of the palace at Compiègne was a sumptuously furnished apartment, with an elaborate realisation of the artistic beauty of the period.

A most successful newcomer to the Hippodrome is Miss Lola Lee, who presents a series of dances amply proving her versatility. She is admirably dramatic in a bolero, and looks quite Castilian in her pretty costume. An American danse excentrique is a number that is given with much brio; and when one hears the strains of Offenbach, Miss Lee, by her wonderful dash, brings back to us memories of the days of the Second Empire. Her final number is a Kate Vaughan waltz—an apt revival of the skirt dance of one of the most fascinating performers of the nineteenth century. Sinuously graceful and dream-like is this young dancer in this most expressive revival of a great dancer's methods, and her receptions at every representation have been of a most cordial character.

Mr. Arthur Helmore's lecture on "Mother Hubbard" is about the funniest thing in the programme; and a singer with a fine voice, a good method, and a sense of humour is found in Mr. J. H. Scotland, who gives "Father O'Flynn" and "Dumbledum Day." Mr. Henry Leoni is an artistic Anglo-French chanteur, and the Princess Baratoff is delightful in her chansons, accompanied by her on the guitar.

THE CANTERBURY.

The managerial eye has glistened with satisfaction at the sight of the large audiences that have crowded the Canterbury, and Mr. Ernest Lepard is heartily to be congratulated on the prosperity which is being maintained at the old-established house. Top position in the current bill is occupied by Mr. Joe Peterman and George Ricketts' company in The Bells of the Orient, in which tuneful music, plenteous fun, and pretty dancing combine to form an attractive entertainment. Miss Victoria Monks has in the Canterbury one of her chief strongholds, and her welcome on the night of our visit was appropriately warm. Miss Monks, however, could only oblige with one song, excusing herself from further contributions on the ground that she had other engagements to fulfil, and was already half an hour late. Her one song was her latest, that about "Judgment Day," in which an old negro preacher is represented as holding up the day of doom to the evil-doers of his congregation. One does not look for missionary work in the music hall, but if the old darkey's exhortation induces any among the more reprobate of the audience to count the reckoning it will have been achieved by methods certainly no less edifying than those adopted by parading the streets with tambourine and big drum. Apart from that, the song is greatly relished by those who enjoy a rousing refrain.

Chorus songs have obtained for Miss Florence Cooper enviable popularity, to which her rendering of "The stars are angel faces" has principally contributed. Miss Cooper has a strong and cultivated voice, and she sings in a fashion that quite wins the hearts of the audience. A first-class favourite is also Mr. Gus Garrick, whose "Tit-bits from the halls" are selected with a keen sense of the humorous. He satirises the lazy comic and the Scotch comedian with hilarious results, and his burlesque danseuse again puts the audience into roars of merriment.

Boys in brown might well be the title of the Harvard Sextet, who indulge in concerted singing and dancing. One of the young men, who smartly sings a song which is accompanied by a boot obbligato, earns particular favour. Expert dancing is also furnished by the O'Gorman Brothers, who arouse enthusiasm by their smart stepping; Carrie Laurie's juveniles are as precocious and harmonious as ever; and contributions to the programme are made by Celia Retford, comedienne; Haig and Novel, in comedy act; Gwen Howard, comedienne; Will Driscoll, swell comedian; Carson Hicks, singer and eccentric dancer; the Pasquali Bros., equilibrists; Viviana and Co. in The Toyshop; and Walker and Lake, patter purveyors; while The Final for the English Cup is vividly portrayed on Ruffell's Bioscope.

THE METROPOLITAN.

The vogue of the rooster play has reached the halls, and the current bill at the Metropolitan is distinguished by a satirical sketch, in one scene, by Mr. Andrew Stanley, entitled Cock-a-Doodle-Doo, which was originally produced at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, under the auspices of Mr. Peter Davey. The scene of the broodings and crowings of these wonderful fowl is by a convolvulus-decked hedge, bordering the farmyard. Theodore Roosterfeldt is a gallinaceous personage, who has set quite a value upon himself, and will not submit to the muttering discontent of his chief partner Christabel, a broody hen. Incidentally, Theodore has been attracted by the beauty of a young hen pheasant, and even lends a sympathetic ear to the recital of the trials of Arabella, the duck, whose opinions are naturally sage, and who has a violent antipathy to green peas. The solos and concerted pieces are bright and tuneful, and the "business" throughout amusing. The dialogue, too, should lend itself to further comic development, and there should certainly be plenty of engagements in store for this capital pièce d'occasion. The dresses are admirably fashioned, and the trifle is well acted.

Chirgwin looms largely in the bill. On the night of our visit he told us that "Bill Bailey had come home"—a complimentary reference to Manager Bailey, who, after an absence of many years, has come back to a new and glorified Met. amid a chorus of congratulations. It is in such little confidences as these that the White-eyed Kaffir rejoices, and with his beloved fiddle as accompaniment he sings "My fiddle is my sweetheart" with great acceptance. In his patter he touches on the topics of the hour, and in a word maintains those cordial relations with his listeners which have resulted from a successful career of at least three decades.

Miss May Moore Duprez disports herself as the "jolly Dutch girl," and her entertainment, which is highly popular, is strongly reminiscent of another lady who goes in for sauce Hollandaise. Cliff Ryland is generous in his quaint patter, which has all the flavour as well as the smartness of the Yank, and though Cliff has been quite long enough on this side to even be guilty of Cockneyisms, he is happily able to sport humour of the best Transatlantic brand, and very acceptable it is. Miss Maud Prenton has a capital voice and an impressive style; the Sisters Hall are hardly out of their novitiate, but have tuneful voices, which might be turned to good account with judicious training; the Creo Brothers present acrobatics in novel fashion; Miss Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten Boys and Girls are popular; Angus Strong has a good voice, which will be all the better for further training and attention; and Paul Cavalli and Ruffell's Bioscope are also announced on the bill.

CAMDEN HIPPODROME.

Standing room only, and very little of that, was the order when we visited this hall on Monday evening, and Mr. Albert H. Adams, the courteous manager, was hard pressed to find room for all. The chief place on the bill is filled by T. E. Dunville, who has splendid material to work with, and he keeps all in a fine humour. His first song "Rub it in" is a certain laughter-raiser, and his policeman number, with its racy patter, caused immense amusement, and an encore being demanded, Mr. Dunville essayed a few remarks on the Seven Ages of Man, which were very full of wisdom and wit.

That diverting sketch Toplitsky is being presented by Hayman and Franklin's company, and it goes as well as ever. The story of Abraham Levy and his terror at the supposed approach of the end of the world never fails to raise shouts of laughter, and it is briskly played by the company engaged. That well-known comedian Dan Thomas is giving us another of his "dame" impersonations; this time it is an old-time ballet dancer, who has long since retired and revives old memories of her halcyon days. Mr. Thomas is particularly good, and infuses much humour, as well as a touch of sadness, into the song. A very dashing comedienne is Miss Daisy Yates, whose talents deserved a longer turn than she was allotted to give, for her appearance as a coster was very smart and a clever piece of work. The Whitworth Trio give a clever cycling turn, the youngest member of the troupe being particularly clever. Arthur Reece is always sure of a big welcome for his chorus songs, and he goes splendidly on this occasion, notably with his number "Good-bye to bachelor days."

T. B. Vaughan and John Lawson's company are playing The Bosun's Mate, which is, we believe, adapted from a story by W. W. Jacobs. It is a bright and breezy little sketch and capitally played, the actor who plays the amorous Bosun being decidedly good. A young lady with a future before her is Miss Marjorie Laurence, a pretty and dainty damsel, with a tuneful voice, who can also dance in the most delightful manner. Miss Laurence is very smart in her military costume and scores with "D'Arcy of the Guards." Lillian May is another young lady who makes a striking success with her song, which she sings most charmingly. Jack and Willie give a neat balancing act; and Cestria, a clever acrobat, also indulges in some comic juggling. The Eight Sunrays soon dance themselves into favour, and give a fine display of their art. A neat and clever act is that of Dunn and Reano. The one partner is very clever on the rings, while his mate, a very droll fellow, is also an accomplished performer in the same line. That well-known hero of fiction Sexton Blake is being portrayed here by Miss Carlotta de Yonson's company, and on this occasion the special case the detective is engaged on is that of The Kidnapped King. It is very exciting, and capitally played by Mr. C. D. Carlyle as Sexton Blake, who acts with his accustomed ability. The Bioscope, with Cup Final films, concludes.

HOLBORN EMPIRE.

The Holborn Empire is doing its usual big business this week, and Mr. Leslie Conroy, the manager, is smiling in broader style than ever as he directs the throngs of people entering and leaving the house.

There are seventeen items in the programme, but the one calling for most attention undoubtedly is Rabbotini, with his international band. Rabbotini indulges in much of the style Sousa and Reano have accustomed us to when conducting the conventional and well-known selections. His humorous medley, in which all his bandsmen revolt, go on strike, and walk off the stage, leaving him to face the audience as best he can, is very laughable. The men, it seems, are tired of playing nothing but classical music, and so, to get them back, he allows them one and all to return, each man playing his favourite melody. The band is an extremely good one, smartly disciplined, well dressed, and there is much laughable business done that is new to combinations of this particular kind.

Mr. Berte Coote brings along a laughable sketch, A Lamb on Wall-street, and plays the part of the "lamb" in excellent style. Miss Ada Russell as Eleanor Belding is a very vigorous worker, and looks decidedly charming. Mr. Walter King, who chooses to be known as "the doleful comedian," has a great deal of patter quite to the liking of the Holborn patrons. The Chanticleer Girls are nine pretty damsels in red, whose dancing is extremely good. They are followed by the pastmistress in the art of making a cyc'e do anything wished by the fair rider, Minnie Kaufmann. Minnie fully keeps up to standard the great reputation the name of Kaufmann has established for everything that is wonderful in "wheel stunts."

That bright and vivacious comedienne, Ella Retford, is a very popular number in Mr. Conroy's programme, and contributes her latest successes. Daley Cooper and Mabel Lait keep the house in merry mood during the time allotted for their turn. In "A Man of Spirit" Mr. Cooper poses as a military man with the greatest of success, his amusing antics, combined with the vivacious work of Miss Lait, going to make a very finished act, of which we should see a great deal in future variety programmes elsewhere.

There is, in fact, not an indifferent turn in the remainder of the bill, which includes Edna Latonne, a male impersonator; Milt Wood, who dances in wooden shoes with a chair; Chinko, a juggler whose youth makes his act all the more remarkable; the Cavalotti Bros., smart instrumentalists; Natalia and Diana on the trapeze; the Pasquali tumblers; and that remarkable football enthusiast, Sammy Shields.

QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

In an exceptionally strong programme Phil Ray is, perhaps, the bright particular star, and his breezy methods are distinctly appreciated. That lively pair the Sisters Allen sing about "Every morning I meet Rosie," finishing with a spirited step dance; Cyclumina is certainly a wonder on wheels, his many varied tricks showing neatness and ease. The performance, which is warmly applauded, is considerably enhanced by special electrical scenic effects.

A capital little song scena, entitled Boys in Camp, is presented by Sable Fern and company. The setting of the scene is a boy scouts' camp, which makes a very effective background for the different songs which are given. Sable Fern has several, the best of which are "Teach the rising generation," "Keep Whistling" (a very taking number), and "Only a boy." Mr. J. C. Russell, who enacts the rôle of an old veteran, sings "When the camp fire is burning brightly," and three of the boys have a stirring melody in "Be prepared," which they sing in capital style. The scena is a very pretty one, well produced, with good scenic effects, and going with a decided swing from start to finish. It should prove an acceptable item in all programmes.

Young and Evans, the "Yiddisher bhoys," infuse plenty of "go" into their turn, and quickly get on good terms with the audience. They have one good song with a catchy chorus, and heaps of smart patter of quite a clever and humorous nature. Gicardo, the boy juggler, no matter whether manipulating bottles, hats, billiard balls, or plates, is quite at home.

The dramatic sketch, The Midnight London Express, is presented by Brien McCullough and company, and proves very exciting. As the old signalman Mr. Brien McCullough has a part that suits him admirably. Miss Mabel Mannering acts with feeling as Laura Deene, whilst the necessary manliness to the character of Captain Jack Hanlan is given by Mr. C. F. Collings. The humorous villain, Krymer, has a worthy exponent in Mr. Gerald Kennedy. Minor parts are taken by Miss Nelly Nelson and Mr. Sidney Cawthorne.

Songs by Harry Levaine, comedian, Johnny Walker, comedianon, and Ethel Pearce, in her old favourite, "By the mill," together with some very interesting Bioscope subjects, complete the programme. We were pleased, on the occasion of our visit, to see Mr. Morris Abrahams back again in managerial harness, after his long illness.

TOTTENHAM PALACE.

Manager T. S. Mayne has an excellent all-round bill this week, and he and his worthy assistant, Mr. Harold Nuttall—who, by the way, has just recovered from a serious illness—are given plenty to do coping with the substantial audiences that attend twice nightly. In the current programme drama and sentiment are conspicuous by their absence, giving way to all comedy and the lighter side of the business. At the top we have Jake Friedman's Happy Holland, so frequently reviewed in these columns that to even mention its popularity is bordering on the superfluous. Suffice it to say that as the picturesque Dutch scena grows older it loses none of its brightness or entertaining powers. The genial Jake, of course, shines brightly in his quaint part, and has introduced much new humour into the piece. Tottenham likes Happy Holland exceedingly. Sterling and Love—happily-conceived names!—introduce us to a new act—of course, instrumental. It has the merit of being original and clever, and, in consequence, interesting. Sterling and Love are single—this, of course, in the story—and rent adjacent flats. Each is in turn annoyed at the "atrocious" musical practice of the other, and some rare fun ensues when the pair try to play each other off the earth. Eventually they complain to the landlord, and demand a change of rooms. He agrees, and transfers them, but when they come to take possession they find they have simply changed over rooms. So far, they have not made each other's acquaintance, but when the concert starts again they quickly come to grips, and harmony, both in music and mind, follows a brief explanation. So all ends happily. Discord and Harmony is the appropriate title of this act, which should serve Sterling and Love as a successful number for a long time to come. It received a great reception on the night of our visit. Hughes and Elliot contribute their always refined singing and dancing act, and come in for their full share of praise. Haines and Borthwick, with their farcical sketch, Half a Dollar, and a capital company are not long before they compel, by their screaming situations, the audience to get their hands together in approbation. Still more comedy is presented in the turn of Vinlana and company, in their Toyshop scena. A dainty act is this, which served to introduce some excellent dances. Lily Hayes, charmingly arrayed in rose-pink silk, soon sings and dances herself into favour. Her song "Mandalay" is brightly rendered, and followed by some neat stepping. Dan Conroy submits "Sullivan, that's him," and his listeners find plenty to laugh at in his turn. Time permits of his doing but one number here. More would be welcome. Miss Bessie Slaughter has appeared during the week up to Friday, when indisposition claimed her, and her place in the bill was filled by Miss Jessie Burgh, an accomplished violinist. Her solos were extensively appreciated. Len Hale, in comic song and dance; Hanid Alexander, a bright little lady with a gift of entertaining at the piano; and a full twenty minutes' pictures projected by the Bioscope completes a sound entertainment.

"JIMMY THE FEARLESS."

Jimmy ..... Mr. Charles Chaplin
Jimmy's Father ..... Mr. Arthur Dandoe
Jimmy's Mother ..... Miss Emily Seaman
Alkali Ike ..... Mr. Bert Williams
Washti Wampa ..... Mr. A. Austin
Bartender ..... Mr. E. Stone
Gwendoline ..... Mrs. B Williams

Mr. Fred Karno's latest sketch, Jimmy the Fearless; or, the Boy 'Ero, is for this prolific producer a new departure, and is probably intended as an up-to-date skit against the pernicious "penny dreadful" habit, which the present-day youngster is wisely forsaking for the Boy Scout movement. Thus it would be unfair to make a comparison between it and the highly-popular sketches with which Mr. Karno's name is associated.

Jimmy, returning home late at night, much to his parents' annoyance, polishes off the supper left for him, and when comfortably seated alone in the room, he dives into the doings of his favourite hero. Sleep soon overtakes the lad, and anon he becomes part of the action. The scene is transferred to the saloon of a settlers' camp in the Wild West; bushrangers and Indians abound; pistols are fired galore; a lonely maiden is kidnapped and brought in by the bushranger chief, and is rescued single-handed by the valiant Jimmy, who subsequently, with the aid of friendly Redskins, vanquishes the robbers, in addition to defeating their chief in a duel with swords. Once again the scene is changed to Jimmy's home, ten years later, which sees his parents being turned out penniless. Enter the now properous Jimmy, and the homestead is saved. As even dreams have a finality, so the end sees Jimmy awakened from his slumbers by a wrathful father, who puts the would-be hero across his knee and soundly trounces him. The sketch is capitally played by the members of Mr. Karno's company, and it is exceedingly well mounted.

Mr. Ryder Davis, has been fitted with a new song entitled "When the old times come again," by Harry Luck.

"PIPPINS' MOTHER."

A Dramatic Sketch, Produced for the First Time at Collins's, on Monday, April 25.

Pippins ..... Miss Lloyd Archer
Mrs. Marsh ..... Miss Evelyn Shaw
Bob Marsh ..... Mr. Frank Breunell

Miss Lloyd Archer, who for five years past has taken boy parts in many of our leading theatre productions, has renounced the lengthy play for its smaller brother, the music-hall sketch, and not without success. She has secured a piece which, although only containing three characters and playing for about twenty minutes, contains a plot sufficiently strong and exciting to hold the close attention of an audience from beginning to end. Pippins is a rough newspaper boy who has been adopted by Mrs. Marsh, much to the disgust of her son Bob, a ne'er-do-well, just home after a term of imprisonment. Whilst selling his papers Pippins has been fortunate enough to find a purse containing five pounds which he honestly declares he will return to the owner directly he sees him. This does not quite suit the requirements of Bob, who would rather take it back himself, or, in other words, keep the money for his own use. However, his wish is not gratified, so when Pippins hangs his coat on the hook Bob extracts the money from the purse and places the contents in his own pocket. At Mrs. Marsh's suggestion Pippins agrees that the find shall be taken to the police-station, and when the purse is handed over to the good lady it is found that the money has disappeared. She then suspects Pippins of evil intentions and orders him from the house. He goes, but directly afterwards she regrets her action, and sends her son Bob after him. In the meantime the newspaper lad returns and swears his innocence, and retribution quickly follows in the wake of the erring Bob. He is shortly after carried in, having received fatal injuries by being knocked down by a motor. The missing money drops from his pocket, and the guilt is placed upon the shoulders of the proper culprit.

Much praise is due to Miss Lloyd Archer for the energetic manner in which she discharges her duties. As Pippins her acting is distinctly powerful and wonderfully impressive. Miss Evelyn Shaw is decidedly good and particularly motherly as Mrs. Marsh, and Mr. Frank Breunell scores a success as the callous Bob Marsh. The playlet is extremely well staged, is cordially received, and should have a long run.

Owing to her success at the London Hippodrome, Miss Lola Lee, the charming dancer, has been retained by Mr. Oswald Stoll for another fortnight at that house.

"IN THE SHADE OF THE GUILLOTINE."

Paul Trevor ..... Mr. Arthur Moss
Marie Lablache ..... Miss Lilian Ramford
Gabrielle de Varville, disguised as Gaston Dubois ..... Miss Mabel Emley

Scene, Gaston Dubois' apartment, Paris, during the French Revolution.

There is undoubtedly a glut of French revolutionary sketches to be seen at the variety theatres just now, and to the already long list on Monday last, at the Standard, was added a nice little dramatic and musical incident, entitled In the Shade of the Guillotine.

One of the reasons probably why stories of this period are selected for presentation is the effective mode of dress that prevailed at the time, and the opportunities it gives to-day of making a good stage picture. In the sketch under review the scene was undoubtedly a good one, and in many respects novel.

Gaston Dubois poses as a director of music, but he is in reality Gabrielle de Varville, who intends, the very evening on which the story opens, to return to England. But "he" has counted without Marie Lablanche, one of "his" best pupils, falling not only in love with "his" art, but also the director of music as well. Just as Gaston is about to leave "his" rooms and Paris, Marie is announced and entreats the professor to give her another lesson. Thinking it the quickest way to get rid of the girl, Gaston sits down at the piano and plays a very brilliant overture. Miss Mabel Emley, who takes the part of Gaston, is to be complimented on her fine execution of an undoubtedly difficult number, and also on her forceful acting. Now Paul Trevor is an English squire who loves Gabrielle de Varville very dearly, and, disguised as one of the revolutionaries, has insisted on accompanying her when she journeys to England and safety. As Marie is declaring her passion for the supposed man, Paul comes forward, and a declaration is made by Gabrielle as to her absolute identity, and the reason she is in Paris masquerading as a music teacher. Further revelations are made by the unhappy girl to the effect that to get to Paris and save her brother's fortune she had even surrendered her honour. Paul, her lover, shrinks from her on hearing the avowal, and seeing this Gabrielle begs him to shoot her. This, to everyone's surprise, he does, and the curtain descends.

Apart from the last incident, which one could wish might be in happier vein, the little sketch is very interesting and well played by the three actors concerned, and each merited the hearty applause obtained.

On Thursday, at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Nina, the daughter of Mr. Henry Tozer, of Brookdene, Catford, the popular director of the Syndicate Halls, was married to Mr. Hubert Barham, of Sidcup.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. have certainly secured a star of the first magnitude in Miss Ada Reeve, who, on Monday next, commences a provincial tour of the Stoll halls at the Empire, Liverpool, and on her opening night will specially produce two new songs, published by the Arthur-street firm—to wit, "Oh, boys, I've seen you there!" a sparkling comedy chorus number, by John P. Harrington and John Neat, and "Foolish questions," by William Lee and A. Baldwin Sloane. Miss Reeve is also featuring two other Feldman numbers throughout her entire tour, viz., "Nobody knows—nobody cares" and "I wonder who's kissing her now?"

Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. have been the recipients of a letter from the famous chocolate-coloured coon, Mr. G. H. Elliott, anent the phenomenal success that has attended his rendering of that melodious and ear-haunting song, from the joint pens of Edgar, Lawrance, and Gifford, "Moon, moon, moon," at the Ardwick Empire, Manchester, this week, where the number has been loudly acclaimed. On his return to town, early in May, this song and his great number, "By the light of the silvery moon," another Feldman publication, will be his two metropolitan hostages to fortune.

Miss Clarice Mayne, at the Palace, Halifax, this week, is repeating her London success with the two Feldman numbers, "I'm longing for someone to love me" and "Georgie took me walking in the park," both by Ballard Macdonald and Jas. W. Tate, which are nightly received with enthusiastic delight.

Mr. Mark Sheridan expresses himself highly delighted with the success of his new comedy chorus number, "We're miles away from home," by Will Letters, on its "trial trip" at the Euston Palace, and will be featuring it in town next week. The publishers of this worthy successor to the other great Sheridan "winner," "I do like to be beside the seaside," Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., now have this sparkling song in the Press, and it is safe to augur much pantomime popularity for it.

For alfresco purposes this year Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. are offering an exceptionally fine budget of winners, and those troupes who have not yet had a selection of the Arthur-street firm's offerings in this department may be recommended to make speedy application for them. The outstanding tit-bit of the present season is indubitably that fascinating song "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," a number which should be even more ubiquitous at the seaside than it was in pantomime. Other really fine numbers for pierrot business are "Beautiful garden of roses," "By the light of the silvery moon," "Moon, moon, moon," "My sweet garden queen," "Pretty little girl from Nowhere," "Come by the drum in the big brass band," "Won't there ever be any wedding-bells for me?" "Do you miss me in the dear homeland?" "Ev'ry girl loves a military man," "They can't find Kelly," and that screamingly funny song of Jack Pleasant's, "Fetch John Willie."

Messrs. Feldman and Co., being desirous of fittingly advertising all seaside entertainers featuring the firm's songs during the present season, earnestly request all troupes singing the Feldman songs to advise the firm as speedily as possible of all numbers being used, together with the names of the individual singers who are rendering them. Troupes who have not yet started their seasons will be well advised to let Feldman's know what songs of theirs they purpose using.

In consequence of the multitudinous and ever-increasing inquiries that daily reach Messrs. Feldman and Co. anent the popular "Kerry Mills Barn Dance," special orchestrations for both full orchestra and military bands are now ready, and will be supplied to bandmasters making application for same to the Arthur-street firm. This is undoubtedly one of the greatest instrumental successes of the season.

Miss Rose Elliott, who was one of the earliest singers of the famous Feldman publication "Somewhere" in this country, will shortly exploit the new Chas. K. Harris ballad, "I'm longing for one sight of you," published by the same firm, when she opens at the Canterbury in a fortnight's time. She also purposes featuring several other songs published by the same firm, which she now has in study.

That popular comedian Mr. Jack Smiles continues to win success along the line with that quaint song "Fish Sauce," by Collins and Davis, and at the Empire, Belfast, it proved one of the biggest triumphs ever sung by this universal favourite. Messrs. Feldman and Co. have just issued this song in their popular "Sixpenny Edition," with two very effective presentments of the genial "Jack" and his co-singer, Mr. Chas. H. Whittle.

The verdict of the London Press is that "On the sands," Miss Madge Temple's new song (Francis, Day, and Hunter) will be one of the best numbers of the season. On Tuesday morning, the Daily Mail, Standard, Evening Standard, Daily Express, Morning Leader, and all the evening journals spoke of its production at the London Pavilion in eulogistic terms. The authors are Darewski and Findon.

The originality of the song "Queen of Old Samara" was the cause of a surfit of geographical songs being written, with more or less success; but J. F. Lambe, the author-composer of the above song, has, in conjunction with Alf. J. Lawrence, gone one better in their latest, entitled "The lily of Zamora." This charming number will be heard at nearly every seaside resort this coming season.

Miss Elsie Hulbert and her singing and dancing girls are one of the successes at the Surrey this week. The troupe of pretty girls first appear in charming Dutch costumes, and their song and sabot dance receive a well-deserved encore. Miss Elsie's ballad, "Someone is longing for you," follows, and the chorus is taken up by the audience. The scena concludes with a lightning clog-dance. The entire scena was specially written for Miss Hulbert by J. F. Lambe.

J. F. Lambe and Alf. J. Lawrence have supplied Miss Mina Greene with a new number, entitled "I must go to Colombo to you," being a sequel to Mr. Lambe's popular song "Won't you come to Madeira?" Miss Greene will feature the song next week, and on the Gibbons tour.

An important engagement at the Hackney Empire next week is that of Miss Anna Chandler, the new American comedienne, who made such a success at both the London Hippodrome and Coliseum. Anna Chandler's performance is an amusing burlesque of a Yankee comedienne, while her style is the happy medium between refined comedy and farce. In a selection from her répertoire Miss Chandler gives an idea of how some Americans would sing a coon song, then a clever representation of a baritone in distress. Anon she sings "The Yiddisher rag," which is a broken time melody, with plenty of "go" and swing in it, and invites you to join in. Her songs are all full of fun. In a word, Anna Chandler is distinctly refreshing.

RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

Mock Fire at Clapton.
A FALSE alarm of fire was given, by way of experiment, last week at the roller skating rink at Lower Clapton. The public were warned by large bills that they could have "all the excitement of fire without danger" in order to prove the excellent arrangements that were made for their safety. Punctually at 9.35, when the rink was crowded with skaters, the alarum bells sounded, and the notice on the electric sign read, "Clear the floor." Everyone entered into the spirit of the thing. Very valiantly the young men took possession of the ladies they cherished, and drew them pluckily to the emergency exits. After the "fire" had been extinguished the lights were turned on, and the couples rinked until closing time, talking of the exciting and hazardous time they had experienced.

Skating for the F.A.F.
SKATERS had an opportunity last Friday night of assisting the Fresh Air Fund, thanks to the kindness of the proprietor of the Great Hampstead Roller Skating Palace, who devoted the entire admission money to the fund. The "gala night" attracted a large attendance of skaters, who divided their attention between Mr. J. E. Rendle's amusing spectacle, "The Gorilla Hunt," and the rink.

Holland Park Rink.
IN circumstances somewhat similar to those which curtailed the rinking season at Olympia, Holland Park will shortly be obliged to suspend its operations as a fashionable skating-rink in order to fulfil its long-ago-contracted obligation to afford a home for the "Fair of Fashions" next month. Holland Park has been well able to hold its own among its compeers, and possibly both its management and its patrons feel some regret at the enforced closure. After the passing of the "Fair of Fashions," however, and other functions for which the building has been engaged, opportunity will be taken to make elaborate preparations of an early commencement of next season's campaign.

Championship Skating at Maida Vale.
THE Maida Vale Skating Rink had a record attendance last Monday evening to witness the one-mile professional championship of Great Britain. There were sixteen competitors, including C. J. Wilson (holder) and S. Greenall, the mile and a half ice professional champion. The race was divded into four heats, the winners of the heats—H. A. Bear, W. N. Curtis, jun., C. J Wilson, and S. Greenall—competing in the final. Bear and Wilson outclassed the other competitors, and soon drew out fifty yards in the lead. Wilson fell in the last lap, and lodged an objection against Bear for fouling. Both competitors were called before the judges, the result being that Bear was disqualified.

Second Day Results.
ON Tuesday evening the one mile professional championship, which was declared void on Monday, was decided, with the following result:—C. J. Wilson (holder), 1; W. N. Curtis, jun., 2; S. Greenall, 3; Hal Berte, 4. Won by ten yards; six yards between second and third. Time, 3min. 20sec. The Maida Vale Rink has offered £10 for a match of the best of three races between C. J. Wilson and H. A. Bear.

A Lancers Competition at Wandsworth.
ON Monday next, May 2, the Blackheath Lancer Party will meet the Wandsworth Lancer Party in a competition at the Central Hall Rink, Wandsworth.

Wimbledon Olympia.
THE petition of Allen and Co., for the compulsory winding up of Wimbledon Olympia, Ltd., again came before Mr. Justice Swinfen Eady in the Companies Winding Up Court on Tuesday last. Counsel said the petitioners were judgment creditors for £127 and costs, and the company was also indebted to the petitioners for £1,355 1s. 11d., the architects having given their certificate for that amount since the petition was presented. The company was incorporated in July, 1909, with a capital of £10.000. His Lordship directed that a meeting of shareholders be convened for next Tuesday to consider if they could find the money, and whether they should take the matter out of the hands of the present directors. Counsel for the company undertook, on his lordship allowing the petition to stand over for a fortnight, not to go into voluntary liquidation in the meantime.

Rinking in Bradford.
THE Bradford rinks continue to do good business with the large number of patrons who have got the rinking habit fixed. At each—the Manningham Lane, the Coliseum, the Towers Hall, and the Hippodrome—the management is, by its careful attention to the comfort and convenience of every patron, not a little responsible for the assiduous patronage which is the reward of its painstaking efforts. Every rink now boasts a hockey team.

Jessie Darling at Bournemouth.

Gollywog Rink Mascots.
THE Derby Alexandra hockey team were at home to Loughborough on Saturday last, and a keen contest resulted in a win for the homesters by two goals to nil. Rather amusing were the mascots with which the Derby boys entered the fray. These took the shape of golliwogs, and were made by one of the team's most charming well-wishers.

Dover Wins at Hockey.
LARGE crowds continue to patronise each session at the Dover rink, and with the advent of a hockey club the exhilarating pastime has become increasingly popular. On Tuesday the hockey club played a match with the Duke of York Royal Military School Students. There was a very good attendance, excellent arrangement being made by the manager, Mr. Wilkinson, and his staff. The result was an overwhelming victory for Dover.

A Popular Dundee Manager.
SINCE Mr. Alfred Ross took over the reins of management the popularity of the Melrose Skating Rink has gone up by leaps and bounds. The rinkers are loud in their praise of Mr. Ross's tact and never-failing courtesy. The excellent band is a feature of this rink. At the Dundee Olympia Skating Palace business continues brisk. The display of pictures at the evening session has proved a popular innovation.

The Success of the Season.
"A GREAT night!" This was the universal verdict at Durham Olympia Rink on Wednesday, at the conclusion of a masquerade carnival and confetti battle. The patrons congratulated the manager (Mr. Vivian D'Alby) on what was well termed "the success of the season." The costumes and dresses were representative of all kinds of characters and objects, and the scene, with moonlight and rainbow effects, was most picturesque and charming. Handsome prizes were presented for the following:—"Genii of the Ring," "Halley's Comet," "Fernery," "Skeleton" advertising "Dolly Tint" and "Bass's," Lazy Lizzie, "Weary Willie," boy "Chanticleer," girl "Red Indian." After the judging the great Lanhol gave an excellent exhibition of trick and fancy skating. The evening concluded with a confetti battle, in which both skaters and spectators entered with gusto.

Aristocratic Glasgow Rinkers.

Clever Ipswich Roller Skater.
THE management of the Ipswich Empress Rink have every reason to be proud of Mr. Ridley Prentice, an Ipswich gentleman, who has won the coveted roller skating medal of the National Skating Association. The judging took place at Cambridge, Mr. W. Stanton, the British amateur figure skating champion and hon. secretary of the roller skating section of the N.S.A., being among the judges. Mr. Prentice had not seen the inside of a rink until he visited the Empress a few months ago, thus showing what may be accomplished in a short time by perseverance.

Monohan at Newport.
THERE was the ring of great appreciation in the applause which followed the performance of "the Great Monohan" at Snow-hill Rink, Newport, on Monday night. He had given a remarkable exhibition of trick and fancy skating, and the spectators were thoroughly pleased. Attired in tunic and knee-breeches of scarlet, spangled with silver, and wearing his medals, he did the spreadeagle backwards on the heels, describing the figure 8; then he did the kettle-drum step, beating out the tap and roll of the drum with his feet; next he skated on a barrel—his most difficult feat—balancing himself on the uncertain footing of four wheels, and propelling the barrel with the other foot. He gave graceful and clever illustrations of the variations of the two-step, which he took much more slowly than is customary at Newport. The rink was darkened, and sixteen lighted candles were set out on the floor at regular intervals of four rows of four. Monohan skated upon his toes in and out among the points of light, threading his way in all directions, and hardly causing a flame to flicker. In response to a recall which was not to be denied, he gave a display of figure-skating, and concluded with some remarkable performances on heels and toes.

Presentation at Reading.
A handsome travelling dressing-case and testimonial has been presented to Mr. Frank Pearce, the popular and greatly esteemed manager of the Reading Staking Rink. The gift, which came as a surprise to the recipient, was subscribed for by habitués of the rink in recognition of his courtesy to and kindly consideration for the comfort and pleasure of the patrons.

New Reading Rink.
MAY 2 is the date fixed for the opening of the Reading Central Roller Skating Rink in Weststreet. The premises are now nearing completion. It will be well and comfortably fitted and appointed, and its accessible situation will doubtless attract a large number of skaters.

Round the Rhondda Rinks.
RINKING hockey has become quite a craze in Rhondda for ladies as well as gentlemen. A ladies' team has been formed, and will shortly be having matches and issuing challenges to all comers. The secretary pro tem is Miss Windeatt, a very energetic young lady. The gentlemen's hockey club, of Porth, visited Pentre Rink on Thursday last, and defeated Treorchy by three goals to two. Fixtures have been arranged with Mountain Ash and Weston-super-Mare.

Salisbury Carnival.
A FANCY-DRESS carnival was held at the Victoria Rink, Salisbury, on Friday last, and proved a great success. The various attractions included a burlesque hockey match, which was highly amusing, battle of confetti, musical chairs, gentlemen's hat-trimming competition, grand march past, and an exhibition was given by Mr. R. Frith, who won the cup and medal for the championship of Salisbury (amateurs). On Saturday last the season was brought to a close, when a hockey match was played between Salisbury and Trowbridge. A fast and exciting game was played, the home team winning by five to nil. The rink will reopen again immediately after the summer vacation.

At the Southampton Rinks.
ROLLER-SKATING carnivals are all the rage at Southampton just now, the last three Wednesdays having witnessed successful scenes at the Coliseum, Royal Pier, and Shirley skating rinks. The children's carnival at the Pier was a brilliant success, and handsome prizes were awarded. On Wednesday evening the costumes at the Shirley rink were pretty and artistic, and great praise is due to Mr. Geo. Leo. Lloyd, the manager, for the excellent arrangements. On Wednesday, May 11, another carnival is announced at the Coliseum.

Stoke's New Manager.
THERE are few rink-managers who can boast of such an all-round experience in their business as in the case of Mr. Fred S. Hockenhull, the esteemed manager of the Stoke Rink. Born in Yorkshire, he was educated at a well-known English college, and after completing his scholastic work, went to reside in Manchester. Here Mr. Hockenhull became a premium apprentice for four years to a big firm of architects and surveyors practising in that city. It was while living in Cottonopolis that Mr. Hockenhull first attempted roller-skating, and later he entered the profession at the White City Rink. Very shortly after his appointment Mr. Hockenhull received an offer from the Stoke Rink, and it was on Sept. 26 of last year that he first came to the district. In February last he was appointed floor-manager of the Stoke Rink. On the occasion of the visits to the Stoke Rink of the Grand Duke Michael of Russia and his family, Mr. Hockenhull was requisitioned to instruct the distinguished patrons, and on their leaving he was the recipient of a testimonial and substantial present for services rendered. Early in this month Mr. Hockenhull was appointed to the position of manager of the Stoke Rink. The confidence which the directors of the rink have in Mr. Hockenhull speaks for itself.

Holmeside Rink.
THE Holmeside Rink, Sunderland, has been reopened. The interior of the rink has been painted in a scheme of green and white, the bandstand has been moved to the middle of the skating surface, so that the music will be better distributed over the floor. The military band will be under the bâton of Mr. Fred Lucas, and during the interval, at 8.30, that accomplished musician and his sister, Miss Lucas, will give violin and piano recitals in the café at the rink edge. The rink is now called "Whitehall," and is under the management of Mr. Frank L. Twemlow.

Hockey Enthusiasts at Widnes.
RINKING is still booming in Widnes. The Borough and Albert Hall Rinks are the only two remaining out of five. Both possess first-class hockey teams, especially the former. Only the other day the Borough First obtained the highest single match score in the Liverpool League, beating Birkhenhead by nine goals to nothing. The scrorers were Randles, Price, and Peacock, three each. We understand the Borough First will compete in the English Amateur Rink Association competition (Northern Counties). The prize is a cup valued £20, with gold medals for the runners-up.

Yarmouth Whitsun Arrangements.
ARRANGEMENTS for Whitsuntide at the Yarmouth rink has been made by the manager (Mr. A. A. Cash) for a well-known member of the Aldwych (London) Skating Club to bring down a team to complete in an inter-team race with the Yarmouth club.

WATER LILY ENTERTAINERS.

The neighbourhood of Covent Garden has been aptly chosen for the blossoming forth of the Water Lilies, a troupe of entertainers who gave an afternoon recital at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Wednesday. Dramatic and vocal excerpts were included in the programme, figuring conspicuously in the former being Miss Freda Sharlotte, who appeared in three pieces, each of which had a liaison for its motive. Chief among them was Alfred Sutro's one-act play, The Correct Thing, in which Miss Sharlotte gave an eloquently expressive rendering of a cast-off mistress whose lover is about to marry. The varied emotions of the part were well displayed, the actress's expression of contempt being very fine. Miss Sharlotte had the assistance of Mr. George T. Greig, a young actor of good appearance and excellent delivery. He also took part in Miss Bertha N. Graham's little piece, A Lost Chance, acting a dramatic author well, and giving excellent support to Miss Sharlotte, who played an unscrupulous disturber of the domestic hearth realistically. Another of Miss Graham's pieces was a monologue entitled "From the Past," in which Miss Sharlotte recited quite cleverly the story of a lady who receives a visit from the woman who had robbed her of her husband. The reciter pictured the scene very vividly, and was thrice recalled by an audience small but appreciative.

"America's Black Duchess" also figured in the programme in the person of Mr. Clarence Ibbotson, who made up cleverly as a negress attired in "Gibson girl" fashion. In this way he imitated the lady's rendering of a ballad to 'cello accompaniment, and also pattered amusingly. Mr. Ibbotson was likewise responsible for an impersonation of a Frenchman singing a song with a striking chorus. Mr. Herbert Mackie displayed an effective baritone in "The Bandolero" and "Three for Jack"; Miss Lily Garwood, who possesses a sympathetic and tuneful mezzo-soprano, sang tastefully; and Miss Gladys Elsmere rendered several light-comedy lyrics in pleasing style. Mr. John Wilson officiated at the piano.

THE FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE.

The King and Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales have graciously intimated their intention of being present at the first Empire Concert to be held in connection with the Festival of Empire at the Crystal Palace. The Festival, the principal feature of which is the Pageant of London, commences on May 23, but Tuesday, the 24th, has been fixed for the official opening. The concert, which their Majesties and their Royal Highnesses will attend, is to be given by the Imperial Choir of 4,000 voices, under the direction of Dr. Charles Harriss. The vocalist of the day will be Madame Clara Butt, and her contributions, "The Enchantress" (Hatton) and "Land of Hope and Glory" (Elgar). The great orchestra will comprise 480 performers, and the conductors include Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Sir Hubert Parry, Bart., and Mr. Henry J. Wood.

The final scene in the Pageant of London takes the form of an Imperial masque, written by Mr. F. H. Markoe, with music by Mr. Frederick Corder, F.R.A.M. The growth of Empire is beautifully symbolised in the masque, and the contingents who are coming from oversea will assist.

Some very important personages will take part in the various scenes of the Pageant. Lord Howard de Walden has very kindly consented to take the part of the Black Prince in the scene entitled "The Age of Chivalry." In this scene will be given a representation of a famous tournament at which were present Queen Philippa and Edward, the Black Prince, freshly returned from his victories in France. The scene, "Mourning Triumph," being the receipt of the news of the capture of Quebec and the death of Wolfe and Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham, is to be taken by Woolwich, and Princess Loewenstein, daughter of the fourth Earl of Mexborough, will play the part of Lady Coventry.

"The Triumph of Conquest" depicts the return of King Henry from Agincourt, and the City of Westminster has undertaken the scene. Sir Simeon Stuart, Bart., will play King Henry, and the organisers of the scene are assured of an ideal principal. The news of Agincourt, history tells us, reached London before the King's return, and a solemn thanksgiving had been offered by the Mayor and Aldermen. In the Pageant of London the citizens will be seen going forth to meet their victorious monarch. Viscount Hill has agreed to play the part of his ancestor, Lord Hill, in the scene, "The End of the Great War," which Croydon is providing. Viscount Hill will wear the sword and cockade of his illustrious ancestor.

Following is a list of the boroughs and other organisations which are taking scenes: Greenwich, "Foundations of the City"; Camberwell, Bermondsey, and Southwark, "The Dawn of History" and "The Norman Conquest"; Kensington, Chelsea, and Fulham, "Spacious Days of Queen Elizabeth"; Lambeth, "New Discoveries"; Lewisham, "Merrie England"; Marylebone, Holborn, and St. Pancras, "The Age of Chivalry"; Paddington, "First Discoveries"; Poplar and Stepney, "Trade with India"; Wimbledon, Merton, Putney, Wandsworth, and Hammersmith, "The Passing of Mediævalism"; Shoreditch, Finsbury, Islington, "Civic Freedom"; Stoke Newington and Hackney, "Canterbury Pilgrims"; Sydenham, "Beginnings of Empire"; Westminster, "Triumph of Conquest"; Woolwich, "Mourning Triumph"; Blackheath, "The Dawn of New London"; Ealing, "Rise of the English Theatre"; Croydon, "End of the Great War." The scene "The Schools of London" is being taken by the schools of London, and "Social Upheaval" by the London hospitals.

"THE SNAKE'S KISS."

A Sketch, by Roland Bottomley, Produced at the Peckham Hippodrome on Monday, April 25.

Dr. Andrea Daintrey ..... MR. JACK FORTESCUE.
Lucy Daintrey ..... MISS LYDIA BUSH
Jack Trant ..... MR. HENRY AINSWORTH

The above exciting sketch, produced last Monday by Mr. Lewin Mannering's company, has for its leading motif a real live snake, round which the action revolves. It is a well-written playlet, and caused the good folks of Peckham many thrills during its brief traffic of the stage. It should have a successful career at the halls. On the rising of the curtain we are introduced to Doctor Daintrey, an Indian half-caste, and an expert in poisons, whose wife, Lucy, is carrying on an intrigue with his friend, Jack Trant. The doctor has bought a snake from India whose fangs are deadly poison, but it is chloroformed, and only dangerous when excited. Daintrey finds a letter from Trant to his wife, which proves her infidelity. He pretends to go away on a journey, but remains hiding in the garden, from whence he espies his wife in Trant's embrace. He takes the snake out from the box, manages to excite it, and puts it into an adjoining room. The false wife and her lover start to elope, but the husband has locked them in the drawing-room. The only means of exit is through the room where the snake lies hid. Trant enters, a loud groan is heard; the snake has seized him. The distracted wife follows him into the room, but meets with the same fate. She upbraids her husband for his action, and tries to stab him, but falls back dead; the snake's kiss has been the kiss of death. As the curtain falls the sinister doctor is seen bending exultantly over his wife's dead body, and waving the snake in the air.

Mr. Jack Fortescue, admirably made up, supplied an excellent character sketch of the mysterious inexorable Doctor Daintrey; Miss Lydia Bush acted with much intensity at the faithless wife; and Mr. Henry Ainsworth as Jack Trant made an impassioned lover.

Glowing Tribute to a Travelling Mummer.

The South Wales Weekly Argus has the following tribute, which we gladly reproduce, to the memory of the late John Noakes. Noakes was one of the old school of travelling mummers, his portable theatre was held in the most affectionate regard by the toilers in the out-of-the-way places of Wales and other parts of the United Kingdom. It is pleasant to have such excellent testimony to a genial showman's memory.

"There are various ways of achieving fame. 'Johnny Noakes' was not born great, nor was his greatness thrust upon him, but his fame was of a character which has earned for him a place in the minds and affections of perhaps even more people than to the hearts of whom greater men have found their way. He was merely an actor, 'a barnstormer,' or, as an old unrepealed statute would have it, a 'vagabond,' but he will, nevertheless, be kindly remembered by thousands of people, the winter of whose discontent he on many occasions turned to glorious summer. Not only in South Wales, but in other parts of the country, in towns where properly-appointed theatres were not in existence and where they were, his portable playhouse was welcomed with an enthusiasm which to-day seems hard to understand. What was the secret of this man's power? Was it the people's inherent love of play-acting or this humble actor's cheery personality which made for 'Johnny Noakes' such an abiding place in the esteem of the multitude? It was a strenuous life he led, and he encountered many difficulties, but, like Robert Louis Stevenson, who said he had done his fiddling so long under Vesuvius that he had almost forgotten to play, he was always possessed of that bright optimism which enabled him to think 'And still it's good fun.'

An Incorrigible Optimist.

"It was always 'good fun' with 'Johnny Noakes.' When Stevenson lay in a dark room at Bournemouth because his eyesight was endangered, and with his left arm in a sling to prevent hæmorrhage of the lungs, he sang the lines, which are found in his 'Child's Garden of Verses,' beginning:

"The world is so full of a number of things,
I am sure we should all be as happy as Kings.'

"And—worshippers at the shrine of 'R.L.S.' will forgive the comparison—'Johnny Noakes' was similarly an incorrigible optimist, and in his small way he spread sunshine around him. He could not read a word, it is stated, but he knew four hundred songs! Twenty years ago, in a small Worcestershire town, 'Johnny Noakes' and his company paid a visit which was to have been of a month's duration. He staged for six months, and even then did not outlive his welcome. There was a catch phrase in use for years afterwards. 'Noakes's Theatre is coming again,' one would say. 'When?' was the eager query, and 'By and by' came the triumphant answer. But he never came again. 'By and by' has been superseded by 'Wait and see' and, in the interval, many other catch phrases, while 'Johnny Noakes' has passed away. He was only a strolling player, but his motto was 'Don't worry,' and his memory will not fade while the generation lasts."

Darlaston Wakes.

For the amusement of the people at this wakes were Collins' No. 1 Wonderland show, the No. 1 motor-car set, and the Brooklyn cakewalk machine, Davies' three-abreast jumping horses, and Willett and Miller's helter-skelter tower. Amongst the minor amusements were houp-las, coker sheets, stalls, and novelties by Brennan, Walton, Birch, Humphrey Bros., Hodgkis, Swann, Brown, and other caterers.

Devizes Spring Fair.

The principal amusement caterers at this fair included the local firm—Jennings Bros.—with two sets of roundabouts and minor amusements; J. Coles, with switchback railway, and W. Cole, with helter-skelter tower. There were also a large contingent of pannum and fancy goods stalls, twenty houp-la frames, three sets of park swings, four football frames, and four coker sheets, supplied by caterers on this round.

"Time's Sweet Revenge."

About the year 1870 Birmingham, like many another great town in the provinces, came to the conclusion that fairs belonged to a past age. The City Fathers held that the people were beginning to need less and less recreation, and that any kindly compulsion to curtail the opportunities of cessation from toil would be a step in the right direction.

Time, however, has proved that from all points of view, economically, physically, and mentally, this was a wrong conclusion.

London, that banished its fairs about this time, thirty years later was making provision under the County Council to revive the banished fairs, and to find room for them at holiday times on the great open spaces at Hampstead Heath, Wormwood Scrubs, Blackheath, Wanstead Flats, and half a dozen other possible sites.

Manchester, in a similar manner, was ringed round at holiday times with half a dozen suburban fairs. The same was true of Liverpool, Leeds, and all the great centres of industry, stretching from Leicester to Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Birmingham, within the last twenty years, has looked with great kindliness upon the tremendously successful work and enterprise of Messrs. P. and J. Collins.

These well-known amusement caterers had by sheer force and enterprise, through good days and bad days, maintained the glories of Birmingham's ancient fairs at Whitsuntide and at Michaelmas.

Now we draw our readers' attention to "Time's Sweet Revenge," and we refer to it with the greatest possible satisfaction, as it affords us an opportunity of according the highest possible meed of praise to all parties concerned. It is no small matter for a great corporation to reverse decisions, and to go back upon ancient policy though that policy may have been dictated by mistaken considerations.

The Corporation of Birmingham has had the courage to recognise that the policy of trying to abolish the fair was a mistaken one, and that the time has now arrived not only to frankly admit the mistake, but as far as possible to restore to the people of Birmingham its ancient fairs under municipal control.

Mr. P. Collins has secured from the Corporation of Birmingham the lease of a fair ground which will, in its full accommodation and ample provision, be worthy of the city of Birmingham.

We congratulate all parties concerned, especially Messrs. Collins Brothers, whose long years of perseverance in maintaining the people's fair at Birmingham has been so handsomely recognised, and we confidently anticipate that Birmingham's great Onion Fair and the Whitsun week fixture will grow and prosper immensely, to the people's great delight and satisfaction.

The Guild Chaplain on Tour.

The Rev. T. Horne will hold two meetings next Sunday, May 1, at Ipswich Fair. The place of meeting will be Charles Thurston's Vaudeville and Cinema Theatre. The afternoon meeting will be at 3.30, and the Guild service in the evening at 8.15. It is hoped that all the showmen and amusement caterers on the Norfolk and Suffolk round within easy distance of Ipswich will make an effort to be present at the afternoon meeting, when important matters concerning the interests of the show business will be under consideration.

Pontypool Fair.

The principal amusements at this fair were provided by John Studt, who exhibited the cinematograph show and motor-car machine. T. Butlin, with juvenile roundabouts, houp-la circle, and throwing games; Wyman, with gem roundabout, shooting gallery, park swings, houp-la and coker sheets; C. Gage, with houp-la circle and watch-la frame; J. Scarrott's school of boxers, and Frank Gess with similar concerns; Lester's novelty booth; and Messrs. Smith, Gorman, Davies, and other caterers, with novelties, stalls, and throwing games.

Illness of Arthur Dashwood.

We feel sure that all showmen will be very sorry to hear that Mr. Arthur Dashwood, the showman's advance agent, is lying very ill with neuritis and pleurisy at his residence, Roseberry-road, Smethwick, Birmingham. After finishing the season with Bostock's Jungle, Glasgow, he contracted a severe cold, which has led to the above illness, but we are pleased to state that under the care of W. H. Motteram, physician, Smethwick, he is gradually returning to health and strength, and will be able to resume his duties in a week or two's time.

Death of Well-known London Showman.

One of the old school has passed away in the person of Frederic Freeman, who died at Wood Green on the 18th inst., aged seventy, after three weeks' illness and suffering from bronchitis. In our issue of the 2nd, dealing with the Alexandra Palace Fun Fair, we called attention to "that good old showman Freeman with his nearly fifty years' experience," then alive and hearty. He was almost one of the fixtures of the Palace, with his popular weighing chairs and other show paraphernalia. The present writer knew him when quite a young man in the early 'sixties acting as foreman for Mr. Justin at the Crystal Palace in connection with the camera obscura, chairs, and working models. Freeman left his old employer to start in business for himself in the show line first at the Albert Hall, then the Alexandra Palace, and various other places of note. He was a man whose appearance belied his good heart and generous nature, being always a friend to those in misfortune. Owing to an accident in his youth, one eye was affected, and so it remained a life-long disfigurement. He stood in the relationship of first cousin to the late Mr. Wood, of Working Models notoriety at the Crystal Palace; and those now showing by Freeman's niece, Miss Helena Greedus, at the Alexandra Palace, were the outcome of the family's genius. This show lady now would willingly find a purchaser for some of this stock in trade, which still attract the nimble pennies and are not to be despised on account of age. Poor Freeman was laid at rest on Tuesday, the 21st, in the New Southgate Cemetery, and the old familiar face at the corner of the Alexandra Palace Exhibition Hall will be missed by many a holiday frequenter.

Lord John Sanger's famous circus opened to mammoth audiences at Sheffield on Saturday, and the "big top" has been crowded each day at day and night performances.

Happy Event in Showland.

We heartily congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Fred Plinston on the birth of a son. Both the mother and child are doing well. Master Plinston made his appearance on Wednesday, April 27. The happy event occurred at the permanent address of the family—Bermondsey.

Warminster April Fair.

The entertainments here were chiefly provided by the local showmen—Jennings Bros. and Coles Bros. With these caterers were associated Messrs. Gratton, Haines, Shaw, and Smart, with the usual attendance of local stallholders. The attractions provided included steam roundabouts, gliesade tower, houp-la circles, bottle batteries, shooters, coker-shies, throwing games, and stalls.

Whitsun Fair at Walsall.

We draw our readers' attention to the advertisement of a fair at Walsall in our showmen columns this week. It is a corporation fair, and application for sites must be made to the lessee.

Bewdley Fair.

This annual pleasure fair was held on the 22nd inst. and two following days. Chipperfield's cinematograph theatre was the principal show. The side shows were: R. Chipperfield's Teddy bear jungle and Robins' peep-shows. The machines and minor novelties included T. Clarke's racing motor-cars, helter-skelter tower, and throwing games; F. Wilson's shooting saloon and houp-la circles; variety frames, toy and gingerbread stalls, by local and other caterers.

White City, Old Trafford.

The season opens on Saturday, May 7, with the band of the Royal Artillery, and the grounds will be full of side-shows and outdoor riding, &c., devices—scenic railway, water chute, &c.—which were very popular last summer.

The immense ballroom and skating pavilion have been well occupied by large crowds during the winter, and will continue throughout the summer.

The grounds, which have had some alterations made in the arrangement of the flower-beds, &c., are beginning to look very beautiful.

Letters await Messrs. Anderton and Rowland, G. Biddall, J. W. Chipperfield, and Chas. Thurston and Sons at The Era Office.

Messrs. Charles Taylor and Son will sell by auction at their sale rooms at 1, St. George's-road, Elephant and Castle, Southwark, S.E., on Thursday, May 5, at two o'clock p.m., precisely, a large selection of highest-class automatic machines made by the Mills Manufacturing Company of Chicago, equal to new, in perfect condition, comprising illustrated songs and phonographs, Siville fortune tellers, front-wind picture machines, athletic machines, Harper's electric piano, automatic soda fountains, &c.

Mr. Victor Travers, eccentric comedian, through an attack of tonsillitis, is out of the bill at the Kilburn Empire.

Mr. Henry Herne, Miss Ida Millais, and company, including Mr. Felix Pitt, are meeting with much success on the Gibbons' tour.

At the Winter Gardens, Morecambe, of which the proprietors are Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son, there are opportunities of hiring groundspace for shows. The position faces the Promenade and adjoins the Winter Gardens.

Mr. Fred Morgan will play a part in Mr. Arthur Williams's sketch, to be produced at the County Theatre, Kingston, on Monday next, and also goes to the Kennington Theatre again this year as heavy leading man in Mr. Robert Arthur's stock company.

The Dunning and Kahn Trio are finishing their seventeen weeks' engagement with Willie Frame, the famous Scotch comedian, who for thirty years has run his well-known company round Scotland, and whose annual visit is looked forward to by all his patrons.

A telegram from Danville, Illinois, states that on Wednesday evening a herd of nine elephants broke loose from a travelling circus which had pitched its camp in a field on the outskirts of the town, and stampeded madly through the streets, causing a wild panic amongst the inhabitants. Twenty people, it is reported, were injured by being knocked down and trodden upon by the animals.

The statutory meetings of the creditors and shareholders of the Crystal Palace Company were held on Thursday in the Throne Room of the Holborn Restaurant, Mr. H. M. Winearls (Official Receiver) presiding. A statement of affairs showing the position of the company as on February 18, 1909, was given.

Mr. G. M. Edwards inquired whether any steps had been taken to obtain the assistance of His Majesty the King to preserve the Palace, which was originally erected as a memorial to his illustrious father. The Chairman replied that he understood that point had not been overlooked by the gentlemen who had the reconstruction scheme in hand. Upon the motion of Mr. W. B. Keen (a director) the resolution by the creditors to leave the liquidation in the hands of the Official Receiver was unanimously confirmed.

"A Ranch Girl's Legacy."

"Living Canada."

An interesting cinematograph lecture on "Living Canada" was given at the Albert Hall, Barnstaple, last week, by Mr. A. Ward, of Toronto. The Mayor of Barnstaple was present, accompanied by his son. Mr. Ward dealt with the subject in a very pleasant and entertaining manner. He is a very effective lecturer. Mr. Ward has only recently returned from the Dominion. Some of the "living pictures" shown were:—Embarkation of Passengers at Liverpool, and Sailing of the Canadian Pacific R.M.S. Empress of Ireland; With the Canadian Settlers; John Bull's Breadbasket; Ploughing by Oxen, Horses, and steam, 350 miles of Furrow per day; Reaping a 600-acre Wheat Field; Thrashing 3,000 Bushels of Grain per day; The Settler in Canada: First Year, Second Year.

Photographic Materials for Siam.

Moving pictures were introduced to the Bangkok public about five years ago, becoming at once very popular, and at present they form the most-sought-for amusement of all classes in Siam. Two new places have recently been opened, making in all five cinematographs in Bangkok, namely, Krung Thep, Ratana, The New Japanese, Siam Papayon, and Bangrak. Most of the films in use are of French make. An increased demand for photographic materials also may be expected in the near future, as the Siamese are very fond of pictures, and the country affords a fine field for the amateur photographer. Some of the Royal family are expert amateur photographers, and have done much to encourage the art in Siam.

The interest taken in the rubber boom led to a great deal of excitement in Throgmorton-street one day last week, when a cinematograph operator appeared in a large van and commenced to make moving pictures of the members of the Stock Exchange at work. The "House" itself and the surrounding tea-shops and offices emptied hundreds into the street. While many faced the music voluntarily, some turned up their collars, pulled their hats over their eyes, covered their faces with handkerchiefs, and others promptly bolted. But altogether the result was a very interesting picture of Living London, which is being shown by the Picture Theatres under the management of the Electric Palaces at the Marble Arch, Lewisham, Brixton, and Thornton Heath.

Animated Art.

A very interesting interview with Mr. Robert Pearson has just appeared in the Bradford Weekly Telegraph. Mr. Pearson has been connected with picture and other entertainments all his life. "Lecturing for animated pictures is evidently a new thing for Bradford," he said. "Of course, I don't believe in talking the audience to death, but some of the stories told by the films are very complicated, and are so full of incident that some explanation is necessary. I'm not sure that people always realise that when they see an event reproduced by the cinematograph they are looking at it just as they would have done had they been there at the time. The large firms have operators placed all over the civilised world, ready to take pictures of anything that may happen in their district. So accurate are some of these pictures that I remember that on one occasion, while a certain great ship was being launched and many people were killed owing to the collapse of a platform at the docks, the whole catastrophe was faithfully reproduced."

The Picture Story.

Not only is the cinematograph useful for recording events, but it also has proved very popular on account of the "picture stories" it tells. "In order to make these films," said Mr. Pearson, "very clever actors and actresses are engaged. In fact, some of the finest geniuses of the day have been engaged, including Madame Sarah Bernhardt herself. The author of the production writes the plot and tells each member of the cast what he or she is to do. The piece is then acted, but not all at once, as the public sees it, but in sections. For instance, part of the play may be in natural surroundings, for which purpose a park, or even a public street, has to be selected, while sometimes it is inside a room, which is arranged by means of scenery on a stage. Of course, the difficulty is for the actors and actresses to convey their meaning without the use of words. For this purpose the French are better than the English, their lips, features, and mannerisms being more expressive."

Novel Property-finder.

A few days ago, at the Coliseum, one of the attendants picked up a first-class season ticket to Newport and a gold bangle a few minutes after the afternoon performance had begun. Reporting his finds to Mr. C. Dundas Slater, the popular manager of the Coliseum, the latter had an announcement flashed on the screen of the bioscope, with the result that the owners of both the bangle and the season ticket were enabled to claim their property before leaving the theatre.

Letters of allotment and regret have been posted in connection with the issue of Picture Theatres, Ltd. (Animated Pictures).

The Alexandra Palace Theatre has always an attractive display of animated pictures, and recently the exhibition, which is continuous, included a very fine film, entitled A Tour Through Scotland (Gaumont).

A beautiful Gaumont film has been shown during the week at the Kensington Picture Palace, entitled "Flowers and Fruits of the Riviera." This depicts the magnificent fruits and flowers grown and produced in a most lovely part of Southern France, and the anticipation of receiving them is sufficient to set one's mouth watering.

The Poly Cinematograph.

Over one and a half million people have visited Mr. Alfred West's cinematograph entertainment at the Polytechnic, Regent-street, during the past eleven years. This world-renowned institute the mother of technical schools, and the first to show moving pictures, is to be entirely rebuilt.

Electric Empire, New Cross Gate.

This popular place of amusement is now under the management of Mr. B. C. Helps, a smart business man. Some important changes will shortly be made at this establishment by Mr. Helps.

New Electric Theatre for Derby.

The promoters of the new electric theatre undertaking at Derby is the Midland Electric Theatre Co., Ltd. This company has been formed for the purpose of erecting picture palaces in Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Staffordshire, and Leicestershire, and they have already erected a theatre opposite the Great Central Station in Nottingham which has achieved a great success. The company has secured a site for the erection of the theatre in Derby at the bottom of Babington-lane—on the premises, in fact, until recently occupied by Andrews' motor garage. There have been difficulties in the way, but these have been overcome and the work is now in hand, and the theatre will be erected on the land adjoining the Municipal office in Babington-lane, and cover the old entrance to the motor garage and the premises until recently occupied by Mr. Rose. The building is to be completed in seven weeks' time. The front of the building will be of a handsome and effective character, and the interior scheme of decoration will be in white and blue; the best seats, or fauteuils, will be covered with blue velvet, and the carpets and curtains are to match. The contractor is Mr. Joseph Dickenson, of Ashbourne-road, and the architect Mr. Arthur Eaton, of St. James's-street, Derby.

"Better than Sydney Cooper."

Kinemacolor pictures will be presented at the new Derby theatre. Many people are asking "What is Kinemacolor?" We are all acquainted with living pictures, but not with the kinemacolor, or life-motion pictures, in all the hues and tints of nature. Hitherto the only method of showing coloured pictures on a cinematograph screen has been the laborious and costly process of hand-painting the ordinary black and white films, which only gives very imperfect results at best. By the Urban-Smith process a picture can be taken in the afternoon and exhibited in all its colours the same evening, and until quite recently this process has only been exhibited at three places in the world—the Palace Theatre, London, the Folies Bergéres at Paris, and Winter Gardens in Berlin. But the Midland Electric Theatre Company are now busy exploiting the results of the invention. The great improvement in the apparatus for projecting cinematograph pictures now enables the pictures to be exhibited with marvellous steadiness. A well-known Derby gentleman, who is also an art critic, was watching the Kinemacolor pictures at Nottingham a few days ago, and a picture appeared on the screen showing cows quietly resting in a field. The picture had apparently been taken on a day when there was practically no wind, and for the first few seconds, although the film was being reeled off at over over 2,000 pictures per minute, there was apparently not the slightest movement among the cattle, and the gentleman remarked to his friend "that it was exactly like a picture by Sydney Cooper," when suddenly one of the cows turned its head. This caused the gentleman to exclaim that it was very much better than a picture by Sydney Cooper, because it contained not only all the advantages and beauties of the picture, but that it was a living picture produced by the greatest of all artists, viz., Nature herself.

The County Electric Pavilion, Northampton, was opened on Wednesday evening, the 27th inst., when the elegance and tasteful decorations of this bijou place of entertainment were greatly admired by all the numerous visitors. A succession of pictures were shown during the evening, including The Thread of Destiny, Mexican Faith, Foolshead Learns to Skate, My Maid is too Slow, Isabella of Arragon, The Ticket-of-Leave Man, &c. Appropriate music was provided. A novelty here was the Vivaphone, an ingenious combination that synchronises the music with the action of the pictures. Having a number of these shows about the country enables the company to change their pictures twice weekly. The managing-director of the company, Mr. F. P. Aulton, M.I.E.E., was present to superintend the opening. Mr. Lyle Edwards is the resident-manager.

Linn and Darius produced last week at the Argyle Theatre, Birkenhead, a charming ballad, entitled If Dreams Were Only True, which proved a great success. This clever duo will shortly be seen at the London Pavilion.

Lilian Herlein, the beautiful American singer, will make her appearance at the Tivoli on Monday next. This lady has been starring the United States under the management of Lew Fields, whose prima donna she has been for some time. The artist is said to possess a fine voice and considerable personal attraction.

At a meeting held at the Leicester Town Hall recently in connection with a suggested Hospital matinée at the Leicester Palace in aid of the Children's Hospital and the Infirmary, it was stated that Mr. Oswald Stoll had not only granted the use of the Palace on May 26, but had also undertaken to provide artists, staff, and orchestra. Mr. Finch Hatton, in answer, said he was trying to get the printing done free. If he could do that he might possibly bring off the bill-posting free, in which case the entire receipts, without any deduction, could be handed over to the funds. It was agreed at the meeting to send a vote of thanks to Mr. Oswald Stoll for the use of the Palace.

John Fletcher, superintendent of the staff at the Canterbury, appeared before Mr. Horace Smith, at Westminster, to a summons for assaulting Francis Woodcock, of 15, Wear Bay-crescent, Folkestone, who visited the Canterbury with his lady housekeeper on the night of the 14th. Mr. Duerdin Dutton, for the management, said they would not offer an apology. Many of the audience protested against Woodcock's disgraceful language.

Mr. John Barons, who was with his wife in the stalls on the night in question, said the conduct of the prosecutor and the woman with him was disgraceful. They carried on in an awful manner, using very bad language. Several ladies in the stalls must have heard the language used. The summons was dismissed.

The late Johnny Noakes, the old Welsh comedian, whose death we recorded in our last issue, was very diminutive in stature, while his wife was tall and graceful. On one occasion Mr. and Mrs. Noakes, with their two children, were looking for lodgings. The landlady at one house where they applied scanned the quartette very closely, and eventually said, "Well, I can find room for Mrs. Noakes and the two children, but that other little boy—meaning Johnny—will have to go somewhere else."

Mr. Walter Melville sued the Rover Company, of London and Coventry, in the Official Referee's Court on Tuesday, to recover damages for breach of warranty with respect to a 16-20 horse-power motor-car purchased by him. The order was given in December, 1905, and the car was delivered in June, 1907. Only the chassis was purchased from the defendants, and £423 15s. was paid for it. The car was always going wrong and wanting repairs, and £52 was paid for repairs up to August. The defence to the action was that the car was frequently overloaded and driven in a negligent and unskilful manner over unsuitable roads, and that the working parts were unsuitably lubricated, and that the car had been badly adjusted. Mr. Melville having given evidence, the hearing was adjourned till Thursday, when judgment was given for the defendants, with costs, the Official Referee saying that he came to the conclusion that the car was reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was sold.

A Magnificent Production.

The Grand Theatre, in a word, this week, has a play of the highest refinement, and of the most enthralling interest; and lovers of the stage have an opportunity of a real intellectual treat. No expense seems to have been spared in completing the luxurious fittings of the various beautiful stage pictures; and only crowded houses can repay the generous management for their lavish profusion at this noted house of popular prices. Without exaggeration it may safely be affirmed that the play, as presented here, would do credit to any of the West End houses in the metropolis itself. The usual habitués of the theatre received the production with the highest approval and the heartiest applause on Monday, and the curtain had to be raised again and again for the recall of the principal actors.—Brighton Gazette.
At the Brighton Grand Theatre yesterday evening, a fine presentation of Mr. Vivian Edmonds' play, "The King's Romance," was given by Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds' powerful company. The parts are all in excellent hands, and their efforts were thoroughly appreciated by a large and enthusiastic audience, the curtain having to be repeatedly raised after each act in response to loud and prolonged applause. The piece was excellently staged, and the varied and pretty scenery and the splendid dresses and uniforms added greatly to the effectiveness of the acting.—Sussex Daily News.
An Easter egg that will remain fresh and wholesome for a considerable time.—Brighton Standard.
